POETRY.

UNBELIEF.

There is no unbelief;
Whoever plants a leaf beneath the sod,
And waits to see it push away the clod,
Trusts in God.

Whoever says, when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart! light breaketh by and by!"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees, 'neath winter's field of snow,
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says, "To-morrow," "The unknown,"
"The future," trusts that Power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eyelids close,
And he dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief;
And day by day, and night, unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny;
God knoweth why.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

IN HARD STRAITS.

"Nine o'clock, sor, an' the hot water, an' is it the rest of the bacon ye'd be after havin' for breakfast?"

"Will it not be too much, Bridget?"

"Sorra a bit, sor."

"Very well."

And with a half groan, I, Basil Hathaway, sprang out of bed and proceeded to array himself in unexceptional costume—trowsers, vest and frock coat. My only ones, alas! an accommodating relative some twenty doors off had taken charge of shabbier garments, one by one, kindly advancing sundry moneys thereon.

Three of us were in the same plight—and school fellows and old chums, now thrown together in manhood by the caprice of dame fortune, and fighting shoulder to shoulder the great battle of life in the great city.

As I dressed, one of the trio, Hal Trevor, came bounding by three at a time up the worm-eaten stairs.

He was fresh from the morning lecture at the hospital, and hungry as a hunter, I thought with a shudder. I heard his cheerful greeting of Jack Hornsey, hard at work since daylight on "Coke on Littleton."

"Well old bookworm, ready for breakfast? Where is the captain?"

"The captain!" How the old title, bestowed still in my three years' seniority, set me dreaming. I was aroused by the thuds of a poker hammering violently at the intervening wall.

"All right!" I shouted. "Ring for the bacon."

In a minute there were three of us gazing with rueful looks at the breakfast arrangement. A loaf of stale bread, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, and three tiny rashers, that either could put out of sight with ease.

"Is that all, Bridget?"

Every line of the girl's honest Irish face was eloquent with sympathy.

"Not a bit more, sor."

Hal laughed.

"Turn out your pockets, lads. There is my last coin."

And he produced an exceedingly shiny sixpence.

Jack, after much rummaging, showed a quantity of fluff and a brass button. I had three-pence half-penny in coppers.

"Odd man out for the bacon," quoth Hal.

"No, divide it between you," said I. "A man has been rash enough to invite me to dinner. Hand over the loaf."

Jack gave me one keen glance. I think he suspected the pious falsehood. Hal—bless the boy,—was quite unconscious, as happy as though we had not a care. The frugal meal had just been disposed of, when we heard a great puffing and blowing on the third floor. That had but one possible meaning—a creditor.

"Whose turn?" asked Jack, laconically.

It was an ancient arrangement now, that on the advent of a dun only one of us should receive him, the others being in the city—that is in the adjacent bedroom.

"Your own," cried Hal, as we decamped leaving the door ajar to watch the course of events. "I wish you joy, Jack; if is old Blunderson, snorting like a grampus, as usual."

Old Blunderson, was a general provision merchant, who had let himself be beguiled into supplying miscellanies until his bills really frightened me. He was the exception that proved that old rule, "Laugh and grow fat;" as crusty, ill-conditioned a wretch as ever read one particular portion of the Lord's prayer backward. A modern Falstaff, minus the wit, he always ascends slowly, resting on each stair.

We were safe for about five minutes. Jack employed them in preparing for his reception, and we watched proceedings with amused curiosity.

The first was to produce a huge tobacco pouch, taking from it about half an ounce of tobacco. From this he filled a long clay pipe—Jack's merschaum proceeded our clothes to the pawnbroker's—depositing the remainder carefully on the table.

"An alarming sacrifice," murmured Jack, shaking his head over it with a regretful sigh.

The next grasp was to grasp the fire-shovel and tongs.

"Weapons of offense," whispered Harry, "He meditates assault and battery—"

Hal stopped abruptly in sheer amazement. Jack was deliberately removing live coals from the fire to the shovel, and upon these he swept his cherished tobacco. Then he placed the shovel upon the bottom ledges of two chairs at the further end of the room, threw himself into the one nearest the fire, and complacently lighted his long clay.

Of course the room soon filled fast with smoke and a most pungent odor.

"Old Blunderson hates tobacco as a certain personage hates holy water!" grinned Hal.

"Bad policy, though, to irritate him," grumbled I.

By this time our enemy was in the doorway gasping for breath and shaking a great hairy fist at Jack by way of filling the interval till speech returned.

"You abandoned young profligate!"

Jack removed his pipe, nodded and quietly resumed it.

"Where are the other scamps?"

"One gone for the doctor; the other—" and a jerk of the speaker's thumb toward the door behind which we stood completed the sentence.

Old Blunderson made two unwieldy steps toward us.

"Better not," said Jack.

"Eh?"

"Typhoid fever—bad case—contagious," fibbed Jack between his puffs.

We saw old Blunderson's face turn a ghastly green with fear. Still he looked incredulous; we had played so many tricks before.

"Gammon," he gasped, at length.

Jack rose slowly, walked to the corner, and produced the shovel.

"Fumigating the room," said he. "Better have a pipe."

And old Blunderson fairly turned and fled with such celerity that he gained the next floor in seconds instead of minutes.

We were laughing at his discomfiture when Bridget's head appeared at the door.

"I thought I'd tell ye gentlemen, the mistress is just comin'. The saints perfect ye, for she has been a rampagin' like a haythen all the blessed mornin'!"

Our faces fell. Mrs. Callaghan, our worthy landlady, was not a foe so readily dislodged, and her powers of invective were simply unrivalled. Hal was the only one who could soothe her, and he came to the rescue.

"My turn," he said, with a look of comic disgust. "You fellows get into my room and clear out of the house as she is seated."

And we did, seeing Hal hand a chair (as we glided by) with the deepest of mock reverence, and an expression of extreme devotion on his handsome features. "Making violent love to the old beast!" as we would have elegantly expressed it.

It was evening of the same day—a dull November evening much in harmony with my thoughts, as I leaned against the door-post of our house, and recalled the good old times when life was a merry farce for us all.

I had no heart to work. All that day I had hawked my manuscripts from one publisher to another, vainly hoping, to get a loan upon them. My three pence halfpenny had been carefully invested at a dirty cook shop, and I was glad to think there must have been just enough cold meat to satisfy the boys at dinner and tea.

Presently I would go in and hunt for any fragments that remained, for I was desperately hungry.

Through the fog came a slender female figure disguised in a waterproof. She did not notice me until quite abreast, when the light fell upon her face. Then she gave a frightened glance. I saw two things, how pale and beautiful it was, and what a depth of misery lay in the startled eyes.

It was a low neighborhood separated by but a long alley from a fashionable west end street, a dangerous locality for a young girl at that hour. I crossed the road in order to accompany her unobserved, and had hardly done so ere I saw her brought up by some man, looming unsteadily in the mist.

"Come here, my pretty dear," said he.

She gave a faint scream and tried to slip by him but the drunken wretch caught her by the loose waterproof. In another second he measured his length on the pavement; but strange to say, the girl sank down also insensible, dropping something that looked like a jewel case.

My prostrate friend was relieving his feelings by a round volley of abuse. Not daring to await the arrival of a policeman, I caught up his victim and her case, and made a hasty retreat. At the foot of the dilapidated stairs I hesitated. Should I carry my fair burden into Mrs. Callaghan's little parlor? The sight of Bridget in flight pursued by shrill invective, decided the point.

"Bridget," said I, "this lady has fainted. Come and help me."

"Ah, sure, sor, poor dear!"

We carried the stranger to the common sitting room, and essayed to bring her round. Presently she opened her eyes, and began speaking incorrectly.

"Delirious," said I. It was a great relief to hear Hal's springing step. He gave a low whistle of astonishment as he entered, and felt the patient's pulse, while I gave a brief explanation.

"Feverish—very. She must be put to bed at once. Where does she live?"

"I have an idea. Search her pockets."

But the search was fruitless.

"Call a cab and I will take her to the hospital," suggested Harry.

I looked at the flushed face and the bright beautiful eyes, and my heart gave a great senseless throb of disapproval.

"No, we cannot turn her away. Fetch a nurse, Hal, and she shall have my room. You will take me in for a night or two?"

"Of course old man," and Hal flew off. Then I thought of our landlady.

"Bridget," said I, "how about Mrs. Callaghan?"

"I am the mistress, sor! Sure I'll tell her you've got the faver, an' a divil a bit will she come nigh ye."

One more difficulty remained, and that the greatest—the money problem. Well, my coat and vest must go.

So for three days I flitted about the apartment in an old tattered dressing gown, being supposed to be down with fever; meanwhile the real patient had careful attention and strengthening nourishment.

The third day, a notable event happened. A high class monthly sent me a guinea for contribution, and requested a similar one. I worked cheerfully after that till the crisis came, and the nurse gleefully reported that the young lady was conscious and asked for her father.

"May I see her?" said I eagerly.

"Dear, dear, no sir. The excitement would throw her back. Besides she must not talk. Her father is Mr. Bullion, of ——street."

Bullion, the great foreign banker. What brought his daughter, unattended, into this vile street? Time would explain, perhaps. Meanwhile Jack put on his hat and departed in quest of the great man. In an hour he was with us, his usual imposing air of magisterial demeanor lost in the excitement of the moment. He shook me warmly by the hand.

"Your friend has explained all, Mr. Hathaway. I am deeply grateful to you. Where is my child?"

The most renowned physician in town was quickly summoned, but in vain. Mr. Bullion begged him to devise some means to remove his daughter. At present she must not leave her bed. In a few days, perhaps with returning strength, she might lie for two or three hours on the sofa in our sitting room. Further change was imperatively forbidden.

So Mr. Bullion, with many apologies, begged that some of his daughter's favorite pictures and a few chairs, etc., from her boudoir might be brought; and we could not refuse. A few hours transformed our beachelor den into kind of a fairy palace.

Mr. Bullion was naturally a constant visitor, and I had to receive him in the tattered dressing gown. Twice he found me waiting with manuscripts littered around.

"You are an author," he queried with a smile.

"A would-be one."

"Pray do not desist from writing on my account. May I amuse myself for a time with your papers?"

He borrowed a bulky one on leaving to submit it, he said, to a publisher he knew. Next day I received a letter from a well known firm, offering £50 for the copyright and an additional £50 if a second edition were called for. In my youth and inexperience it did not occur to me for months that the money came from the banker's pocket.

Of course I eagerly assented, and took my coat and vest out of pawn—not one day to soon, for Miss Bullion was pronounced convalescent, and that afternoon her father's strong arms carried her from one room to another.

I lived in Fairy land for a week till our guests departed. She explained the visit to our obscure streets—it was to pawn jewelry for her brother's benefit, a wild lad, whose excesses had driven him from home, and, who had recently been writing her letter after letter, hinting at frightful consequences, if she could not furnish him with money.

"Mr. Hathaway," she said, "will you be my friend, and try to reclaim him?"

She put a transparent little hand in mine as she spoke, and I promised. Her "friend"—I would have promised her anything for such a title.

Then an eventful conversation took place between me and the banker.

"You have abandoned the idea of becoming a barrister, Mr. Hathaway; and the profession of an author is a precarious one. Unite it with another pursuit. You are a good linguist, and I badly need a foreign correspondent. The hours and duties will be light enough; I will take good care you have no cause to regret it."

I thought of "my friend" and assented.

The firm is Bullion & Hathaway now, the junior partner having married the senior's daughter. John Hornsey is their lawyer, a man much respected in the profession. Hal Trevor is just beginning to make a stir as a fashionable physician.

MEANNESS.

Some cold-blooded men act on the short sight maxim that "Business knows neither friendship nor gratitude."

Years ago, the coachman of William Gray, an eminent Boston merchant, gave up driving horses for shaving notes. Mr. Gray loaned him a small sum, and, being shrewd, the fellow made a little money. Moving to New York, he became a broker, and got bravely on.

One day he was at a dinner party, where a rich planter from Georgia was a guest. The conversation turned on methods of investing money. The ex-coachman gave his views, and added:

"If I had $5,000 I could invest it to-morrow in a way that would bring me double the sum inside of a year."

"What security will you give me, if I lend you that sum?" asked the planter.

"The word of an honest man," replied the broker.

"You shall have the money on that security to-morrow," said the planter.

The broker doubled within the twelve months the five thousand dollars so generously loaned him by the noble planter, and returned it with legal interest; and in the course of years he became a leading banker in Wall street.

The planter, in the meanwhile, had become so embarrassed that the impending foreclosure of a mortgage threatened to sweep away his whole estate.

In this emergency he thought of the man whom he had once befriended. He visited his banking room, recalled himself to the banker's memory, stated his circumstances and added:

"I need about the sum I once loaned you. If I do not obtain it, I am afraid I shall lose my whole estate."

"What security can you give me, sir?" asked the holder of money bags.

"The words of an honest man," replied the Georgian.

"That will not pass in Wall street," was the heartless reply, and he turned abruptly away.

The planter became a bankrupt. But mark the sequel.

The ex-coachman retired from business a millionaire. His money had made him rich, but it had not made him a man. One day a mania seized him. He fancied he was becoming poor, and that his destiny was to die in the almshouse. And while this delusion filled his mind he committed suicide.

"Though the mills of God grind slowly yet they grind exceeding fine."

THE DESTRUCTION OF GAME FOOD.

So long as America continued in the occupation of the aborigines, the order of Nature was apparently but little disturbed. The buffalo and deer, the wild fowl and turkeys, furnished abundant food to the savages without serious encroachment upon the fertility of Nature. In savage life there appears to be no wanton or unnecessary destruction of the natural means of support. It was reserved for the civilized white man to carry on a wanton war against the bounty of Nature, and to kill and destroy, without thought or study of those imperative laws under which Nature holds in trust the food supply of man. From the first settlement of the country, the process of eradicating and annihilating the useful animals, birds and fishes natural to the country has been carried on with an energy and success but too characteristic of the Saxon race. Large tracts of land have been entirely depopulated of their animals and useful birds. The buffalo on his native plains has become an object of rare curiosity. Deer are limited to the remoter mountain ranges or extensive tracts of barren woods. The wild fowl, which swarmed in New England during the first settlement of the country, and for a long time afterwards, have almost disappeared. The last wild turkey was killed in Massachusetts nearly half a century ago. There is probably no sportsman living who has killed a grouse on Martha's Vineyard, the last refuge in the northeast of that most valuable bird. Plover still migrate, though in diminished numbers from their breeding places in the far north to their Winter homes in the south, but they carefully avoid the north eastern coasts. No one in this generation has seen a wild swan alighting on the waters of Massachusetts. They once abounded there. Even the wild geese find no resting place here, but are expelled as if there were tramps and vagabonds.—William Minot, in International Review for August, 1880.

A CENSUS-TAKER.

A census-taker in Boston thus communicates to a daily paper some of his sad and one of his amusing experiences:

"George——does he live here?"

"Yes."

"What's his business?"

"He hasn't any."

"What's he doing?"

"He's away from home. He won't be back for four years," and tears gathered in the mother's eyes. At the next neighbor's the enumerator's suspicions were verified. George was serving out a four years' sentence in Concord prison.

Another lady said, "Yes, sir, my sister has been insane for thirty years—ever since she was a child; you can see her if you like." She was a handsome woman, tall and beautifully formed, with luxuriant brown tresses. In conversation she was interesting and refined, yet gave evidence that she relized her unfortunate condition.

An old man answered, "Alas! my daughter's mind is completely shattered. She has buried her two children within a week. We were all so fond of them!" and tears filled the old man's eyes as he thought of the dear little ones who had been taken from their midst.

A lady stood by while an Irish servant girl was questioned.

"Are you married or single?"

Bridget tried to avoid answering, but finally admitted that she was married, and while the mistress was absent hunting up another servant Bridget burst forth with:

"O you spalpeen! You made a holy show of me didn't you? The missus didn't know I was married. I'd like to knock your head off, so I would!"

A Scotch lady happened to be conversing with a Louisville Courier Journal reporter the other day when the subject of Dr. Tanner's fasting came up. She did not think the Tanner experiment wonderful. Then she went on to tell of a case of fasting in Scotland. The river Clyde one day broke through its bed, and the water rushed into the mines below. A number of miners were drowned, the suddenness of the flood cutting off all escape. One miner got into an old shaft that had been abandoned, and here he found himself safe from water. A worse fate, however, now stared him in the face. It was impossible for him to climb out, nor could he make himself heard. There seemed no possible means of communication with the world above. At the end of sixty days some slow going person of an inquiring turn took it into his head to examine the old shaft as he felt a little curiosity to know whether the waters of the Clyde had found their way there. Tying a piece of lead to a rope, this investigating person let it down into the shaft and he thought, after he had lowered it, that he could hear a human voice but the tones came faintly, and he might have misheard. After a while, he hauled up the lead, and was surprised to find a piece of clothing attached to it. The poor wretch was still alive, and had managed to make the sign. Assistance was immediately called, men were lowered into the shaft, and the starving man was brought to the surface nearly dead. He had been all the time without food, but he had been within reach of water, and had tenaciously clung to the hope that he would be rescued. The greatest interest was excited in the case. It was thought that the unfortunate man would loose his life, but with careful nursing he at length recovered to tell this remarkable story, and to be the wonder of his day.

Democratic Nominations.

FOR PRESIDENT,
Winfield Scott Hancock
OF PENNSYLVANIA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
William H. English,
OF INDIANA.

DEMOCRATIC ELECTORAL AND GUBERNATORIAL CONVENTION.

The Democratic voters of the State of New Jersey, and all others desirous of uniting with them in securing pure, economical and constitutional government by the election of Winfield S. Hancock and William H. English, are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by the several County and City Executive Committees, to elect Delegates to a State Convention, to be held at TAYLOR OPERA HOUSE, in the city of Trenton on for the purpose of placing in nomination nine electors for President and Vice President of the United States, and a Candidate for Governor of the State of New Jersey.

WEDNESDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER NEXT, AT 12 O'CLOCK, M.,

The basis of representation will be one Delegate for each one hundred Democratic votes, and one for each fraction of the same over fifty, cast at the last Gubernatorial election, and each Ward and Township shall be entitled to at least one Delegate.

If any Township has been created since the last Gubernatorial election, the representation from a County shall not be increased thereby, but the Delegates shall be apportioned among existing Townships by the County Committee according to the votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said entries to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS,
Secretary of the Senate.
CUMMINGS O. COOPER,
Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year;" after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and every second year thereafter;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be in two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

WATCHWORDS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

"The right of trial by Jury, the Habeas Corpus, the Liberty of the Press, the Freedom of Speech, the Natural Rights of Persons, and the Rights of Property must be preserved."—Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

"I will maintain that the entire freedom of thought and speech is consistent with the noblest aspirations of man and the happiest condition of his race."

"Power may destroy the forms but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword."—Letter of General Hancock, March 9, 1869.

"Military interference with elections is prohibited by law, and no soldiers will be allowed to appear at any polling places unless, as citizens of the State, they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting."—Order of General Hancock, December 18, 1867.

"Nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right.

"The great principles of American Liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and ever should be."—General Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

The corner stone of our system of free government is unconditional obedience to the Constitution, not as designing men would interpret its provisions for partisan purposes, but as the instrument itself reads for the general good.

Obey strictly the Constitution.

That is the very foundation of civil and religious liberty.

That is now and ever has been the precept and practice of Democracy.

And that, in an especial manner, has swayed the life long actions of General Hancock, and to-day makes him the most deserving candidate for President of the United States.

There cannot be a platform framed to equal such loyalty. It rises superior to every other issue, and forms the only sound political basis.

Steering closely by the Constitution, the Ship of State will never be wrecked or in any way damaged. It is deviation therefrom that drifts her amid dangerous rocks and shoals.

"Support the Constitution, as well in its limitations as in its authorities," was the advice of the patriot—statesman Madison.

Following that will surely lead to peace and prosperity.

On that line marches the Democratic party, with its banner gallantly upheld by

and
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

"The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen."—[Hancock's letter of acceptance.

From every section of our land comes the encouraging news that Hancock & English are gaining strength. While vast inroads are being made in the Republican ranks by desertions to the Hancock banner, not a single instance can be recorded by the Republican press where a prominent Democrat has gone over to the Garfield ranks.

The army is laboring under disadvantages and has been used unlawfully at times in the judgment of the people (in mine certainly), and we have lost a great deal of the kindly feeling which the community at large once felt for us. "It is time to stop and unload."—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

GARFIELD'S RECORD.

It is evident that the Republicans who placed General Garfield in nomination at Chicago would gladly substitute for him on their ticket a more eligible man, but it cannot now be done.

They hastily made him a candidate, forgetting there was such a terrible thing as recorded history.

The acts of a public man are the standard by which he must be justified or condemned. He may enjoy private opinions unmolested, but what he does in a public capacity becomes an open book for the people to read and criticise.

Mr. Garfield has been for years a Congressman and his record as such is public property.

It is not savory.

Credit Mobilier and De Golyer are not fragrant to honest nostrils.

They have before killed men politically, and they are rank enough to do so again.

That is truth and no lie.

THE RIGHT MAN.

No practised statesman ever more tersely summed up the true scope of our Government, its powers, checks and responsibilities, than General Hancock has in his admirable letter of acceptance.

He defines with clearness, precision and plain spoken eloquence the relationship between the States and the Union.

He unequivocally affirms the binding effect of the fruits of the war as embodied in the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments.

He declares for a ballot free and pure.

He lays down the only sound basis of reform in the civil service.

He pleads with patriotic feeling for the cultivation of national harmony.

He is the right man for President.

Vote for HANCOCK!

"A full vote, a free ballot and a fair count."—[Hancock to Sherman. December 28, 1876.

A CONCLAVE.

The leaders of the Garfield party were in session at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last week, trying to adopt measures to stay the tidal wave of Hancock and English.

It was a solemn gathering, much like unto a Coroner's inquest.

The big men of the party were there, including Garfield, Arthur, Orth, Bob Ingersoll and Pinchback.

The Southern carpet-baggers demanded money! MONEY!! MONEY!!!

Northern allies thought it would be throwing funds away to still their hungry cry.

Then they shouted MONEY louder than ever.

Bob Ingersoll made faces at Christianity, and Conger, of Michigan, in fury waved a crimson rag.

Finally it was resolved to afford Florida material aid, keep shady about candidates, and all along the line to

Shout blood and thunder,
From now until November.

The Boys in Blue outside cheered lustily for Hancock.

A SLATE FOR A GARFIELD CABINET.

Policy of the Administration: The old crowd must be vindicated, the appropriations must be looked after.

For Secretary of State—Schuyler Colfax of Indiana.

For Secretary of the Treasury—Alexander R. Shepherd of the District of Columbia.

For Secretary of War—James O. Patterson of New Hampshire.

For Secretary of the Navy—George M. Robeson of New Jersey.

For Postmaster-General—Eliza Pinkston of Louisiana.

For Secretary of the Interior—Richard C. Parsons of Ohio.

For Attorney-General—Luke P. Poland of Vermont.

HAD ENOUGH.

The Pittsburg Leader, a Garfield paper, concludes that it does not care to have any more of Hancock's correspondence published. With rare frankness it says:

The Commercial-Gazette is not wise. It calls for the publication of the whole of General Hancock's correspondence with General Sherman during the troublous winter of 1876-7. The rest of us Republican newspapers are entirely satisfied with the one that has been published. That is boomerang enough for the present. It is so manly and moderate and patriotic; aye, and so statesmanlike, that if we were an organ like the Gazette we would be secretly sorry that we ever "demanded" its publication. Nor would we be consumed with curiosity to know whether he wrote any more letters—till after the election.

The next Governor of New Jersey will be a Democrat.

New Jersey is good for a Democratic majority, anywhere from eight to twelve thousand.

The record of Winfield Scott Hancock is unimpeachable. The more it is examined the brighter it shines.

General Hancock's letters prove that he can handle the pen as well as the sword and both for the supremacy of the Constitution and the Union.

"The Republican Party," says the Tribune, "is about to take off its coat." Just so; and the Democratic party is about to lay on the hickory gad.—World.

If a Judge on the bench can, without sacrificing his integrity, accept a fee as counsel in a case which as a Judge he is to try, then General Garfield's acceptance of the De Golyer fee was honest, otherwise not.

Refusing to confirm the nomination of a Policeman solely because he is a Democrat is drawing political intolerance to a fine point. That constitutes the record of the present Common Council of Plainfield—5 to 3.

Republican stones flew at a colored speaker in Delaware the other day because he was a Democrat. The outrage has not been noticed in the Tribune office, and never will. They don't look on that side of the question, you know.

The State of Alabama at the recent election went overwhelmingly Democratic. Order and freedom prevailed at every poll. The colored voters of the South, like sensible people, are rallying around the protecting standard of Democracy.

DAVID DAVIS FOR HANCOCK.

THE EMINENT JURIST'S REASONS FOR SUPPORTING THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., August 4, 1880.

MY DEAR SIR: The training and habits of my life lead me to prefer civilians to soldiers for the great civil trusts. But as parties are organized, voters must choose between the candidates they represent or stand aloof, indifferent or neutral, which no good citizen ought to do at a Presidential election. I have no hesitation in supporting General Hancock, for the best of all reasons, to my mind, because his election will put an end to sectional strife and to sectional parties, and will revive a patriotic sentiment all over the land, which political leaders and factions for sinister ends have sought to prevent. There can be no permanent prosperity without pacification.

Great as were the achievements of General Hancock in war, his conduct in peace, when in command of Louisiana and Texas in 1867, was still greater, and justly commends him to the confidence of the country. That was a time when passion ruled in the public councils and military power was exerted to silence civil authority. The temptation was strong to sail with the rushing current, for an inflamed partisan opinion was to ready to condone excesses and to applaud oppression.

General Hancock's order No. 40, in assuming charge of the Fifth Military District, announces "the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be respected." These principles are the basis of free government, and the proclamation of them by General Hancock stands out in striking contrast with the actions of his superior, who soon after rebuked and drove him from that command for uttering sentiments worthy of all honor. The soldier, clothed with extraordinary power, voluntarily uncovered before the civil authority, sheathed his sword, testified his fidelity to the Constitution and set an example of obedience to law which will pass into history as his proudest claim to distinction.

The man who in the midst of the excitements of that stormy period was cool enough to see his duty clearly, and courageous enough to execute it firmly, may be well trusted in any crisis. His letter to General Sherman, recently brought to light, lifts General Hancock far above the past appreciation of his civil ability. It marks him as one of the wisest of his time, with a statesman's grasp of mind and with the integrity of a patriot whom no sense of expediency could swerve from his honest convictions.

Long and unchecked possession of power by any party leads to extravagance, corruption and loose practices. After twenty years of domination by the Republicans, chronic abuses have become fastened upon the public service like barnacles on the bottom of a stranded ship. There is no hope of reform by leaders who have created a system of maladministration and who are interested in perpetuating its evils. Nothing short of the sternest remedy gives any promise of effective reform, and the first step towards it is a change of rulers. The Government must be got out of the ruts in which it has too long been run. New blood must be infused into the management of public affairs before relief can be expected. The people demand a change, and being in earnest, they are likely to be gratified.

Very sincerely,
DAVID DAVIS.

James E. Harvey, Washington City.

If elected I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union, and see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.—[General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

The Garfield party must be hard pushed when it commissions Orth and Bob Ingersoll leaders.

In 1776 the name of Hancock was renowned for fearless championship of Liberty and so it is in 1880.

In nominating Hancock for President, the Democratic National Convention selected a standard bearer who combines the patriotism of Washington, the statesmanship of Jefferson, and the firmness of Jackson.

The Tribune wants Forney to reprint something he once said about Hancock. Why don't the Tribune set the example and reprint something it several times said of Garfield concerning his bribe-taking propensities?

Credit Mobilier expelled two or three men from their seats in Congress and caused Mr. Colfax to seek the shades of private life. It has not improved in reputation, and rears a thick wall between Mr. Garfield and the White House.

Geo. W. Northridge, of New York city, writes: "I am a wounded soldier of the late war, having lost my right eye. I wheel into line as a Voting Democrat. I am hereafter a Democrat. I always voted the Republican ticket. That party has disgraced itself. It is lost."

The letter written by General Hancock to General Sherman in 1877 has been published in full and redounds greatly to the credit of the Democratic candidate for President. Now let the communications made at that time by Sherman to Hancock be given to the public.

General Fremont advises the Republicans to advocate principles and say nothing about candidates. Very sensible advice that in view of such nominees as Garfield and Arthur. But the trouble is for them to find any principles to talk about since the bloody shirt faded out.

Although six weeks have elapsed since Gen. Garfield's nomination, yet not a single charge of Democratic origin has been made against him. All the ugly facts presented in relation to his public career were long ago filed in the archives of the Capitol by his political friends or brought to light in the columns of the Republican journals.

It has been gravely suspected for some time that certain rather extraordinary methods of bookkeeping prevailed in the Treasury Department, and Senator Davis, of West Virginia, is not the only person who thinks he has proof of very gross falsifications in the entries. It has been alleged that the books of that department do not balance by some $200,000,000. Let us have a change, and then the country can get at the facts.

In Harper's Weekly of March 15, 1873, Nast has a double-paged cartoon depicting Garfield and other Credit Mobilier "statesmen" arraigned under a placard reading as follows:

> "Disgraced in the eye of the public for owning Credit Mobilier stock, which was in fact and intent a fraud upon the Government. Also for deceit and evasion."

Many Democratic Club rooms throughout the country have this cartoon framed and placed in a conspicuous place on the wall.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

The Republicans are colonizing negroes in Indiana, with a hope to carry the State in October.

The colored Democrats of St. Louis met to hold a ratification meeting the other night, and were promptly dispersed by their Republican brethren, who swooped down upon them armed with smooth stones from the road.

Hon. John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, has been placed on the list of speakers to be called into service the present campaign, by the National Democratic Committee. Mr. Dunn is a capital speaker and able debater, and will do yeoman's service for the Democracy.

General Hancock finds that the number of visitors at Governor's Island is so large that he cannot spare time to receive them without seriously interfering with his official duties. Since the Cincinnati Convention his private correspondence has been very large, and as visitors call at all hours, often when it is impossible for him to receive them, he has decided to fix regular reception hours, and the following notice has accordingly been issued:

"In order that General Hancock, without interrupting his official duties, may be able to see the friends who desire to call on him, he will be at home from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays."

It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people.—[General Hancock.

THE GREAT FAIR OF 1883.

The gigantic task of getting up a World's Fair that shall eclipse in grandeur and in practical results all that have preceded it, may be said to be fairly under way. The prosperity of our country at present and the confidence of the nation in its continued stability, cannot but increase the interest the whole Union feels in the enterprise; while the experience gained at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition will enable the present commission to avoid such mistakes as were then made and improve on the methods followed at that time. In response to the call of Secretary Evarts, the commissioners from the States and Territories, and the original promulgators of the scheme from New York city, met in the Governor's Room at the latter place on last Tuesday, to take the necessary steps towards completing a permanent organization. Speeches were made by prominent capitalists, and a committee on Constitution and By-Laws was appointed with instructions to report the next day, which they did. On Wednesday by-laws were adopted, and a committee appointed to prepare an address to the American people and to the Governors of States and Territories, asking them to co-operate in the effort to make the exhibition successful. Gen. Wm. H. Sterling and Col. Edward Wright the commissioners from this State were present at both meetings, as well as alternate Apgar.

If called to the Presidency I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the Constitution, which in every article, section and amendment is the supreme law of the land.—[General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

The Hudson Grove Excursion.

The excursion of St. Mary's T. A. B. society which took place on last Tuesday, was all that could be desired in the way of a complete success. It is estimated that fully one thousand took part in the enjoyments furnished for the day by the temperance association, and all united in the unanimous verdict of "an immense time." The trip to the Grove, which was reached about one o'clock, was made without any mishap whatever, as it was impossible for any annoying occurrence to arise in view of the able management the excursion was under. Prof. Frazee opened the ball, as soon as the boats started, by leading his orchestra in their performance of a grand march in which all took part. Unlimited dancing followed, which was much favored by the young and lively, while older folks occupied their time ('pied their time) in inspecting the gloomy walls of the prisons, asylums and hospitals on Randall's and the Isle of Blackwell. At Hunter's Point a chance was given to view the burning lumber yards in that vicinity, and watch the engines at work in quenching the flames. About two hours were allowed for an experience of the Grove's attractions, and into such space of time was crowded more enjoyment than we possess the statistical ability to compute. Bathing, eating, flirting, gossiping, and a hundred other pastimes that are indulged in by charming youths and gushing maidens, gave to the minutes wings of fleetness and the time to return came too soon for many. Again did the dancing commence on the homeward journey, and feet that seemed to never tire, glided gracefully over the floors of the barge. The rain storm that began to fall was entirely unheeded, and in fact unremarked except by those who noticed the refreshing coolness it imparted to the close atmosphere. Without a moment of discomfort, or a single annoyance during the day, the party reached Plainfield again at about eight o'clock; and are now looking forward to the time when the event will be repeated. The Committee of arrangements were Messrs. Thomas Callahan, Peter Flynn, John Walsh, John Mortly, John Harding and James Brannan, all of whom deserve great credit for their successful efforts for the good of others.

Washington Rock News.

The recent arrivals at this place have tested the entire capacity of the Mountain House, which is now full to overflowing, and many applicants for board have been told that at present "meals only" can be given.

The Saturday evening Hop of last week was participated in by all the guests, while lively and complimentary toasts were given by Mr. Dawson of Elizabeth and Mr. Krause of New York, to the head of the house, and the general management of the affair, which was replied to by Mr. J. N. Staats on behalf of the "respondents." Prof. Frazee, as usual, furnished the music, introducing his popular "Chow chow" quadrilles and the Saratoga lanciers.

The number of very stylish carriages and turnouts that are driven there every pleasant day is constantly increasing, giving the place a very brilliant and gay appearance.

The moonlight nights approaching will doubtless be animated ones at the Washington Rock Mountain House, for anyone who has not seen the broad and extended panorama from the pavilion at that place, when the moon is full, has missed the enjoyment of a scene of rare and radiant beauty.

Republican Banner Raising.

The little life that remained in the Republican party, after the blow it received by the nomination of Garfield & Arthur, struggled for an instant and then totally went out upon the rejection of "Hancock the superb," who had never been defeated, to lead the Democratic forces to victory. In this town, that boasts of its Republican majority, not even a flag was raised at the close of the Chicago cat-fight; while upon the nomination of Hancock, his picture was immediately displayed in the window of this office, the stars and stripes he fought under for so many years floated in different parts of the city, a band marched through the streets playing national airs, and stirring speeches were delivered by prominent men to eagerly listening crowds of earnest supporters of honest government. The Republicans listened with elongated countenance, and expressed a belief that arose from their hopes, that the enthusiasm would soon die out. But it did not. It flourished and grew. Democratic headquarters were established long before the other party could muster enough converts together to fill the necessary offices. From all over the city independents flocked into the Hancock ranks, and Republican veterans joined with Democratic soldiers in their support of the General who fought on the battle-field instead of the electioneering stump. Immediately upon the nomination at Cincinnati a prominent artist was engaged and portraits for a banner were commenced; still no overflow of feeling was shown by the Republicans—a young men's club was started, but there remained no veterans for an organization and not even enough to make a showing of boys in blue. When it was found out that a grand Hancock and English mass meeting and banner raising was to take place, the taunts of Republicans of sense caused some of their party to feel ashamed; and on their own responsibility a few head-centres got together enough money to buy a ready-made banner and announced that it would be raised on last Saturday evening.

At half-past six on that evening, the sound of the cannon that was promised failed to be heard; and at seven o'clock no signs of any banner were to be observed around the post office where twenty or thirty boys had gathered to hear the Cornet Band. As the evening progressed, quite an assemblage of all ages and sexes, formed a double line along the curb, and were at last rewarded by the sight of two Republicans on the post office roof, one on a step ladder and three in the street. Some of the audience got tired and left after the hour advertised had passed, believing that there would be a postponement, but at last the banner was unfurled in silence excepting such greeting as it received from the band that played the "Skidmore Guards." A number of Democrats proposed three cheers, but there was no response until about five minutes afterwards when thirteen hats were raised and thirteen men joined the boys in a faint hurrah. This was the only enthusiasm displayed upon the occasion, and after a long delay it was decided to dress a wagon up in the flag that Hancock fought for and exhibit a bloody shirt waver to the dead-head multitude. The only speaker the party could procure was also ready-made, and sent out by the National Republican Committee to order. His name was Horne, of Texas, and he brought with him a ready-made speech such as are manufactured by the gross for the occasion. The speaker was compelled, having never seen the manuscript before, to read it by the light of a kerosene lamp placed on the low seat beside him, and the spectacle was a most amusing one. Stooping down to see the lines he would disappear entirely from the sight of every one, and then suddenly rise on his toes, shout out two words, and drop again. Our short hand reporter's notes read in this way: "This banner—which you—have unfurled—to-night is—woven by—the hand—of destiny—if you—go against—what God—has marked—out another—war will—be brought—upon us—the hungry—hordes of—the South—will overwhelm—us and—those who fired at—the flag—you protect—will rule—the country—rebel soldiers—will be—pensioned the—confederate—currency—will be—redeemed—" The Hon. Mr. Horne of Texas remained, at this point, so long out of sight that it was thought he had finished; and our representative left with a large part of the crowd who seemed to find a great deal to laugh at even in the face of the harrowing state of things that had just been presented to their view. The few who remained were favored with more nonsense of the same kind; and those, who hoped to hear something good of Garfield or bad of Hancock, were most entirely disappointed. This eleventh-hour farce was concluded by a marching around town of the band, and an adjournment of the Republican party for liquid refreshments. The cheering effects of the latter, however, had no cheering effect on the stomachs of the party; and besides the one solitary hurrah we referred to, no cheers were afterwards given. We are creditably informed that a cannon was fired, but its tone was so weak that it served no purpose, and was an ominous prophecy of the light vote that they will cast next November.

Plainfield's Young Democracy.

That the young men of Union County's Republican stronghold—Plainfield, are not unmindful of the important political issues of the day, was evidenced last Monday evening at the headquarters of the Democratic Association. Pursuant to notice given, some twenty-five young adherents to the Democratic faith and Hancock and English, met in the above mentioned quarters and formed a club with the name and title of "The Young Men's Democratic Club," electing the following named gentlemen as officers:

President.—Walter L. Hetfield.
1st V. President.—Solomon Flaig.
2nd V. President.—James O'Neil.
3rd V. President.—Joseph G. Miller.
Sec.—Louis M. Stover.
Treas.—Vincent L. Frazee.
Executive Committee.—James O'Neil, John Van Dyke, Adam Fritz, Louis M. Stover, S. C. Lilienstern.

Last Wednesday evening forty more names were added to the roll. The gentlemen selected as officers are all active in the cause which they espouse, and our older Democrats must be on the alert lest their organization will outnumber them in membership. Hancock & English are names which carry enthusiasm wherever they are mentioned, and Plainfield, a Republican stronghold though it is, must not always be put down on Republican books as for that party. It would be singular, now, would it not, if Plainfield went for Hancock & English? Nevertheless it would not surprise us.

Elopement of a Married Woman.

The citizens of the village of East Millstone are in a state of excitement over the elopement of Mrs. Lizzie Tunison, the wife of William Tunison, and the daughter of a prominent citizen of Trenton. She went off with a young man, a butcher, named Garrate E. Bowman. Bowman was a widower, and had one child, which he took with him. Mrs. Tunison deserted her two children, one four years and the other ten months old. She left on Thursday last, while her husband was away from home, leaving her children in the care of a little twelve year old girl. Tunison came home on Friday, and found his wife absent, she having taken her clothes with her. On Saturday her husband received a letter from her, telling him to kiss the baby, and that she had gone for good.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

A Fragrant Breath and Pearly Teeth

Are easily obtained by cleansing your teeth daily with that justly popular dentifrice, SOZODONT. Composed of rare antiseptic herbs, it imparts whiteness to the teeth, a delicious aroma to the breath, and preserves intact, from youth to old age, the teeth. Acidity of the stomach will destroy the strongest teeth unless its effects are counteracted with SOZODONT, and this pure tooth-wash protects the dental surfaces by removing every impurity that adheres to them. Ask your druggist for SOZODONT.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap2y1

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS!

"The Plainfield Democratic Association," hold their regular meetings the 1st TUESDAY evening in each month. The rooms at headquarters, Front St., opposite the Post Office, are open every evening for all who favor the election of HANCOCK & ENGLISH, to visit.

JAS. E. MARTINE,
President.

Hancock Veteran Association.

The regular meetings of the Hancock Veteran Association of Plainfield, are held in the rooms of the Democratic Association every Wednesday evening. The rooms are open every evening for members and visitors.

MEETINGS of the Plainfield Saengerbund will be held only on Monday of each week for the next two months.

AFTER an extended illness, Mrs. Wm. M. Jennings of West Front street, died on Monday morning at the advanced age of 79 years.

AUGUST 31st, is the day on which the Crescent Avenue Sunday School and its friends will make their annual excursion to Long Branch and Ocean Grove. Don't forget it!

THE Lincoln Campaign Club transacted "all the business of importance" it could find, during the two first meetings. It didn't hold any meeting last week in consequence.

THE retired Washington Fire Insurance Co., of this city, is paying its first dividend of 50 per cent. to its stockholders. The remaining amount prior to a final closing up of affairs, is promised in a short time.

A PARTY from Bloomsbury traded a horse and wagon to a party at Plainfield, and was to deliver the horse on Wednesday, but when between Potterstown and White House, the horse dropped dead in the road.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

MR. Patterson Boice of North Plainfield, died on Friday of last week after a long illness. The deceased was the father of Mr. L. B. Boice, and his death is deeply regretted by a large number of personal friends and family acquaintances.

THE Lehigh Valley Railroad has been indulging in a collision at its New Market depot. On last Saturday afternoon a special ran into a construction train, totally wrecking the car of the latter and seriously damaging the engine of the former.

THE President of one of the colored Republican clubs of this city stated, at a meeting of the organization on Thursday evening of last week, that its object was to show that there are some Republicans that can't be bought for a dollar or a bottle of whisky.

PASSENGERS on the 5:15 train from New York were switched off for Long Branch, at Elizabethport, on Thursday afternoon of last week. Visions of board at $5 a day arose before them for a moment, but they were subsequently dispelled by the train being switched back.

A HANDSOME Hancock & English flag staff graces the top of County Clerk Vosseller's barn on Sycamore street, it being placed in position last week. The stars and stripes floated from it on Wednesday in honor of the banner raising and mass meeting by the friends of Hancock and English.

MANY will regret to learn of the death at 70 years of age, of Mrs. Margaret Gross, widow of the late Edward Gross of this city, mother-in-law of Mr. James Connoly. The deceased has long been a sufferer from heart trouble, which terminated fatally on Thursday, Aug. 5th, at 9:30 p. m.

THE Roselle Mirror is the latest effort in the journalist line. It is edited by "We, Us & Co.," but distinctly desires its patrons to understand "that this paper is not to be a second 'Dunellen Rock.'" The Mirror is a small four page sheet, neatly printed and contains local news of interest to Rosellers.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund have reconsidered their intention to repeat their out-door concert and festival this Summer. It was discovered that the dancing platform and such other property as was to be left in the grove, gradually disappeared; so it was considered best to dispose of the material while any remained.

PLAINFIELDERS, by taking the 8:31 train from this city on Thursday morning, August 26, may join the excursion of Atlas Lodge F. & A. M., of Westfield, to Long Branch and Ocean Grove. Leaving Westfield at 8:45 a. m. a long day of enjoyment may be experienced; returning the excursion will leave Ocean Grove at 5:30 p. m. Tickets, $1.00.

THE congregation of the Trinity Reformed Church were favored, on last Sunday morning and evening, with two able discourses by the Rev. Geo. M. S. Blauvelt of Tappantown, N. Y. Mr. Frederick Fleider, the blind organist of Dr. Crosby's Church of New York City, furnished the musical portion of the services in a masterly manner.

AN excursion in aid of the building fund of the Heavenly Rest Mission Chapel of Evona, will take place on Friday, August 27th, to Long Branch and Ocean Grove. The train will leave Dunellen 8:25, Evona 8:28, Plainfield 8:32 and Netherwood at 8:35. Tickets, one dollar. Christain organizations of this city will undoubtedly take advantage of the opportunity to advance the cause in their neighboring town.

THE Trinity Reformed Church are to be congratulated on the flattering success in every particular that resulted from their festival of last week. The lecture room was decorated with flags and flowers, while "Rebecca at the Well," the blossoms in the bower, the gypsies in their tent and the waiters at the tables, united in furnishing pleasures for appreciative palates. The receipts are estimated as being very encouraging.

THE report that has been lately circulated by the press of the State, to the effect that during the severe storm of Wednesday of last week the dam at Ocean Grove was again washed away, letting the lake into the ocean, is wholly untrue. The storm was undoubtedly very fierce, and the barriers received a terrible straining, but the dam was erected last year at great expense in a manner that enables it to withstand almost anything.

FOR several weeks past, dense smoke in the vicinity of the flagman's station on the high embankment of the Central railroad line, above Fanwood station, has attracted the attention of passers-by. We learn that the cause of the smoke is in consequence of a fire originating from a locomotive spark in the dry earth which resembles peat at that point. It is impossible to tell how deep down the fire has burned. The peculiar formation of earth extends downward to a depth of several feet.

JUDGE Lathrop has addressed a communication to such members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers as are in the employ of the C. R. R., of which the following is an extract:

> "There has been no discharge by reason of membership in the Brotherhood, and none is contemplated. All engineers in my employ as long as they discharge their duties faithfully will be treated alike."

The above assurance has been considered, by those who feel aggrieved, as a satisfactory adjustment of all differences.

CARS were run over Mr. David Boice's new coal siding for the first time yesterday morning, and that gentleman raised his flag in honor of the occasion.

THE agency for the Kewanee automatic windmill has been secured by Mr. L. E. Barkalow of this city, who may be addressed by those desirous of obtaining estimates and particulars relating to it.

MR. Edward Randolph, residing on Park avenue, placed upon our editorial table, on Wednesday, a branch of a crab-apple tree, containing over seventy-five apples, taken from a tree on his farm. The fruit is of the yellow variety.

A NUMBER of Republican papers are publishing "extracts from Bob Ingersoll's speeches telling why he cannot be a Democrat." His principal reason for being a Republican is because he believes there is no hell, for perjurers and bribe-takers.

SATURDAY is New Jersey's Salt Water day, and in consequence a large crowd of natives will flock to Boynton Beach. Special attractions have been provided at that place, including an exhibition by Prof. Paul Boyton, plenty to eat, and lots of dancing.

BY a resolution passed by the New Jersey State Dental Society at a meeting held at Long Branch, July 23d, 1880, it was requested that every member of the Society and those holding certificates of License to practice, should register at once with their respective County Clerks, as a recently enacted law requires.

THE premium list for the Second Annual Fair of the "Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association," is now ready. It is printed in neat pamphlet form. Copies may be obtained of the Secretary, Jas. S. Vosseller, Plainfield N. J. The Fair will be held near Plainfield. Sep. 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th.

THE Washington Association at Morristown has secured a valuable document to add to their collection, it being no less than a letter and autograph in the handwriting of General Washington. It was secured through Wm. A. Smith, Esq., and is a highly gratifying acquisition, as the association has never possessed a Washington autograph.

MESSRS. Geo. P. Rowell & Co., advertising agents of New York city, will please accept our thanks for a copy of their American Newspaper Directory for 1880, a large and handsomely printed and bound volume. It is a useful volume to advertisers, and probably contains as correct information as it is possible for the publishers to procure.

THE latest production in the way of a delicacy is ground snow-flake corn, an excellent summer diet for which no cooking is required. It is prepared to be eaten with milk, and if used in connection with oat meal improves it wonderfully. Martin Bros. keep it, and a package at thirteen cents will convince all of its delightful flavor, and nutritious qualities.

AMONG the many new and handsome residences being erected in our city at present, is that one of Mr. Job Male's, which is nearing completion on 1st street, Mr. Isaac Melbourn, contractor. Mr. M. has also just broken ground on Broadway, near the Crescent Avenue Church, for the erection of another beautiful dwelling house for Mr. Male. The same contractor is tearing down portions of and re-modelling Mr. Tyler's residence on Seventh street.

ON Wednesday Justice Nodyne gave his decision in the case of the Overseer of the Poor vs Lawrence Miner, against the plaintiff. The suit was brought on complaint of the defendant's wife accusing her husband of failing to support her, and the evidence adduced fully substantiated the charge. Craig Marsh, Esq., appeared for the city official and Corporation Counsel Suydam for the defendant. The decision will undoubtedly be reversed by a higher court.

A NUMBER of philantropic and generous hearted merchants of this city, are uniting in contributing a sum of money towards the defraying of the expenses of, a vacation trip that they propose for their faithful messenger, Mr. Agustus Franze. That gentleman has long acted for them in a most satisfactory manner, is always ready and willing to look after the interests of those who employ him, and undoubtedly all who have been served by him will seize the opportunity to show their appreciation. The list may be found at R. J. Shaw's pharmacy.

A SILVER-tongued orator of the colored Republican constituency, in a suit of black broad-cloth and driving a stylish turn-out, has been endeavoring to raise money from prominent politicians of the same party in this city. "Want to git up a rassification meeting wid culled speakers" is his desire, but it fails to meet with the financial support he thinks it deserves. Said one, "I'll attend and contribute afterwards if worthy." "Cuddent do it dot way, boss, no how. I'm de feller dat does the speaking; and I'm hot! dat's what I am. Got to see de cash first, though. I'm a 'Publican but I can't be hung up. No-sir-ree!"

WORKMEN are engaged, under the supervision of the Board of Freeholders, and workmanship of Mr. Warren Marsh, in building a culvert across Peace street, from the northwest corner of Second street to the mouth of the sewer on the opposite corner to allow the water to run off the street more freely after rains. We think it would be a still wiser plan and needed improvement to also build a culvert from the northeast corner of the street. After heavy rains the water lays in pools in the gutters of Peace street at that point, breeding malaria, and making the cellars of adjacent houses wet and unhealthy. Make a good job of it while you are at it, Messrs. Freeholders.

WHEN a few of the passengers on the 8:01 train last Friday had boarded the boat at Communipaw, it was cast off and moved out about three feet, the chains being stretched across the floating dock and the remaining passengers kept back. One of Plainfield's leading citizens, becoming exasperated, made a grand rush, but when nearly at the water's edge, the bell rang and the boat sailed slowly away from him. Checking his impetus he threw himself into an attitude of wild despair, which drew rounds of applause from those on the boat and the crowd in his rear. Were he not already such a successful lawyer we would guarantee him a good position as a tragic actor.

THE Jersey City Journal says that Justices of the Peace have no authority for issuing attachments against property to the amount of $200. The Small Cause act has been amended so as to give them jurisdiction to the amount of $200, but their power in attachment is derived only from the Attachment act. The Small cause act gives them no right to issue attachments. The enlargement of the prerogatives enjoyed by them under the Small Cause act does not enlarge their powers under the Attachment act. The Attachment act has never been amended so as to increase their jurisdiction in such cases, and until it is amended their jurisdiction remains at the old figure, $100.

THE Germans have organized an athletic Club for indoor exercise, and hold their meetings at Blatz Hotel on Somerset street every Tuesday and Friday evening. The association numbers already twenty-one members and possesses quite an assortment of apparatus. Grove Meeting.

At the Temperance Grove meeting last Sunday afternoon a large audience listened to the highly interesting address of Mr. Powell. The speaker next Sunday will be the Rev. Mr. Ketcham. Hour of meeting 4:15. All are invited.

A. O. H.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians No. 4 are requested to meet at their Hall on Friday evening next at 8 o'clock sharp. All are requested to be present, as business of importance will come before the meeting.

By order of the President.

Multum in Parvo.

The American News Company are publishing at 50 cents, Southworth's Life of General Hancock in a neat and readable form. It contains besides a concise biography, an introductory by Hon. Thos. F. Bayard, original contributions by prominent politicians, the celebrated "orders" as military governor, and an account of the nomination at Cincinnati.

Give Him the Contract.

A leader of one of the colored Garfield clubs of this city, offered to bet a young Democrat Five Dollars that the Democratic banner would not remain in position long even if it was put up. When "time" was called however, his collateral was not forthcoming. We suggest that he be given the contract, by the Reps, for carrying out his idea and assertion. The Lion is a very fierce animal when annoyed, but he can be tamed.

Anthony—Foster.

The marriage of Mr. Wm. Anthony to Miss Laura E. Foster, which was referred to in a previous issue of this paper, was consummated at the residence of the bride's parents, Newark, N. J., on Wednesday of last week. The Misses Jessie and Lizzie Smillie of this city, cousins of the bride, attended her as maids; while the brother of the happy man, Mr. Edward Anthony and Mr. Raymond D. Foster acted as groomsmen. The Rev. Dr. Ketcham of Plainfield assisted in the performance of the ceremony, and a large number of relatives and friends were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anthony will make an extended wedding trip, and subsequently reside in North Plainfield.

A Good Time, in a Good Cause.

The excursion up the Hudson to Alpine Grove, which we advertise to-day, will undoubtedly meet with a ready response in a financial way from those desiring to lend a helping hand in a good cause, and at the same time enjoy a day's pleasure. The trip is proposed for the benefit of Mr. Edward L. Meader, one of the oldest and most faithful of the C. R. R. conductors, whom a paralytic stroke has probably left a cripple for life; and is intended to be a tribute of the sympathy and generous emotions felt for him by brother officials and many friends. The train leaves Easton on Friday morning, the 20th inst., at 7:10; stopping at most of the stations between that place and Jersey City, as advertised. The fare for the entire trip from and to Plainfield is $1.25, and tickets may be procured at the C. R. R. ticket office.

Obituary—Mrs. E. H. Carhart.

News of the death of Mrs. Edmund H. Carhart, was received in this city on Monday last. So unexpected was the information that additional grief was carried with it; her extended circle of friends being full of joy at the prospect of recovery that the latest reports had led them to hope for. The lady was a daughter of Councilman Redfield, and for the past few months the wife of a member of the firm of Carhart, Whitford & Co., of New York city and the South. Since her marriage, consumption in its direst form has been an enemy against which her constitution could not hold its strength, and at times life has almost given up its struggle for supremacy. A trip to the Adirondacks seemed to benefit the invalid, but all hopes were dashed to the ground by the saddening news of her death at the hostelry of Paul Smith. The funeral services took place at White Plains, N. Y., yesterday afternoon at one o'clock.

At the Hotel Netherwood.

A Grand Concert will take place at Hotel Netherwood, on Friday evening, the 20th inst., in which Mrs. Florence Rice—Knox, the celebrated contralto, will appear and be assisted by Mr. Remeritz, baritone, Mr. Fritsch, tenor, Mr. Walter, pianist and several other well known artists. The concert will be given by this popular combination, not only to the guests of the Hotel, but to all lovers of music residing in our city and vicinity, and to all such as desire to be present, a rare treat is offered. The small admission fee of fifty cents will be charged to adults and twenty-five cents for children.

A complimentary testimonial will be tendered by the guests of the Hotel Netherwood on Tuesday evening, August 17th, to Mr. James S. Burdett, a young gentleman of the most charming versatile genius. In addition to selections by Mr. Burdett, there will be a delightful programme of vocal and instrumental music. Tickets have been issued, and a limited number can be obtained on application at the hotel, the price being fixed at $1 each. It is promised that this shall be the most interesting of the many entertainments for which Netherwood is noted.

The Democratic State Central Committee.

The Democratic State Central Committee has opened headquarters at the Trenton House, Trenton, for the earnest prosecution of the campaign. They are at present occupying Room No. 4, but about the middle of the month will occupy Rooms Nos. 100 and 101. They have placed themselves in communication with the chief points of the State, and already have received most flattering assurances from some of them. They earnestly request all Democratic clubs, now or hereafter organized, to send to the Secretary, P. O. Box 36, a list of their officers, with P. O. address, the township in which they are located and the number of members enrolled. The following is a list of officers of the Democratic organizations and clubs already formed in Plainfield:

DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION.

President—James E. Martine.
Vice Presidents—Nathan Harper, Karl T. Polak, Joseph W. Yates.
Treasurer—Ephraim H. Depew.
Rec. Sec.—Louis F. Wadsworth.
Cor. Sec.—James O'Neil.

HANCOCK VETERAN ASSOCIATION.

President—Major Eugene A. Gross.
Vice Presidents—Col. B. F. Onderdonk, Edward C. Morse, Samuel P. Randolph.
Secretary—Col. Julian Scott.
Treasurer—James S. Vosseller.

YOUNG MEN'S DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

President—Walter L. Hetfield.
Vice Presidents—Solomon Fleig, Jas. O'Neill, Joseph G. Miller.
Secretary—Louis M. Shover.
Treasurer—Vincent L. Franz.

HANCOCK & ENGLISH.

Plainfield Aroused—Grand Banner Raising—Enthusiastic Mass Meeting Immense Gathering—Stirring Addresses by Prominent Orators.

Again has the enthusiasm for Hancock and English made itself prominent in our city. Again has the Democracy shown itself to be wide-awake, in the front and hard at work. On last Wednesday evening it gained the first two moves in the campaign ("and all good Republicans are expected to acknowledge the corn, as it were"—Central Times). First move—about six weeks after the nominations at Cincinnati the Democrats raised a banner with the candidates on it; it was two months after the Chicago nominations before the Republicans could scare up even a ready made one. Second move—the first indoor ratification mass meeting held in the city and addressed by prominent men, was in favor of Hancock and English.

On last Wednesday evening, in spite of the severe storm of wind and rain that sprang up, a banner on which was spread the names and portraits of the regular Democratic nominees for President and Vice President, was unfurled across Front street from the rooms of the party organization. As it swung to the breeze the band below played that stirring old air "The Battle Cry of Freedom," and the heavens above lent its power for a mighty salute and the deep tones of thunder rumbled through the skies. As soon as human voice could be heard above the elements, cheer after cheer burst from the throats of those assembled and our eloquent local orator, James E. Martine, Esq., addressed the crowd with words appropriate and stimulating. Just here it was shown that even the Democrats failed to entirely realize the strength of their candidates. With a proud wave of its folds, and a consciousness of its power, the banner wrenched from position a chimney to which one side was attached, and floating its corner to the darkness above seemed to say "as you rain now over us, so will we during the coming term reign over the nation."

As eight o'clock drew near those in the street followed the band to Van Deventer Hall, and joined the crowd that had already assembled therein. Probably as large an audience of the better class of Plainfield's citizens, has never before gathered on a like occasion. Promptly at the time advertised the meeting was called to order by Mr. James E. Martine, and his Honor, Mayor Harper, was chosen Chairman. The following additional officers were also elected by a unanimous expression of assent from those present. Vice Presidents: Joseph W. Yates, John H. Evans, Levi Hetfield, Ernest L. Wais, Lambert Heyniger, George Lissignolo, Gilford Mayer, James S. Vosseller, James E. Wadsworth, Wm. H. Sterling, William B. Maxson, James Clark, James Ritchie, Carl Polak and Walter E. Stewart. Secretaries: Wm. L. Force, Walter L. Hetfield and Louis F. Wadsworth. Upon the completion of the organization the Chairman introduced the first speaker of the evening, General Martin T. Mc Mahon, who was received by the audience with hearty applause.

GEN. MCMAHON'S SPEECH.

"Citizens of Plainfield I deeply regret with you the inclemency of the weather on the occasion of this your first public meeting, but we need only remember that the prospects of the Democracy can never be o'er shadowed again by a cloud. You have great occasion to feel flattered as you stand to-day contented, proud, confident and enthusiastic. It was decided that our canvass should be an aggressive one, and the soldier we have chosen is the one with whom to engage in aggression. The Republican party has put forth no declaration of principals nor do they recite or pretend to recite their past history, so allow me to take the time this evening necessary to review their life." The speaker then with relentless words of keen wisdom dissected the past existence of the party, its birth and growth and the reasons it should die. He continued, "The first clause of the Republican platform says: 'The Republican party suppressed the rebellion.' I say that such statement is wickedly false. You who remember the days of '61 do not need to be told this, but the coming men of our country should hear the truth in regard to the matter. During those exciting times all party lines were lost in patriotism and every man arose as one to fight for the same cause. I do not say it to reflect on the patriotic feelings of Republicans, but the majority of Union soldiers in the late war were Democrats. Look at the great leaders: McClellan, Halleck, Grant, Sherman, Buell, Rosencrans, Logan and a host of others—in fact it is impossible to select one of the prominent leaders who was not a Democrat at that time. During the war some of them changed their political sentiments, but you will find that an official position of value followed immediately in every case." A just tribute to General McClellan followed, his career during the war was shown and a specimen thereby given of the plan of action followed by the Republican party in their work against the leaders of the army. "When slavery was abolished the mission of the Republican party was ended and they continued from that day forward solely for the purpose of holding office, and an iron hand was kept on the South for the sake of Republican supremacy in the North. Look at their financial policy. First they demonetize silver, then in response to the demands of the people they repeal the law and immediately afterwards depreciate the value of a dollar but compel its acceptance for one hundred cents. Do we need a Republican Convention to tell us that 'the Constitution is a supreme law?' Placed as military governor over two states by General Grant, Gen. Hancock issued orders in this very spirit and a Republican Congress protested against them and denounced him. A bill was introduced not only to deprive him of his command but to remove him from the army, and a non-republican and silly-democratic president—Johnson—was compelled to recall him. It appears from a remark of Mr. Garfield's, expressed during his recent melancholy trip, that the Democrats have started the bloody-shirt issue by insisting on preserving the ballot box from the bayonet and granting the right of states to rule themselves. When the clamor against General Hancock in New Orleans was the loudest, all his services were to be forgotten and he was to be driven out of the army in disgrace. And why? because he stated what the Republican party now state in their platform.

The bill to remove General Hancock was introduced by James A. Garfield. This has been denied by his friends but I find in a life of the gentleman a private letter to a friend in which he says: 'I want the people to understand that Congress is supreme. This Hancock has no business meddling. I could have passed the bill but didn't care to as it has had its effect in teaching General Hancock to keep his place.' Mud throwing is characteristic of the Republican party and the kind of man Mr. Garfield is was shown by the Tribune, Times, Harper's Weekly and other party papers years ago, and a Republican investigating committee made up his record. No man is fit to be President who comes before you with a tainted life; so, far better it is to elect a man who is purely a soldier than one who is impurely a politician. No word of reproach has ever been truthfully uttered against General Hancock who stood in the gap on the battle field and by the might of his presence saved this nation from destruction. I say to you, citizens and lovers of your country, choose ye between them."

The applause that followed these noble utterances could be heard above the sound of the band. Mayor Harper at the close of the musical interlude stepped forward and introduced Captain James Brady of New York. As this popular speaker arose, the hall fairly rang with cheers and enthusiastic applause. For many minutes he stood and viewed the excited multitude that almost burst their throats in loud harangue. From the galleries and the halls outside additional enthusiasm joined in the unbounded applause that greeted one whom all were eager to listen to.

CAPTAIN BRADY'S SPEECH.

"Fellow citizens, fifteen years ago when the apple trees of the South—as we are told by Republican poets—were in blossom, the last shot in the late war was fired and our soldiers returned home to hang the rifle of '61 along side of the musket of '76 and to seek the plow. The gray as well as the blue were ready and willing to turn their bayonet into a plough-share. Down from the mighty hills came Don Quixote Blaine with his little, insignificant Sancho Panza Hale, to launch the bloody-shirt and tells you that you fought in vain, tells you that your comrades died for naught and tells you that the war is not over. There is one thing I admire in the Republican party—I admire their brazen effrontery. They have been making history for us for the past years, but we propose to take a hand at that sort of thing ourselves in the future. Look back at the history they have made and see for yourselves how worthy they are to continue it. Then came a time when Robeson, Belknap, Roscoe Conkling, Jim Blaine, Eugene Hale and other pure, high-minded men met at Chicago—and then the mountain labored and all stood waiting to see the mighty thing that was to come, when, behold! it brought forth a little mouse. As I have said before in this city, there is another thing I admire the Republican party for—that is their consistency. James A Garfield is the epitome of the substance and principals his followers upheld, although he has never been known to indentify himself with any great act of the party. He commenced life on the tow-path; then he went on at something else; then he tried another line of life, and so on. Never constant to any thing except Jas. A. Garfield. Let me tell you if that tow-path had been paved with De Golyer pavement he would never have traveled far on it. Some of the Republican organs say that Hancock was only a second-rate soldier. There is only one reply to make to such a statement. It is a lie! He made the greater part of the history of the war. They say he is no statesman. Well! He never accepted a bribe of Credit Mobilier Stock for his support of a robbery. He never sold his official power for a sum of money, and favored in consequence an appropriation that was a bare-faced theft. If such acts are necessary in the formation of a statesman, he is not one. But his letters to Gov. Pease, his General Order No 40 and others, are the ablest papers of our generation. You have been told that the Whig party died a natural death—I tell you now that the Republican party committed suicide by their nomination at Chicago. So I would appeal to you to do your duty as Christians next November, and give the corpse a decent burial for all time."

This address, as were all the others, was frequently interrupted by outbursts of loud enthusiasm; even those of our colored citizens who were present, appreciating the power of the eloquence and the wisdom and soundness of the arguments. More creditable music followed, and the chairman then introduced the Hon. John T. Bird of Hunterdon County.

HON. JOHN T. BIRD'S SPEECH.

"I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the nomination of General Hancock. A man who embodies so many virtues we may well be proud of. The nomination was not the work of chance, but a manifestation of the desire of the people—growing with the growth of an overburdened nation—to express their devotion to the Union and their hostility to the absolutism of the Republican party. By past actions on the battle field and theatre of peace, he has proven himself worthy to receive the vote of every citizen. At Cincinnati an effort was made to nominate a statesman. Bayard was there, and Thurman was there, and Hendricks was there—but those who had heard the utterances of Hancock at New Orleans were there also. They had the courage to name in that Convention General Winfield Scott Hancock, and it was not in vain." A concise and clear statement was here given, of the circumstances and conditions under which the famous orders were issued; and the speaker called upon the Republicans to "follow the example of John W. Forney and pay a debt of gratitude which is due to the conservator of the Nation. During the reign of the Republican party in Congress the corruption of which Garfield is arraigned and condemned, became possible. Out of its very conduct, out of its very legislation, the most corrupt projects sprang up that any nation has ever known. I trust that you have the courage and daring to step forth and show that conduct which will vindicate you as true American citizens. You wonder that such a man should be the candidate of the Republican party, but that state of things is the out-growth of the schemes of the party. To undo this condition of affairs, to wipe it out as far as capable, to bring us back as near as possible to where we were in our forefather's time, is a work for the Democratic party headed by their gallant leader Winfield Scott Hancock. I thank you for your attention and ask you to lay these considerations to heart whether Democrat or Republican. There was a time when a great many dared to be patriots, dared to turn their backs on wives and children, and go to the battle field to save the Union. But now I ask you all to take to heart the question: Shall this Union, in its integrity, be preserved to posterity as brothers should preserve it, or shall this war of sectional hate be continued? It is well for us to know that multitudes are coming to the Hancock standard. I rejoice in it because I am glad to know that these multitudes are determined to preserve the Union. In 1876 Samuel J. Tilden received a popular majority of more than a quarter of a million, and, to-day all those are still Democrats even though no vital issues had arisen. Let us vindicate our rights by declaring our rights as American citizens, and by demanding that we shall have a free ballot, a full vote and a fair count."

There being earnest calls for the Hon. John T. Dunn of Elizabeth, who was observed on the platform among the invited guests, that gentleman consented to say a few words.

"I did not expect to be called upon to say anything. Hearing that John T. Bird was to speak to you to night I felt a desire to enjoy his exposition of the true principles of Democracy. That's why I am here. You know the story of the darkey who dreamed he died and went to the hot place and saw a great many Republicans there who were all holding a colored man between them and the fire. Well let me tell you that every Republican who went to the late war, marched on the battle field close behind a Democrat. 'Whom the gods seek to destroy they first make mad'—and that's what happened to the Republican party at Chicago when they nominated this——what's his name——oh, yes! Garfield. Well, gentlemen, if you name him you can have him. They don't want us to throw mud and want the people to let his record alone. They'll let him so severely alone next November that he and his record will be forgotten, and his vote will be as small as the little end of nothing whittled down to a point."

A vote of thanks was then given to the gentlemen who had spoken, to the officers of the meeting, to Colonel Julian Scott who had painted the portraits, and all who had assisted in the construction of the banner. Three cheers "for all of us" followed; and the meeting adjourned.

The storm having ceased the band and a large crowd again gathered under the newly raised banner, and the cheering for the candidates was continued far into the night.

Personalia.

The Miss Bakers of East Front street are visiting Ocean Grove for a few weeks. The older members of the family have just returned from that pleasant resort.

Judge E. W. Runyon and his daughters May and Susie, are visiting at Dr. W. H. Mead's residence, at Windham, Green Co., N. Y.

Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, at the residence of the latter on East Front street, during Friday and Saturday of last week. A number of friends and neighbors called during the lady's stay, and at a select reception given on Friday evening quite a gathering of Plainfield's aristocracy assembled.

The handsome Secretary of the Saengerbund has returned from a short sojourn at his mountain resort, and the young ladies of Plainfield once more enjoy the light of his pleasant smile.

Mr. John H. Cuthbert entertained Col. E. P. Hill of the 33d Wisconsin Reg't, at his residence during Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. E. Smalley is spending a few days at Sheldrake, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

Miss Amelia S. Runyon is a young lady of the past, and Mrs. Joseph P. Howatt occupies her place in the thoughts of friends and acquaintances.

Councilman John Whiton and Mason Tyler, Esq., with their families are among the latest arrivals at Ocean Beach.

Counsellor Maxson is seeking from professional cares in a trip to various interesting parts of the country.

The Rev. Dr's Henson and Sanders respectively, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church on August 22nd and 29th.

Mr. James M. Taylor and family are enjoying a tour through the lakes of New York State. Mrs. Rev. Dr. Lowry accompanies the party.

Miss M. E. Brown and Miss M. Dunning have returned home after a season of enjoyment at Ocean Grove.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn, telegraph operator at this station, started on Tuesday for a two weeks' vacation at Windham, Greene County, N. Y. His position will be filled during his absence by Mr. Geo. Stevens, of Clinton.

Mr. Robert S. Miller and family are summering at New London, Conn.

Mr. M. M. Thorn has returned from the Adirondacks improved in health and —we are glad to see—still retaining the inborn modesty that impells him to tell reasonable fish stories. He visited our office with a birch bark canoe in his hand and a neck tie and hat-band of the same material, all the work of his ability and genius.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

At the July meeting of the Trustees of School District No. 38, of North Plainfield, arrangements relating to the management of the Public School for the coming term were completed and the following corps of teachers was selected. It is gratifying to know that the efficiency of the re-appointed principal is so fully appreciated that an increase has been made in his salary; while changes in the other positions have only been made after a thorough and impartial review of the circumstances: Principal—E. W. Rarick; Teachers—Miss Dora Skillman, of Millstone; Miss A. M. Smith, Miss Rachael Mair, Miss S. T. Randolph, Miss E. J. Bainbridge and Miss Louise Trembly.

The friends of Collector E. C. Van Norstrand will be glad to learn of his rapid recovery from the late annoying and serious sickness with which he has been afflicted.

COMMUNICATED.

Honors to a Plainfielder.

We are in receipt of the following from Judge E. W. Runyon, of this city, and are of course delighted to hear that our Republican friend is enjoying himself in a Democratic section. If he does'nt return home safe with his family, we shall be forced to believe that there is something in the Republican Ku Klux romance. Below we give the extract from the Windham Journal, which flies the Hancock and English banner at its mast head:

"The Hon. Theodore Runyon, Chancellor of the State of New Jersey, is at Dr. Mead's."

The same paper contains the following item:

"We know a man in Windham who will wager $10,000 that Hancock will be elected."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

WINDHAM, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1880.

You will perceive by the accompanying newspaper (The Windham Journal) that the accomplished and learned Chancellor of New Jersey, HON. THEODORE RUNYON, who is popularly supposed to be traveling in Europe, is actually rusticating at this time in this village, and stopping at Dr. Mead's.

This will no doubt occasion surprise to his friends and the members of the New Jersey Bar, but inasmuch as the announcement appears in one of the most intense of Hancock journals, its truth cannot reasonably be called in question. But lest your readers may unjustly condemn this Windham Journal man, I will explain that my own advent in this most quiet and exceedingly beautiful village, was the occasion of this blunder on his part. A New York lawyer named Robinson, who knew Chancellor Runyon well by reputation but not personally, and who is stopping here, heard of my arrival, and forthwith reported to the village editor that Chancellor Theodore Runyon was in town, stopping at Dr. Mead's. While it is quite an honorable distinction for a small man to be taken for a great one, I am opposed to shams and false pretenses, and so I hastened forthwith to correct the blunder by informing the said editor that the Chancellor of New Jersey and I are two distinct and different individuals.

This pretty little rural village of about 300 inhabitants, is among the Catskill group, at an elevation of 1,500 feet; about 25 miles west of the Hudson river, and 26 miles from Catskill Landing. You may leave Plainfield by the 6:33 a. m. train, take the 8:30 Albany day boat, get to Catskill Landing at 3:15, and get to this place the same evening. The most tiresome part of the journey is the 25 miles stage route; but the roads are good and the views from portions of the route magnificent. The scenery in and around Windham is as fine as one could desire, and the air is sweet and invigorating. It contains three churches, two hotels, two telegraph offices, numberless boarding houses, one newspaper, and three or four large boarding houses in its suburbs. Fair board can be obtained for $6 to $9 per week, and one may have all the milk and cream the appetite may crave. The pretty cottages and neat trim lawns and yards remind me of Plainfield, and it is doubtless one of the best sylvan retreats for the recuperation of mind and body in this country. It is still every day, but the stillness of Windham of a Sunday, is simply painful. Several hundred summer visitors are in and around Windham, and I have seen it stated that there are now 40,000 persons in and among the Catskills, but this will include a territory of 30 miles in diameter. John J. White, of Brooklyn, former County Clerk of King's Co., and well acquainted with Clerk Vosseller, with his family, are stopping at our boarding house. The town I am sorry to say is Democratic.

Yours truly,
E. W. RUNYON.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Having noticed in your columns last week that "the Druggists of Plainfield had advanced the price of Soda Water to ten cents per glass on account of the advance in the price of ice," and I, being a Druggist and doing business in Plainfield, I desire to state that I have not and do not intend to advance the price of my soda to ten cents per glass, as I do not consider the advanced price of ice a sufficient reason for me to advance the price of my soda one hundred per cent., as you stated in last week's issue.

Yours, respectfully,
A. KILLGORE.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Ex-Surrogate Addison Clark had great cause for feeling proud of the unusually fine crop of corn he has succeeded in raising adjoining the Clark homestead.

The Westfield Hotel is now managed by Mr. A. W. Moffett, who by his thorough knowledge of the business is building up a fine reputation for the house. Good stables are attached to the hotel.

Mr. John M. C. Marsh, a sufferer for some weeks from chills and malaria fever, is improving.

The Republicans talk of holding a mass meeting shortly.

All dogs running at large in the streets wear muzzles now, since the edict of the Town Committee to shoot at sight all canines found at large without this safety guard.

The colored folks will hold a Camp Meeting in Woodruff's woods near this village, from August 20th to the 26th. The proceeds will be devoted to the benefit of the Mt. Zion M. E. Church. Our old friend John Nelson, of course, is one of the prime movers of the affair.

John Nelson, Westfield's colored heavy weight, came near being cremated last Wednesday morning. In riding from Westfield to Plainfield, his linen duster caught fire from sparks from the locomotive, and before John could extinguish the flames, his duster resembled a sieve.

FIRE MATTERS.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A MASTERLY LETTER.

HANCOCK'S REVERENCE OF CIVIL LAW.

Shortly after the nomination of General Hancock at Cincinnati it was charged against him that during the electoral crisis of 1876-7 he had written a letter to General Sherman in which he had made known his opinion on the disputed election and declared his intention to support Mr. Tilden's claim if the latter chose to take the oath of office. It was claimed by the Republican press that this letter was little short of revolutionary in its declarations and that its publication in full would greatly damage his chances for the Presidency. General Hancock from the first said when questioned about the matter that anything he had ever written to General Sherman might be given to the public. General Sherman was out West when the story came out. On hearing of it he said that he had received no letter from General Hancock upon which any such construction as indicated above could be placed. Since then, General Sherman having come within reach, the New York World has finally obtained a copy of the letter from his files, with the permission of both parties, and it was printed in that journal and the Times Sunday.

General Hancock being spoken to by a Herald reporter on Saturday had this to say on the subject:

"I hardly remembered writing the letter," he said, "until I saw a reference to it in some of the newspapers. When I wrote it I had no idea that it would ever be published. I was in a Western town on private business, with no secretary or member of my staff with me. I wrote it frankly and with no constraint."

"And stick by what you wrote?"

"I never wrote anything I am afraid of having known and that I would not stick to."

"And you desire this letter to be published?"

"I only waited for the consent of General Sherman, and that having been given there is no obstacle against its publication."

Following is the full text of the letter:

CARONDELET P. O., ST. LOUIS,
December 28, 1876.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Your favor of the 4th inst. reached me in New York on the 5th, the day before I left for the West. I intended to reply to it, before leaving, but cares incident to my departure interfered. Then again, since my arrival here I have been so occupied with personal affairs of a business nature that I have deferred writing from day to day until this moment, and now I find myself in debt to you another letter in acknowledgement of your favor of the 17th, received a few days since. I have concluded to leave here on the 29th (to-morrow) afternoon, so that I may be expected in New York on the 31st inst. It has been cold and dreary since my arrival here; I have worked "like a Turk" (I presume that means hard work) in the country in making fences, cutting down trees, repairing buildings, etc., etc., and am at least able to say that St. Louis is the coldest place in the Winter and it is the hottest place in Summer of any that I have encountered in a temperate zone. I have known St. Louis in December to have genial weather throughout the month; this December has been frigid and the river has been frozen more solid than I have ever known it.

When I heard the rumor that I was ordered to the Pacific coast I thought it probably true, considering the past discussion on that subject. The possibilities seemed to me to point that way. Had it been true, I should, of course, have presented no complaint nor made resistance of any kind. I would have gone quickly, if not prepared to go promptly. I certainly would have been relieved from the responsibilities and anxieties concerning Presidential matters which may fall to those near the throne or in authority within the next four months, as well as from other incidents or matters which I would not control and the action concerning which I might not approve. I was not exactly prepared to go to the Pacific, however, and I therefore felt relieved when I received your note informing me that there was no truth in the rumors. Then I did not wish to appear to be escaping from responsibilities and possible dangers which may cluster around military commanders in the East, especially in the critical period fast approaching. "All's well that ends well."

The whole matter of the Presidency seems to me to be simple and to admit of a peaceful solution. The machinery for such a contingency as threatens to present itself has been all carefully prepared. It only requires lubrication, owing to disuse. The army should have nothing to do with the election or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in joint session who he is. We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful. Our commissions express that I like Jefferson's way of inauguration; it suits our system. He rode alone on horseback to the Capitol (I fear it was the "Old Capitol"), tied his horse to a rail fence, entered and was duly sworn; then rode to the Executive Mansion and took possession. He inaugurated himself simply by taking the oath of office. There is no other legal inauguration in our system. The people or politicians may institute parades in honor of the event and public officials may add to the pageant by assembling troops and banners, but all that only comes properly after the inauguration—not before, and it is not a part of it. Our system does not provide that one President should inaugurate another. There might be danger in that and it was studiously left out of the charter.

But you are placed in an exceptionally important position in connection with coming events. The Capitol is in my jurisdiction also, but I am a subordinate and not on the spot; and if I were, so also would be my superior in authority, for there is the station of the General-in-Chief. On the principle that a regularly elected President's term of office expires with the 3d of March (of which I have not the slightest doubt) and which the laws bearing on the subject uniformly recognize, and in consideration of the possibility that the lawfully-elected President may not appear until the 5th of March, a great deal of responsibility may necessarily fall upon you. You hold over! You will have power and prestige to support you. The Secretary of War, too, probably holds over; but if no President appears he may not be able to exercise functions in the name of a President, for his proper acts are those of a known superior—a lawful President.

You act on your own responsibility and by virtue of a commission only restricted by the law. The Secretary of War is the mouthpiece of a President. You are not. If neither candidate has a constitutional majority of the Electoral College, or the Senate and House on the occasion of the count do not unite in declaring some person legally elected by the people, there is a lawful machinery already provided to meet that contingency and decide the question peacefully. It has not been recently used, no occasion presenting itself, but our fathers provided it. It has been exercised and recognized and submitted to as lawful on every hand.

That machinery would probably elect Mr. Tilden President and Mr. Wheeler Vice President. That would be right enough, for the law provides that in a failure to elect duly by the people the House shall immediately elect the President, and the Senate the Vice President. Some tribunal must decide whether the people have duly elected a President. I presume, of course, that it is the joint affirmative action of the Senate and House, or why are they present to witness the count if not to see that it is fair and just? If a failure to agree arises between the two bodies there can be no lawful affirmative decision that the people have elected a President, and the House must then proceed to act, not the Senate. The Senate elects Vice Presidents, not Presidents. Doubtless, in case of a failure by the House to elect a President by the 4th of March, the President of the Senate (if there be one) would be the legitimate person to exercise Presidential authority for the time being, or until the appearance of a lawful President, or, for the time laid down in the Constitution. Such courses would be peaceful and, I have a firm belief, lawful.

I have no doubt Governor Hayes would make an excellent President. I have met him and know him. For a brief period he served under my command, but as the matter stands I can't see any likelihood of his being duly declared elected by the people unless the Senate and House come to be in accord as to that fact, and the House would, of course, not otherwise elect him. What the people want is a peaceful determination of this matter, as fair a determination as possible and a lawful one. No other determination could stand the test. The country, if not plunged into revolution, would become poorer day by day; business would languish, and our bonds would come home to find a depreciated market.

I was not in favor of the military action in South Carolina recently, and if General Ruger had telegraphed to me, or asked for advice, I would have advised him not under any circumstances to allow himself or his troops to determine who were the lawful members of a State Legislature. I could not have given him better advice than to refer him to the special message of the President in the case of Louisiana some time before. But in South Carolina he had the question settled by a decision of the Supreme Court of the State—the highest tribunal which had acted on the question—so that his line of duty seemed even to be clearer than in the action in the Louisiana case. If the Federal Court had interfered and overruled the decision of the State Court there might have been a doubt certainly, but the Federal Court only interfered to complicate, not to decide or overrule.

Anyhow, it is no business of the army to enter upon such questions, and even if it might be so, in any event, if the civil authority is supreme, as the Constitution declares it to be, the South Carolina case was one in which the army had a plain duty. Had Gen. Ruger asked me for advice, and if I had given it, I should, of course, have notified you of my action immediately, so that it could have been promptly overruled if it should have been deemed advisable by you or other superior in authority. Gen. Ruger did not ask for my advice, and I inferred from that and other facts that he did not desire it, or that, being in direct communication with my military superiors at the seat of government—who were nearer to him in time and distance than I was—he deemed it unnecessary. As Gen. Ruger had the ultimate responsibility of action and had really the greater danger to confront in the final action in the matter, I did not venture to embarrass him by suggestions. He was a department commander and the lawful head of the military administration within the limits of the department; but, besides, I knew that he had been called to Washington for consultation before taking command, and was probably aware of the views of the administration as to the civil affairs in his command. I knew that he was in direct communication with my superiors in authority in reference to the delicate subjects presented for his consideration, or had ideas of his own which he believed to be sufficiently in accord with the views of our common superiors to enable him to act intelligently according to his judgment and without suggestions from those not on the spot and not as fully acquainted with the facts as himself. He desired, too, to be free to act, as he had the eventual greater responsibility, and so the matter was governed as between him and myself.

As I have been writing thus freely to you I may still further unbosom myself by stating that I have not thought it lawful or wise to use Federal troops in such matters as have transpired east of the Mississippi within the last few months, save so far as they may be brought into action under the article of the Constitution which contemplates meeting armed resistance or invasion of a State more powerful than the State authorities can subdue by the ordinary processes, and then only when requested by the Legislature, or, if it could not be convened in session, by the Governor, and when the President of the United States intervenes in that manner it is state of war—not peace. The army is laboring under disadvantages and has been used unlawfully at times in the judgment of the people (in mine, certainly) and we have lost a great deal of the kindly feeling which the community at large felt for us.

It is time to stop and unload. Officers in command of troops often find it difficult to act wisely and safely when superiors in authority have different views of the laws from theirs, and when legislation has sanctioned action seemingly in conflict with the fundamental law, and they generally defer to the known judgment of their superiors. Yet the superior officers of the army are so regarded in such great crisis and are held to such responsibility, especially those at or near the head of it, that is necessary on such momentous occasions to dare to determine for themselves what is lawful and what is not lawful under our system. If the military authorities should be invoked, as might possibly be the case in such exceptional times when there existed such divergent views as to the correct result, the army will suffer from its past action if it has acted wrongfully. Our regular army has little hold upon the affections of the people to-day, and its superior officers should certainly, as far as lies in their power, legally and with righteous intent aim to defend the right, which to us is the law and the institution which they represent. It is a well meaning institution, and it would be well if it should have an opportunity to be recognized as a bulwark in support of the rights of the people and of the law.

I am truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To General W. T. Sherman, Commanding Army of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Col. George Williamson, a leading Louisiana Republican, has declined the nomination of that party for Congress. Col. Williamson has gone further and informed the Republicans who sought to induce him to lead their ticket that he proposes to vote and work for Gen. Hancock. He tells them: "Hancock represents the magnanimity and honor of the military and civil element of the North that wishes bygones to be bygones. Garfield, on the contrary, represents that political element of the North that lives upon the past and glories in Northern sectionalism, while it denounces, yet fosters and lives upon Southern sectionalism." Of course the Republican press will rise up and declare Col. Williamson to be a red handed rebel, but the fact remains that he has been a leader in their party and was its choice in his district for Congress at the coming election.

A Hancock man encountered a Baptist Radical the other day, who, upon the introduction of the subject of the Cincinnati nominations expressed the hope that God would not deliver the Government into the hands of the Democrats next March. Nothing daunted by his friend's evident belief that such an act would be an unwarrantable proceeding on the part of the Almighty, the Hancock man replied: "I have no means of knowing whether the Lord is taking an active part in politics this season, or not, but inasmuch as the devil has run the Administration at Washington for the last twenty years, it seems to me as if it were high time that the Lord had a chance."

The tide has set in for HANCOCK in a way that is almost without precedent. The Democrats are bubbling over with enthusiasm—won't listen to a doubt about carrying Pennsylvania, while the Republicans are as glum as a man with the toothache, or, as a heartless fellow puts it, a man paying alimony to his divorced wife.—Allentown (Pa.) Democrat.

BELLS.

The history of bells is full of romantic interest. In civilized times they have been intimately associated, not only with all kinds of religious and social rites, but with almost every important historical event. Their influence in architecture is not less remarkable, for to them indirectly we probably owe all the most famous towers in the world. Bells early summoned soldiers to arms, as well as citizens to bath or senate, or Christians to church. They sounded the alarm in fire or tumult, and the rights of the burghers in their bells were jealously guarded. Many a bloody chapter in history has been rung in and out by bells. On the third day of Easter, 1282, at the ringing of the Sicilian vespers, 8,000 French were massacred in cold blood by John of Procida, who had thus planned to free Sicily from Charles of Anjou. On the 24th of August, St. Bartholomew's day, 1571, bells ushered in the massacre of the Huguenots in France to the number, it is said, on 100,000.

Bell founding attained perfection in *Holland in the sixteenth and seven*teenth centuries, and the names of Hemorry, Dumery, and the Van den Ghens stand as the princes of the art.

Bell ringing by rope is still a popular art in England. The first regular peal of bells sent to England was in 1456 by Pope Calixtus III. to King's college, Cambridge, and was for 300 years the largest peal in that country. At the beginning of the sixteenth century sets of eight bells were hung in a few churches.

The great bell at Moscow, Czar Kolokol, which according to the inscription, was cast in 1733, was in the earth 103 years, and was raised by the Emperor Nicholas in 1836. It seems never to have been actually hung or rung, having been cracked in the furnace. It stands on a raised platform in the middle of a square, and is used for a chapel. It weighs 440,000 pounds; height, 19 feet 3 inches; circumference, 60 feet 9 inches; thickness, 2 feet; weight of broken piece, 11 tons. The second Moscow bell, the largest in the world in actual use, weighs 128 tons. The great bell at Pekin weighs 53 tons; Nanking, 22 tons; Olmutz, 17 tons; Vienna, 17 tons; Notre Dame, 17 tons; Erfurt, one of the finest bell metal 13 tons. The Kaiserglocke of Cologne cathedral, lately recast, (1875) weighs twenty-five tons.

An Alderman in Trouble.

Alderman Taylor, of Paterson, was arrested one day recently on complaint of the foreman of a fire engine company for cutting the hose at a fire, because the firemen refused to obey the orders of their superior officers to desist from playing on a rival company after the fire. The alderman's act is declared by the laws of the state to be a misdemeanor, punishable by $1,000 fine or two years in state prison, or both. He gave bail to appear when wanted. The firemen aver that they will press the charge before the grand jury. On the other hand, public sentiment seems to approve Alderman Taylor's course, as there has been much complaint from the firemen deluging each other and outside citizens needlessly with water, and this incident has intensified the popular demand for a paid fire department, which shall be under better discipline.

It would never do to elect women to all offices. If a female sheriff should visit the residence of a handsome man and explain to his jealous wife that she had an attachment for him, there would be a vacancy in that office in about two minutes.

"Grand Marches" for Garfield and Hancock, published and dedicated to them, were out within an incredibly short time after the nominations were made. The spontaneousness, as it were, with which a composer can work off an old waltz or march on a new victim is something remarkable.

The Republicans assert that the negro exodus has given them Indiana. They have been, we read, very active in the introduction of negro voters, but they will fail to carry the State, nevertheless. At this moment they are cutting down the Republican vote in Kentucky by piling the negroes into the Southern counties of Indiana. Their trouble and expense will not help them. The Indiana Democrats have sharp eyes.

There are many thousands of young men, scores of thousands of them, who vote for the first time this year. Crooked dealing and hypocrisy are vices which have nothing in common with generous youth, and toward which it is always intolerant. What young man will put himself in the position of having to tell his son twenty years hence: "I cast my first vote for a bribe taker and a perjurer."

Centralization of power, subjugation of State sovereignty, tyrannical control of the elective franchise, shameless extravagance and reckless maladministration of every description and in all departments of government, are the dangers which threaten the stability of free institutions. To preserve and perpetuate civil liberty the Cincinnati Democratic Convention nominated Hancock and English.

Gen. Daniel Butterfield, heretofore a Republican, was in conversation with a company, in which was Senator Conkling, in the course of which he remarked "I shall not only vote for Hancock, but shall do all I can toward his election." Conkling, who, apparently had not been paying much attention to the conversation, suddenly turned toward the General and said warmly: "I don't blame you, Dan., Hancock is a good fellow."

Beware of Pedlars!
How to Correct and Improve
YOUR SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.
One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.
As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the crest of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.
It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.
All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Occulists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.
THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.
The KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit over a million pair now being in daily use.
We are glad to announce that the Sole Agent for this place and vicinity is
JOHN A. CLARE,
Practical Watchmaker, Jeweler & Optician,
9 Park Avenue.

Would call the attention of the public to their New Styles of
PARLOR STOVES,
of original designs, superior make and finish, with the latest improvements. Special attention is invited to the
ASTRAL AND LAGRAND
as being the best of this class. Their
Parlor Heaters
are perfect in construction, easily managed, and warranted to give satisfaction. Attention is also called to their different kinds of Cooking Stoves and Ranges,
Of the former, their
"PLAINFIELD COOK,"
With heavy durable castings, and extra large oven and low price, is well worthy of inspection. Of the Ranges, their Sunshine Hot Closet Range
has superior Cooking and Baking qualities, having a reputation equal to the best in market. Their cheaper kinds, by name—CLARION, ALPINE, MAYFLOWER and BEAUTY, (the last can be furnished with Symons' Celebrated Grate,) have been well tested, and stand No. 1 with those having them in use.
They are Sole Agents for the justly celebrated
Stag's Head Double Elevated
OVEN RANGE.
Other Elevated Oven Ranges have been taken out and the Stag's Head put in on account of their superior qualities.
FURNACES
of all kinds put up at short notice at the lowest rates.

WINE

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE!
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Native Wine is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable
Tonic and Strengthening Properties
are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.
SPEER'S
P. J. SHERRY.
The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior character, and partakes of the golden qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal properties it will be found unexcelled.
SPEER'S
P. J. BRANDY.
This Brandy stands unrivaled in this country, being far superior for medicinal purposes.
It is a pure Distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.
It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.
See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.
Sold by R. P. Reynolds, R. J. Shaw, and W. H. Voorhees, Druggists.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A DENIAL!
SIMPSON & CO.,
(Late Wilson & Simpson,) respectfully announce to the public of Plainfield that they have not cut ICE of SYLVAN LAKE or RANDOLPH'S POND, in this city, for the PAST FOUR YEARS; therefore the report in circulation now, that they are supplying their patrons with the ICE of said lake or pond is INCORRECT, or in broader terms, FALSE, as the depth of water at best of times is insufficient to allow of any being cut, independent of filthy state of the pond which is gradually filling up. All the ice harvested by them is cut off their own pond in WASHINGTON VALLEY, and made from Pure Spring Water.
They are sorry to be obliged to take this means of correcting the false report, but do it in self-defence.

A CARD.
Being compelled by the increase of business to have an assistant, I have taken in my employ Mr. A. J. Mills, a mechanical specialist, his first preceptor for five years being the celebrated Norman W. Kingsly, M. D. & D. D. S., of New York city, and for six years with Dr. Kingsly of Elizabeth, I feel confident I can recommend him to my patients and the public as a competent, mechanical operator in every particular. I will therefore take this method of proving to those that wish to take advantage of the lowest cost price that a first-class set of teeth can be made for, viz: for 3 months, commencing June 1st, I will make whole sets of teeth on celluloid for $10, and guarantee them to be made of the best material that can be produced. Satisfaction guaranteed in every respect. We would strive to do only first-class work, and hope by so doing at the end of 3 months to secure favor and patronage by perfection in operations, rather than by cheap competition.

POETRY.

LOVED TOO LATE.

Year after year, with a glad content,
In and out of our home he went—
In and out.
Ever for us the skies were clear;
His heart carried the care and fear,
The care and doubt.

Oh, it was hard to learn our loss,
Bearing daily the heavy cross—
The cross he bore;
To say, with an aching heart and head,
"Would to God that the love now dead
Were here once more!"

For when the love we held too light
Was gone away from our speech and sight,
No bitter tears,
No passionate words of fond regret,
No yearning grief, could pay the debt
Of thankless years.

Oh, now while the sweet Love lingers near,
Grudge not the tender words of cheer;
Leave none unsaid.
For the heart can have no sadder fate
Than some day to awake—too late—
And find Love dead!

MARY A. BARR.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN ONLY OFFER.

"Aunt Phebe, were you ever pretty?"

"When I was sixteen I was considered so. I was very like you then, Julia. I am forty-three now, remember."

"Did you ever have an offer—an offer of marriage, I mean, aunt?"

"No. Well, that is not true; I did have one offer."

"And you refused it?"

"No."

"Then he died, or went away?"

"No."

"Or deserted you?"

"No."

"Then you deceived him, I suppose?"

"I did not."

"What happened, then? Was he poor, or crippled, or something dreadful?"

"He was rich and handsome."

"Suppose you tell me about him."

"I never talk about him to any one."

"Did it happen at the old place?"

"Yes, Julia. I never left Rycelands until I was thirty. This happened when I was sixteen."

"Was he a farmer's son in the neighborhood?"

"He was a fine city gentleman."

"Oh, aunt, how interesting! Put down your embroidery and tell me about it; you cannot see to work longer."

Perhaps after so many years of silence a sudden longing for sympathy and confidence seized the elder lady, for she let her work fall from her hands, and smiling sadly, said:

"Twenty-seven years ago I was standing one afternoon by the gate at Rycelands. All the work had been finished early, and my mother and two elder sisters had gone to the village to see a friend. I had watched them a little way down the hillside, and was turning to go into the house, when I saw a stranger on horseback coming up the road. He stopped and spoke to mother, and this roused my curiosity; so I lingered at the gate. He stopped when he reached it, fastened his horse, and asked, 'Is Mr. Wakefield in?'

"I said 'father was in the barn, and I could fetch him,' which I immediately did.

"He was a dark, unpleasant-looking man, and had a masterful way with him, even to father, that I disliked; but after a short, business-like talk, apparently satisfactory to both, he went away without entering the house. Father put his hands in his pockets and watched him out of sight; then, looking at me, he said, 'Put the spare rooms to order, Phoebe.'

"'They are in order, father; but is that man to occupy them?'

"'Yes, he and his patient, a young gentleman of fine family, who is in bad health.'

"'Do you know the young gentleman, father?'

"'I know it is young Alfred Compton—that is enough for me.'

"'And the dark man who has just left? I don't like his looks, father.'

"'Nobody wants thee to like his looks. He is Mr. Alfred's physician—a Dr. Orman, of Boston. Neither of them are any of thy business, so ask no more questions;' and with that he went back to the barn.

"Mother was not at all astonished. She said there had been letters on the subject already, and that she had been rather expecting the company. 'But,' she added, 'they will pay well, and as Melissa is to be married at Christmas, ready money will be very useful.'

"About dark a carriage arrived. It contained two gentlemen and several large trunks. I had been watching for it behind the lilac trees, and I saw that our afternoon visitor was now accompanied by a slight, very fair man, dressed with extreme care in the very highest fashion. I saw also that he was handsome, and I was quite sure he must be rich, or no doctor would wait upon him so subserviently.

"This doctor I had disliked at first sight, and I soon began to imagine that I had good cause to hate him. His conduct to his patient I believed to be tyrannical and unkind. Some days he insisted that Mr. Compton was to ill to go out, though the poor gentleman begged for a walk; and again, mother said, he would take from him all his books, though he pleaded urgently for them.

"One afternoon the postman brought Dr. Orman a letter, which seemed to be important, for he asked father to drive him to the next town, and requested mother to see that Mr. Compton did not leave the house. I suppose it was not a right thing to do, but this handsome sick stranger so hardly used, and so surrounded with mystery, had roused in me a sincere sympathy for his loneliness and suffering, and I walked through that part of the garden into which his windows looked. We had been politely requested to avoid it, 'because the sight of strangers increased Mr. Compton's nervous condition.' I did not believe this, and I determined to try the experiment.

"He was leaning out of the window, and a sadder face I never saw. I smiled and courtesied, and he immediately leaped the low sill, and came toward me. I stooped and began to tie up some fallen carnations; he stooped and helped me, saying all the while I know not what, only that it seemed to me the most beautiful language I ever heard. Then we walked up and down the long peach walk until I heard the rattle of father's wagon.

"After this we became quietly, almost secretly as far as Dr. Orman was concerned, very great friends. Mother so thoroughly pitied Alfred that she not only pretended oblivion of our friendship, but even promoted it in many ways; and in the course of time Dr. Orman began to recognize its value. I was requested to walk past Mr. Compton's windows and say 'Good morning,' or offer him a flower or some ripe peaches, and finally to accompany the gentlemen in their short rambles in the neighborhood.

"I need not tell you how all this restricted intercourse ended. We were soon deeply in love with each other, and love ever finds out the way to make himself understood. We had many a five minutes meeting no one knew of, and when those were impossible a rose bush near his window hid for me his tenderest little love letters. In fact, Julia, I found him irresistible; he was so handsome and gentle, and though he must have been thirty-five years old, yet, to my thinking, he looked handsomer than any younger man could have done.

"As the weeks passed on the doctor seemed to have more confidence in us, or else his patient was more completely under control. They had much fewer quarrels, and Alfred and I walked in the garden, and even a little way up the hill, without opposition or remark. I do not know how I received the idea, but I certainly did believe that Dr. Orman was keeping Alfred sick for some purpose of his own, and I determined to take the first opportunity of arousing Alfred's suspicions. So one evening, when we were walking alone, I asked him if he did not wish to see his relatives.

"He trembled violently, and seemed in the gratest distress, and only by the tenderest words could I soothe him, as, half sobbing, he declared that they were his bitterest enemies, and that Dr. Orman was the only friend he had in the world. Any further efforts I made to get at the secret of his life were equally fruitless, and only threw him into paroxysms of distress. During the month of August he was very ill, or at least Dr. Orman said so. I scarcely saw him, there were no letters in the rose bush, and frequently the disputes between the two men rose to a pitch which father seriously disliked.

"One hot day in September every one was in the fields or orchard; only the doctor and Alfred and I were in the house. Early in the afternoon a boy came from the village with a letter to Dr. Orman, and he seemed very much perplexed, and at a loss how to act. At length he said, 'Miss Phoebe, I must go to the village for a couple of hours: I think Mr. Alfred will sleep until my return, but if not, will you try and amuse him?'

"I promised gladly, and Dr. Orman went back to the village with the messenger. No sooner was he out of sight than Alfred appeared, and we rambled about the garden, as happy as two lovers could be. But the day was extremely hot, and as the afternoon advanced, the heat increased. I proposed then that we should walk up the hill, where there was generally a breeze, and Alfred was delighted at the large freedom it promised us.

"But in another hour the sky grew dark and lurid, and I noticed that Alfred grew strangely restless. His cheeks flushed, his eyes had a wild look or terror in them, he trembled and started, and in spite of all my efforts to soothe him, grew irritable and gloomy. Yet he had just asked me to marry him, and I had promised I would. He had called me 'his wife,' and I had told him again my suspicions about Dr. Orman, and vowed to nurse him myself back to perfect health. We had talked, too, of going to Europe, and in the eagerness and delight of our new plans, had wandered quite up to the little pine forest at the top of the hill.

"Then I noticed Alfred's excited condition, and saw also that we were going to have a thunder storm. There was an empty log hut not far away, and I urged Alfred to try and reach it before the storm broke. But he became suddenly like a child in his terror, and it was only with the greatest difficulty I got him within its shelter.

"As peal after peal of thunder crashed above us, Alfred seemed to lose all control of himself, and, seriously offended, I left him, nearly sobbing, in a corner, and went and stood by myself in the open door. In the very height of the storm I saw my father, Dr. Orman and three of our workmen coming through the wood. They evidently suspected our sheltering-place, for they came directly toward it.

"'Alfred!' shouted Dr. Orman, in the tone of an angry master, 'where are you, sir? Come here instantly.'

"My pettishness instantly vanished, and I said: 'Doctor, you have no right to speak to Alfred in that way. He is going to be my husband, and I shall not permit it any more.'

"'Miss Wakefield,' he answered, 'this is sheer folly. Look there!'

"I turned, and saw Alfred crouching in a corner, completely paralyzed with terror; and yet, when Dr. Orman spoke to him, he rose mechanically, as a dog might follow his master's call.

"'I am sorry, Miss Wakefield, to destroy your fine romance. Mr. Alfred Compton is, as you perceive, not fit to marry any lady. In fact, I am his keeper.'"

"Oh, Aunt Phoebe! Surely he was not a lunatic?"

"So they said, Julia. His frantic terror was the only sign I saw of it; but Dr. Orman told my father that he was at times really dangerous, and that he was annually paid a large fee to take charge of him, as he became uncontrollable in an asylum."

"Did you see him again?"

"No. I found a little note in the rose-bush, saying that he was not mad; that he remembered my promise to be his wife, and would surely come some day and claim me. But they left in three days, and Melissa, whose wedding outfit was curtailed in consequence, twitted me very unkindly about my fine crazy lover. It was a little hard on me, for he was the only lover I ever had. Melissa and Jane both married, and went west with their husbands; I lived on at Rycelands, a faded little old maid, until my uncle Joshua sent for me to come to New York and keep his fine house for him. You know that he left me all he had when he died, nearly two years ago. Then I sent for you. I remember my own lonely youth, and thought I would give you a fairer chance, dear."

"Did you ever hear of him again, aunt?"

"Of him, never. His elder brother died more than a year ago. I suppose Alfred died many years since; he was very frail and delicate. I thought it was refinement and beauty then; I know now it was ill health."

"Poor aunt!"

"Nay, child, I was very happy while my dream lasted, and I never will believe but that Alfred in his love for me was quite sane, and perhaps more sincere than many wiser men."

After this confidence Miss Phoebe seemed to take a great pleasure in speaking of the little romance of her youth. Often the old and the young maidens sat in the twilight discussing probabilities of poor Alfred Compton's life and death, and every discussion left them more and more positive that he had been the victim of some cruel plot. The subject never tired Miss Phoebe, and Julia, in the absence of a lover of her own, found in it a charm quite in keeping with her own youthful dreams.

One cold night in the middle of January they had talked over the old subject until both felt it to be exhausted—at least for that night. Julia drew aside the heavy satin curtains, and looked out, said: "It is snowing heavily, aunt; to-morrow we can have a sleigh-ride. Why, there is a sleigh at our door! Who can it be? A gentleman aunt, and he is coming here."

"Close the curtains, child. It is my lawyer, Mr. Howard. He promised to call to-night."

"Oh dear! I was hoping it was some nice strange person."

Miss Phoebe did not answer; her thoughts were far away. In fact, she had talked about her old lover until there had sprung up anew in her heart a very strong sentimental affection for his memory; and when the servant announced a visitor on business, she rose with a sigh from her reflections, and went into the reception-room.

In a few minutes Julia heard her voice, in rapid, excited tones, and ere she could decide whether to go to her or not, Aunt Phoebe entered the room, holding by the hand a gentleman who she announced as Mr. Alfred Compton. Julia was disappointed, to say the least, but she met him with enthusiasm. Perhaps Aunt Phoebe had quite unconsciously magnified the beauty of the youthful Alfred; certainly this one was not handsome. He was sixty at least, his fair curling locks had vanished, and his fine figure was slightly bent. But the clear sensitive face remained, and he was still dressed with scrupulous care.

Hand in hand the two old lovers sat, while Alfred told his sad little story of life-long wrong and suffering; of an intensely nervous, self-conscious nature driven to extremity by cruel usage and many wrongs. At the mention of Dr. Orman Miss Phoebe expressed herself a little bitterly.

"Nay, Phoebe," said Alfred; "whatever he was when my brother put me in his care, he became my true friend. To his skill and patience I owe my restoration to perfect health; and to his firm advocacy of my right and ability to manage my own estate I owe the position I now hold, and my ability to come and ask Phoebe to redeem her never-forgotten promise."

Perhaps Julia got a little tired of these old-fashioned lovers, but they never tired of each other. Miss Phoebe was not the least abashed by any contrast between her ideal and her real Alfred, and Alfred was never weary of assuring her that he found her infinitely more delightful and womanly than in the days of their first courtship.

She can not even call them a "silly" or "foolish" couple, or use any other relieving phrase of that order, for Miss Phoebe—or rather Mrs. Compton—resents any word as applied to Mr. Alfred Compton that would imply less than supernatural wisdom and intelligence. "No one but those who have known him as long as I have," she continually avers, "can possibly estimate the superior information and infallible judgment of my husband."

THEY WANTED TO LIVE IN THE STARS.

Very near us sat two young people. He wore the face of a man who shaves three times a day, and that white neck-tie had never seen the starlight before. There was pearl powder on the shoulder of his coat, and a tender, dreamy look in her lovely eyes. They sat and looked up at the stars, and they didn't care for any solitary thing any nearer to this earth. "Mortimer," she murmured softly—"Mortimer," his name appeared to be Mortimer, though I couldn't learn whether it was his front name or his after name—"Mortimer, dear," she said, "if we could only live apart from this busy and sordid, unsympathetic world, in one of yon glittering orbs of golden radiance, living apart from all else, only for each other, forgetting the besethings of earthly life, the coarse greed of the world and its animal instincts, that would be our heaven, would it not, dear?"

And Mortimer, he said that it would. "There, heart of my own," he said, and his voice trembled with earnestness, "my own darling Ethel, through all the softened radiance of the day and all the shimmering tenderness of night, our lives would pass away in an exalted atmosphere above the base-born wants of earthly mortals, and far beyond the chattering crowd that lives but for to-day, our lives refined beyond the common ken—"

And just then the man with the gong came out. Mortimer, he made a grab at Ethel's hand and a plunge for the cabin door. Ethel just gathered her skirts with her other hand, jumped clear over the back of her chair and after him, and away they went clattering down to the cabin, upset a chair, ran into a good, sweet old Quaker lady, and banged a bad word out of her before she had time to stop it; down the stairs they rushed, collared a couple of chairs at the nearest table, fed a waiter, and opened the action without skirmishing. I am a man of coarse mould and an earth-born appetite myself, and I wouldn't live in a star so long as I could find a good hotel in America; but long, long before I could get seats at the table for my family, Mortimer and Ethel had eaten two blue-fish, a little rare beefsteak, some corn-bread, a plate of hot cakes, two boiled eggs and a bunch of onions, and the waiter had gone out to toast them some cheese.

MORAL.

I have, during my wanderings met several people who wanted to live in a star, where earth-born people with animal appetites couldn't trouble them, and I always found the safest place for an earth-born man, when the star-born soul started for the dinner-table, was behind a large rock. Distrust the aspiring mortal who lives in a plane so elevated that he requires the use of a telescope when he wants to look down at the rest of us! And if he ever wants board at your humble table, charge him fifteen dollars a week, and feed him lots of soup, or you'll lose money on him.

IN A DENTIST'S CHAIR.

Whether these may be appropriately termed "Happy Thoughts" is questionable, but they will suggest the experience of every luckless patient who "has been here."

Is it perfectly certain that he has the right tooth in hand?

Didn't he twitch at the old filing with a nervous desire to convince me that my last dentist was little better than a quack?

Isn't there a slight danger that in a fit of absent-mindedness he'll bore clean through the tooth?

Suppose his chisel were to slip, where would it go? Where would it go?

What proportion of carbonic thrown off by his breath am I inhaling, with the already vitiated atmosphere of this close room?

In short, am I not acting as sort of sluice-way for some of his demolition body?

How long will this work last?

Will he adhere strictly to the scale of prices hung in plain sight on the wall? If so, under which head does this come, large extra large?

In whose mouth did he operate the file last?

Isn't he paving the way for a future job by filing away such quantities of enamel?

Suppose he should strike the nerve?

Is it possible that girl in the window across the street can see me with the distinctness that I do her, and, if she were communicative, would she injure my prospects?

Will enough of the corner of my mouth be filed away to result in permanent enlargement?

Will it be red or blistered enough to prevent my fully enjoying my engagement for the opera to-night?

How long before I'll have to get a false set of teeth?

Happy thought—Will I then be able to sing falsetto?

How many die every day with splendid teeth?

After this protracted operation will it be any consolation to remember that princes eat on gold?

Did my particular young lady friend ever speak of having her teeth plugged or of suffering from the jaw-ache?

Suppose that water in his syringe has just been taken from the ice-pitcher?

How many years before the process of grafting sound teeth will be a perfect success?

If they could do it in the days of the Ptolemies, why don't they do it now?

SOME SATISFACTION IN IT.

"Just give me a chance to pour my voice into that machine, will you?" said a red-nosed man, stepping to the front at a phonograph matinee the other day.

"Certainly," said Mr. Gilliland. "Put your mouth down close, without pressing, speak distinctly, and the instrument will repeat every word just as you say it."

"Ain't you joking now? Will it really say the same thing I say without any changing ground or mixing up, to turn the joke?"

"You will get back your own words—nothing more or less," said the proprietor.

"Hold my hat, then, and pull open all the valves," said the man, as he nervously brought his mouth down to the proper position. "Steady, now, I'm about to warble!"

"Come—up—boys—everybody—and—drink—with—the—landlord!" was what the man said, with an emphasis on every word, and the same was what the marvelous little wonder shrieked back:

"That's the sweetest music I've heard for about ten years," said the man with a palate and glowing eye, "and I reckon it's about that long since I've heard that good old tune ground out. I don't suppose I'll ever get another chance to hear it again, and so, if it ain't too much trouble, please run her back and shoot it out once or twice more. It's good for the rheumatiz, that is. My! what a head that man has! If he could only get up a jug now that could not be emptied!" and the man walked out with a sad look and an unsteady step.

No legacy is so rich as honesty.

Good character is above all things else.

Shun bad gains, these losses in disguise.

We should do good to our enemy and make him our friend.

The man who hanged himself died of his own free will and a cord.

A wife should be like roast lamb, tender and nicely dressed. No sauce required.

"Now is the accepted time," remarked the young man when his girl told him she would have him.

Put his fish-pole in the wood-shed,
Where the boys can't get it out;
Little George has gone to heaven
By the pyrotechnic route.

Say "good-morning," or "good evening," to the hostess, on leaving the room. "So long, old girl," has gone out, in the best society.

"How does painting agree with my daughter?" asked an anxious parent. "It makes her too red in the face," replied the teacher.

A negro teamster in Nashville declares that he must either give up driving mules or withdraw from the church, the two positions being incompatible.

A Lambertville is so sweet that when she makes cake she never has to use sugar. This item is vouched for by a young man of unquestioned integrity.

"Gentlemen," said an amateur farmer just from the city, writing to the chairman of an agricultural society, "put me down on your list of cattle for a calf."

"I wish I was in dat big hotel at Chicago," said a Vicksburg colored man the other day. "I'd lay back in a cheer and tell 'em to fetch me up a whole pie."

"I can tell the age of anything by looking at its teeth," said the hostler. "You can," responded a carpenter, "then just look at the teeth of this saw and tell me its age, will you?"

The man who loafs his time away around a one-horse grocery store, while his wife takes in washing to support him, can always tell you just what this country needs to enhance its prosperity.

"Did you know," said a cunning Yankee to a Jew, "that they hang Jews and donkeys together in Poland?" "Indeed! then it is well that you and I are not there," retorted the Jew.

A garrulous fop, who by his frivolous remarks had annoyed his partner in a ball-room, among other empty things asked whether she had ever had her ears pierced. "No," was the reply, "but I have often had them bored."

The Detroit Free Press has been to a horse race, and is moved to say: "A man who won't stand up and yell and swing his hat when a gang of 2:20 horses are coming down the home stretch in a bunch, must be veneered with sheet iron."

She was a charmer fair to see,
Perfect in figure and in size;
She had such lovely seal-brown hair,
Such glorious magenta eyes;
She sang and played exquisitely
On a marble-topped Steinway grand;
She hadn't much sense, but that didn't count,
For her papa had the sand.

Democratic Nominations.

FOR PRESIDENT,
Winfield Scott Hancock
OF PENNSYLVANIA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
William H. English,
OF INDIANA.

Democratic Electoral and Gubernatorial Convention.

The Democratic voters of the State of New Jersey, and all others desirous of uniting with them in securing pure, economical and constitutional government by the election of Winfield S. Hancock and William H. English, are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by the several County and City Executive Committees, to elect Delegates to a State Convention to be held at TAYLOR OPERA HOUSE, in the city of Trenton on for the purpose of placing in nomination nine electors for President and Vice President of the United States, and a Candidate for Governor of the State of New Jersey.

WEDNESDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER NEXT, AT 12 O'CLOCK, M.,

The basis of representation will be one Delegate for each one hundred Democratic votes, and one for each fraction of the same over fifty, cast at the last Gubernatorial election, and each Ward and Township shall be entitled to at least one Delegate.

If any Township has been created since the last Gubernatorial election, the representation from a County shall not be increased thereby, but the Delegates shall be apportioned among existing Townships by the County Committee according to the votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election.

WM. W. SHIPPEN, Chm'n., A. BROWNING,
R. F. STOCKTON, M. H. STRATTON,
G. D. W. VROOM, JNO. W. YATES,

THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Democratic electors of the Third Congressional District of New Jersey are requested to meet in their several townships and wards, at such times and places as may be designated in accordance with the usages of the party in their several counties, and appoint one delegate for every one hundred and one for every fraction over fifty Democratic votes cast in said townships and wards at the last Gubernatorial election, to represent said electors in the Democratic Convention for said District, to be held in the CITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK, ON TUESDAY, THE TWENTY-FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER NEXT, at 12 o'clock, M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent said District in the Congress of the United States.

JAMES S. YARD,
Chairman of last Convention.

Freehold, Aug. 16, 1880.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said entries to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made thereof according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX. "Amendments."

ATTEST: GEORGE WURTS,
Secretary of the Senate.
CUMMINGS O. COOPER,
Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the Constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year;" after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and every second year thereafter;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only;" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be in two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually;" and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 7. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

WATCHWORDS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

"The right of trial by Jury, the Habeas Corpus, the Liberty of the Press, the Freedom of Speech, the Natural Rights of Persons, and the Rights of Property must be preserved."—Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

"I will maintain that the entire freedom of thought and speech is consistent with the noblest aspirations of man and the happiest condition of his race.

"Power may destroy the forms but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword."—Letter of General Hancock, March 9, 1869.

"Military interference with elections is prohibited by law, and no soldiers will be allowed to appear at any polling places unless, as citizens of the State, they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting."—Order of General Hancock, December 18, 1867.

"Nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right.

"The great principles of American Liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and ever should be."—General Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

The Democratic County Executive Committee of Union County on last Wednesday designated the 30th day of August, as the time of holding Primaries in the various wards and townships of the County for the selection of delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention to be held at Trenton, Sep. 1st, and the 17th day of Sept. the time for selecting in the same manner delegates to attend the Congressional Convention to be held at New Brunswick, Sep. 21st. We have failed to receive the official call from the Chairman in time for this issue. It will appear in our next issue.

If elected I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union, and see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.—[General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

CHICKAMAUGA.

The Garfielders in New York have what they call a "Chickamauga Club," decorated by a picture representing General Garfield, after refusing to go to Chattanooga in retreat with General Rosecrans, pushing to the front and joining General Thomas.

That is campaign fiction.

Let us turn to the page of history.

Horace Greeley, in his work entitled "The American Conflict," says—"Thomas withstood and repelled assault after assault till sundown, when, by orders from Rosecrans at Chattanooga, communicated by chief of staff, General Garfield, who reached the ridge at 4 p. m., commenced the withdrawal of his troops to Rossville."

To make a military hero out of Garfield is about as hard a task as to white-wash his DeGolyer statesmanship.

MATHEMATICS.

Garfield—Ames, can you let me have a small sum this morning?

Ames—Willingly, my boy; how much do you want?

Garfield—Well, I don't know; what you can spare?

Ames—All right, I can work out that sum. There are ten shares Credit Mobilier.

Dr.—80 cents on the dollar.
Cr.—by rise in value.
Ditto by dividend.
Stock all paid for.
Balance of dividend $329.

That is just what you want. Three hundred and twenty nine dollars. Here is your check?

Garfield—Thank you, thank you; but mind this must be considered a loan?

Ames—Oh, yes, and as fast as the stock rises and dividends accrue (which, between us, you can help amazingly by voting right in Congress) I'll lend you some more. You never took a bribe!

Garfield—Never! Never!

Ames—(aside)—Hardly ever.

WORSE THAN CRIME.

There is not a man in the United States more thoroughly conversant with political affairs than John W. Forney, of Pennsylvania. He has long been a leading Republican and now publicly declares:

"General Garfield's accusers were not Democrats.

He was brought to the bar by his own party.

By the Republican press and the Republicans of his own country.

By the Republican committees of his own Congressional District.

By the Republican Congress of which he was a member, and by a Republican court of justice.

Had this record been known at Chicago General Garfield could not have been nominated.

Full information enables me to speak by the book when I assert that there was not a Republican leader of any note, equally those on the ground to slay and those who came to save Grant, that did not admit, on reflection, that Garfield's selection was a blunder, AND THAT THAT BLUNDER WAS WORSE THAN A CRIME."

HANCOCK'S LETTER.

There is such a thing as decency to be observed even among partisan controversialists.

The New York Tribune, with its accustomed disregard for truthful statement, put forth the assertion, that during the Presidential count of 1876-7, General Hancock had, under cover of a letter, communicated treasonable sentiments to General Sherman.

Like that journal's manufactured Southern outrages, proof was not desired, the design being, through malicious assertion, to circulate a story prejudicial to General Hancock as a candidate for President.

The unscrupulous partisan editor has been sky-rocketed by his own invention.

General Sherman, being so requested, promptly furnished a copy of the letter for publication.

It is now before the people, and instead of a revolutionary edict, turns out to be one of the ablest productions ever penned by human hand. Written in the confidence of privacy, it avows loyalty to Constitutional Government from beginning to end, and stamps its distinguished author as thoroughly proficient in the science of statesmanship as he has shown himself to be in the profession of arms.

That letter the Tribune, after making a false charge, refused admittance into its columns, and there comes the lack of decency.

The reason why is obvious.

It is universally admired by independent Republicans and will add thousands to the Hancock vote.

They have read it.

It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people.—[General Hancock.

A REPUBLICAN MOB.

The Republican newspapers, with much self-righteousness, are constantly slurring Democrats as the "rum party" and the adversaries of Temperance Reform.

We might expose such hypocrisy, by comparing Republican practice with precept on the liquor drinking question in many ways, but for the present, will only call to the stand Hon. Neal Dow, heretofore a Republican, and the eminent Temperance leader of New England. Mr. Dow recently said:

"On the 22nd of this month, a Temperance Convention was mobbed and broken up at Augusta by roughs and rowdies led on by Republican office-holders. The mob was Republican, deliberately planned and carried out in the supposed interest of the Republican party. I very much mistake the temper of the Temperance men of Maine if they continue to uphold a party which tramples upon the dearest rights of citizens."

A Temperance Convention broken up and dispersed by a Republican mob in Maine—mobbed by the party of vaunted sobriety and virtue.

The sixteenth part of a similar outrage inflicted upon gathered Republicans at the South, would have turned Republican orators and editors throughout the North black in the face with indignation.

Precept without corresponding practice is like selling brass jewelry for gold and then clinching the bargain with a long eulogy on truth and honesty.

FEDERALISM REVIVED.

A Democrat residing in Berlin, Vermont, having stretched across the street a Hancock and English banner, an emblem of the Constitution and Union, his Republican landlord ordered the terrible thing to be removed, which imperious demand the Democrat, by virtue of free citizenship, of course declined to obey, whereupon the partisan despot pulled the banner down, tore it into shreds and burned that portion containing the names of the Democratic candidates. That banner burner shrieks day and night about imaginary Southern outrages, and, no doubt, his forefathers were actively engaged sending treasonable communications to the enemy off the coast of New England, when Democrats were fighting and whipping Old England in the war of 1812.

DECLARING FOR HANCOCK.

Doctor Stock, long a Republican, and last year the Greenback candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Pennsylvania, has announced his support of General Hancock for President.

Among other reasons for such sensible action the Doctor gives the following:

"General Hancock is both a statesman and a soldier.

General Garfield, though a well educated man, is neither.

General Hancock is a patriot.

General Garfield is nothing but a politician, and either a very corrupt one or a very ignorant man.

If his course with reference to Credit Mobilier and the DeGolyer pavement contract was not corrupt, then he is one of the most unsophisticated and ignorant of men."

And then Mr. D. G. Roberts, of East Norwich, Connecticut, comes forth and declares:

"I have looked over the field, scanned the aspect of the candidates and their parties as they are to-day, and though I have been heretofore voting with the Republican party I have resolved, if my life is spared till next November, to vote for that great Union soldier, General Hancock."

DEMOCRACY.

A Republican journal published in New Jersey, and claiming to be high toned, recently gave vent to this bitter remark:—"We despise the Democratic party, but respect a great many of its deluded members."

The editor may rest perfectly content.

Since the earliest days of the Republic, the Democratic party has been despised, aye hated by the enemies of civil and religious liberty and by the advocates of an aristocratic government.

Nevertheless, the Democratic party remains a conquering power, the resolute defender of popular rights, a terror to tyrants and corruptionists, and embraces within its fold the very best citizens of the United States.

Those members want no such proffered respect, coupled with vindictive hostility to their party. They are not deluded. They know well what political truth is, and deem it both duty and honor to be Democrats.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

VERY THIN.

The Republican papers are circulating a story that General Garfield had a bill passed through Congress reducing the revenue tax on coal oil to a nominal sum for the ostensible purpose of relieving poor consumers, but which happened to operate also in favor of the princely merchants and speculators, who, to show their gratitude to the patriotic Mr. Garfield, offered him a purse of ten thousand dollars, which he declined to accept.

That is too thin.

The idea of a Congressman, who once pocketed, as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, a fee of $5,000 for putting through a worthless wooden pavement contract for De Golyer, declining $10,000 on the oil question, may be swallowed by fools or lunatics, but not by any sensible impartial man.

Such a story is very suspicious, in view of the gentleman's authenticated public record.

The Garfield leaders ought to be more guarded.

There is danger of their inventing too much.

ANOTHER MORAL IDEA.

A Garfield paper in Buffalo says: "It is worth while to remember at this time that a Democratic House passed a Southern claims bill and that it was defeated by a Republican Senate."

Which is a fraudulent statement made expressly to deceive.

The Democratic House did pass a "Southern claims bill."

It was offered by Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, of New York.

What was its purport?

It provided that no claim of any sort growing out of the rebellion should be considered or passed upon by Congress, but that all such petitions should be referred to the Court of Claims, a tribunal made up exclusively of Republicans.

The Republican Senate defeated that bill.

And why?

Because such plotters as Conkling, Morton and Edmunds wanted to scare Northern simpletons with the dreadful bugaboo of Southern claims.

That was why they voted down Mr. Potter's just proposition.

Trot out another deception, Messrs. Garfielders!

Clear in intellect, quick in perception, honest in instinct and cool in judgment, Winfield Scott Hancock stands to-day the equal of any man in the United States in a just conception of the principles of Constitutional Government.

A colored Republican was in Plainfield the other day soliciting funds and desiring to ventilate his eloquence for the cause. The Republican party organ warned people to beware of the gentleman. What a cruel outrage? Had it occurred in Alabama or Mississippi, how the Northern heart would have been fired to avenge the iniquity of a solid South?

"I am a Republican, but this year I vote for Hancock, because I think he is the best man, and besides, I believe the time has come for a change of Administration, twenty years being too long for any party to hold power." That was the voluntary declaration made in our hearing the other day, and it is the settled determination of tens of thousands of Republicans.

Mr. Garfield has been swinging through the State of New York, down the Central and up the Erie roads, stopping at each station to salute, hat in hand, the people and to remind them of his candidature for office. In 1852 the opposition nominee for President pursued that style of electioneering, and the Democratic, Franklin Pierce, came nigh carrying every State in the Union.

Cheer, Boys, Cheer!

BY CAPT. [illegible]

AIR—Sparkling and Bright.

[Respectfully dedicated to the Hancock Veteran Legion of Elizabeth.]

Bright are the stars on our country's flag,
With the hues of the rainbow blended,
And it still shall wave o'er the free and brave,
By Democrats Defended.

CHORUS:
Then cheer, boys, cheer! The time is near,
For the people's proclamation,
That Hancock shall sit in the chair of state,
To guide and rule the nation.

Pirate and fraud our foes applaud,
While they conspire and blunder,
But time is short, for we have them caught,
All loaded down with plunder.

Chorus—Then cheer, boys, cheer! &c.

They know they must fall, and their cheeks turn pale,
They falter and dissemble,
But the truth's revealed and their doom is sealed
They have cause to fear and tremble.

Chorus—Then cheer, boys, cheer! &c.

Hancock, the brave, will the country save,
To victory he will lead us,
He will leave no trace of the hungry race
Who now oppress and bleed us.

Chorus—Then cheer, boys, cheer! &c.

Come rally all, to the bugle call!
Fall in, fall in for battle.
The Rads will hear our shout and cheer,
As the hot shot round them rattle.

Chorus—Then cheer, boys, cheer! &c.

General Hancock saved the Union in war and he will save the Constitution in peace.

General Hancock is going into the White House, General Garfield into the Senate Chamber.

The name of Jackson evoked popular enthusiasm as in like manner does that of Hancock.

The Republican theory that General Hancock is a mere dummy does not seem to prosper.

Mr. Garfield has reached his Ohio home and is lost to sight. The traveling show was a poor investment.

General Hancock fought for the Union to the close of the war, General Garfield left to run for Congress.

Bob Ingersoll says he cannot be a Democrat. The good old party of the Constitution is to be sincerely congratulated.

The meeting of Garfield and Colfax at Chautauqua was melancholy. On one side arose the ghost of Credit Mobilier, and on the other De Golyer grinned a ghastly smile. Garfield made a brief visit.

Mr. Hayes is going on a two month's pleasure trip to the Pacific States. President Hancock will, after the fourth of March next, stay in Washington and earn his salary by faithfully discharging official duty.

The anti-Democratic doctrine in this country, like the doctrine of monarchs the world over, is that Rulers know better how to govern the People than the people know how to govern themselves. The enforcement of that idea caused the American Revolution.

The people are tired of corruption. They are tired of that feverish anxiety which comes from the exercise of unconstitutional and arbitrary methods of government. They are tired of the usurpations and reckless extravagance of the party in power. They wish to return once more to the honesty, economy, simplicity and certainty of Democratic men and Democratic measures.

The Republicans have nominated Mr. Potts for Governor. They expect him to liberally respond through his plethoric purse, so that his party may carry, if possible, the Legislature. That would give them a chance to choose a U. S. Senator. Of course, it is not expected to elect Mr. Potts Governor in the Democratic State of New Jersey, but then the reward of his sacrifice in case the Legislature was Republican, would be the U. S. Senatorship. He will not get it, however.

The Republican candidate for the Presidency, in addressing a crowd of serenaders in New York the other night, said:

"We gathered the boys from all our farms and shops and stores and schools and homes from all over the Republic, and they went forth unknown to fame but returned enrolled on the roster of immortal heroes."

Yes, yes, Gen. Garfield, you got a commission and went with the boys who were gathered, but you left them to do the fighting, and ran home before the roll of fame was made up, and got a seat in Congress.—True American.

"A full vote, a free ballot and a fair count."—[Hancock to Sherman. December 28, 1876.

Veteran Hancock Association.

MEETING OF THE STATE COMMITTEE—AN ADDRESS TO THE PUBLIC.

An adjourned meeting of the National Committee of the Veteran Hancock Association of the State of New Jersey, convened in the Essex County Club room on Broad street, Newark, on Monday last. There were present Gen. Gershom Mott, of Trenton; Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of Plainfield; Col. Onderdonk, Dr. A. N. Dougherty, Judge Finley A. Johnson and Col. James E. Fleming, of Newark. Gen. Mott presided and Gen. Sterling acted as secretary. Judge Johnson was elected Judge Advocate from the civilian auxiliary. Much important business was transacted. The following public address was issued:

COMRADES AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:—Having been delegated by the National Committee of the Hancock Veteran Association to render such assistance as is in our power to further the election of General Winfield Scott Hancock to the Presidency of the United States, we call upon all who are in favor of an honest administration in which the military shall be subordinated to the civil power, the rights of persons and States be respected, and all sectional differences forever put at rest, to organize themselves into clubs or veteran associations for the vigorous prosecution of the campaign upon which we have entered. We congratulate you upon the nomination of one who combines more, happily, than any man of modern times, those qualities which made the illustrious Washington first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen. With such a leader our success cannot be doubtful.

B. F. Onderdonk, Gershom Mott, Pres.,
E. H. Wright, A. N. Dougherty, M. D.,
Julian Scott, James E. Fleming,
Finley F. Johnson, W. P. Wilson,
Wm. H. Sterling, Sec'y.

The following circular letter was directed to be sent to the various Hancock organizations of the State:

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL COMMITTEE VETERAN HANCOCK ASSOCIATION FOR THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Dear Sir:—I am directed by this committee to request that you will report to me, at your earliest convenience, and once a week thereafter, the number of officers and men and name of club or clubs already organized or in process of organization in your city, town, township or county, who are in sympathy with our efforts to elect General W. S. Hancock the next President of the United States.

First—The number of veterans.
Second—The number of civilians.
Third—Previous political affiliation, and any other information that may be of interest to the cause.

WM. H. STERLING, Sec'y,
Plainfield, New Jersey.

Very encouraging reports were received from all parts of the State, showing great enthusiasm for Hancock and English.

The Committee adjourned to meet at the rooms of the Essex County Democratic Club in Newark, on Monday, Aug. 23d, 1880.

Since General Jackson was before the people for President fifty-two years ago, there has not been such a spontaneous uprising among the masses as now greets with favor the name of General Hancock. From every nook and corner of the country comes declared intentions of Republicans to vote for him. The following letter from a farmer residing in Cattaraugus County, New York, is a specimen of thousands:

"I am a farmer, near sixty years of age. I have been a life-long Republican. My teams, my money and myself have ever been at the service of the Republican party. I am a Republican to-day and expect to be as to principles. I believe, Mr. Tilden was fairly elected four years ago, but was defrauded out of his seat. I hope General Hancock will be elected. I shall vote for him, and I certainly believe, if he is elected, he will be inaugurated on the 4th of next March. I believe General Hancock to be an able, honest man and soldier-statesman, and shall work and vote for him."

For Congress.

At the head of our editorial columns this week, appears the call of the chairman of the last Congressional Convention, for the holding of a Convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress in the Third District. The time of holding the Primaries to select delegates to the Convention have been announced for Feb. 17th, and it behooves every Democrat and friend interested in the welfare of the Democratic party in the selection of a good candidate for the honor, to attend such primaries and select only men of good, sound judgment, for the occasion demands it. Union County is entitled to this nomination, and there is no reason why the honor should not be accorded her. There are plenty of capable men in Union County to accept the nomination and win. Let it be a point of the Democracy of the County to look after the Primary meetings, select good delegates, centre on one Union County man, whoever he may be, and—stick to him. That is the only way to secure the honor. Otherwise the chance will again slip away from us.

Young Men's Hancock & English Club of Plainfield.

The above organization held an adjourned meeting in the rooms of the Democratic Association on Monday evening last, President Walter L. Hetfield in the chair and Louis M. Stover, Secretary. There was a very large attendance of the young supporters of Hancock & English, and the utmost enthusiasm existed. A Constitution and By-Laws were adopted, various Committees appointed and other business of importance transacted. The meeting adjourned to meet again Thursday evening, Aug. 26th.

Governor Ludlow.

Ex-senator Leon Abbett, of Jersey City, has written a letter to Senator John R. McPherson, declining to be a candidate for Governor of New Jersey. Senator Abbett and his friends will support ex-Senator George C. Ludlow, of Middlesex County, for the nomination, believing that it will harmonize the Democratic party of New Jersey and secure a Democratic State Legislature.

Hancock Veterans.

Last Wednesday evening, the regular meeting night of the "Plainfield Hancock Veteran Association," the spacious rooms of the Democratic Association was filled to overflowing with the veterans who espouse the cause of Hancock and English, Pres. E. A. Gross occupying the chair with Julian Scott as Secretary. Much business of importance was transacted, principally that of the procurement of drums and fifes for the drum corps and uniforms for the club. A committee was appointed to have the drums and fifes ready at the next meeting of the Veterans Wednesday evening, also to procure samples of uniforms for adoption the same night. Twenty-three new members were added to the roll, several of whom were Republicans. The members of this flourishing organization is rapidly nearing the flattering number of 200.

A Fragrant Breath and Pearly Teeth Are easily obtained by cleansing your teeth daily with that justly popular dentifrice, SOZODONT. Composed of rare antiseptic herbs, it imparts whiteness to the teeth, a delicious aroma to the breath, and preserves intact, from youth to old age, the teeth. Acidity of the stomach will destroy the strongest teeth unless its effects are counteracted with SOZODONT, and this pure tooth-wash protects the dental surfaces by removing every impurity that adheres to them. Ask your druggist for SOZODONT.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap2y1

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS!

"The Plainfield Democratic Association," hold their regular meetings the 1st TUESDAY evening in each month. The rooms at headquarters, Front St., opposite the Post Office, are open every evening for all who favor the election of HANCOCK & ENGLISH, to visit.

JAS. E. MARTINE,
President.

Hancock Veteran Association.

The regular meetings of the Hancock Veteran Association of Plainfield, are held in the rooms of the Democratic Association every Wednesday evening. The rooms are open every evening for members and visitors.

Young Men's Hancock & English Club.

The regular meeting nights of the above club is Thursday evening of each week, at Democratic Headquarters.

W. L. HETFIELD, Pres.
LOUIS M. STOVER, Sec'y.

GRAPES have made their appearance on the fruit stands.

WATERMELONS this year are of unusually good flavor and size.

THE woods are full of camp meetings, harvest hopes, picnics and Hancock voters.

THE Monmouth County Agricultural Fair will be held the third week in September.

THE forty-ninth annual exhibition of the American Institute will be opened on September 15th.

DON'T let burdock, thistles and wild carrot seeds ripen, but cut down the obnoxious weeds immediately.

TRINITY REFORM CHURCH will be closed for two weeks to allow workmen to thoroughly renovate and repair the church edifice.

THE sidewalk in front of the Trinity Reformed church, is being improved by re-curbing the sides in a substantial manner. Our old friend D. Thickstun has the contract.

THE artesian well being driven at the Paterson Rolling Mill is now 2,000 feet deep, and has not yet struck a steady spring of water. The formation is still red sand stone.

THE exterior of the 1st Baptist church edifice is receiving fresh coats of paint through the hands of Weaver Bros., while in the interior the vestibule is being frescoed by Mr. James Smith.

UZAL M. OSBORN's Republican Semi-weekly Advertiser of Rahway, has "gone up." Although a veteran in the business the found dailies and semi-weeklies are not paying investments in Rahway.

THE beautiful stallion daily to be seen upon our streets, ridden by his groom, Henry Southard, is the property of John I. Holly, Esq., whose stable contains none but the purest and best of stock.

THERE seems no prospect of the recovery of the bodies of the workmen at the Hudson river tunnel. J. E. Richards, an engineer with good recommendations, has offered to clear out the tunnel and raise the bodies in ten days, for $40,000.

MESSRS. Shepherd, Johnson & Co. have received the contract and are now engaged in the construction of thirty comfortable box-stalls on the Union and Middlesex Counties' Fair Grounds in the northwest section, where last year the pigstys disgraced the grounds.

OUR citizens, and especially masonic brethren, should not forget the excursion under the auspices of Atlas Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Westfield, on Thursday, Aug. 26th, to Long Branch and Ocean Grove. Train leaves Westfield 8:45 a. m. This will be a most enjoyable excursion.

THERE will be a grand excursion to Long Branch, Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, in aid of the Building Fund of the "Heavenly Rest Mission Chapel" of Evona, N. J., Friday, Aug. 27th, 1880. The train leaves Dunellen at 8:25; Evona, 8:28; Plainfield, 8:32. Tickets $1.00.

As an evidence of the activity in building matters in Plainfield, we mention the fact that Mr. Jeremiah Manning, a prominent builder, states he has more contracts for the erection of buildings than he can attend to. Four new houses are now in course of erection through his hands.

THE Grove Meeting last Sunday was largely attended, and the remarks of a venerable looking blind preacher, Rev. Dr. Parker, were listened to with wrapt attention. His theme was Temperance. The meeting was presided over by Mayor Harper, Rev. E. P. Ketcham offering the opening prayer, and making closing remarks.

THE "Johnson property," on the northwest corner of Peace and Second Streets, held for a long time by the Dime Savings Institution of this city, has been disposed of to a German gentleman, whose name we have not learned. The new owner is cutting down the trees about the place, and it is said contemplates opening a grocery store on the site.

THE Plainfield Cornet Band now hold regular meetings on Monday and Thursday evenings at their headquarters, J. Blatz' Hotel, North Plainfield. This Band is rapidly improving in efficiency, and constantly have orders ahead on their books. Their terms are reasonable, their music good, and there is no reason why the present campaign should not be of benefit to them pecuniarily and in musical perfection.

THE most pitiful spectacle in connection with the present political campaign is the Greenbacker. There is no earthly excuse for him, and every man of sense and thoughtfulness, when meeting him, instinctively wonders whether the fellow is a fanatic or an idiot. During the "hard times" there was some show of reason in Greenbackery; but now, in this year of grace 1880, it is like an exploded Fourth-of-July rocket which on the 5th the over-enthusiastic small boy vainly tries to fire off a second time.

ONE of the coziest residences and most handsomely laid-out grounds on Park avenue, is that of Mr. R. S. Little, just beyond the Fair Grounds. Mr. L. and family returned last week from a month's summering at Cape May, N. J. to find that during their absence their faithful gardener, Robert Kyle, had kept the premises up in a most capable and efficient manner, of which he should feel justly proud. The premises abound with fine fruit trees loaded down with choice fruit, which are generously dispensed to those friends who call at Mr. L's hospitable mansion.

IN all well-regulated cities where there are the best of conducted public schools, it is always necessary to have good private schools and academies, where all branches of education may be taught by competent teachers and good board and comfortable quarters given to scholars. Of such institutions Plainfield can boast of a well conducted Academy for Boys, where select English, Classical and Commercial studies are the principal features. The ultimate design of the institution is to prepare Boys and Young Men for business or for College. Mr. James Lyon, the Principal of The Plainfield Academy, founded that institution in 1872, and has so successfully managed its affairs that to day it ranks second to none in the State as a Private Boarding School in cities of larger size even than Plainfield. By addressing the Principal, a circular, containing all necessary information will at once be forwarded.

THE State Fair at Waverly opens Sept. 30th.

THE formation of a Hancock & English Glee Club is the next thing in order.

THE Young Men's Democratic Club are rapidly increasing their membership.

WHAT has become of the Lion? That Hancock & English banner is still floating to the breeze.

VENNOR, you are a—brick. There was perceptible frost visible in this vicinity Monday and Tuesday mornings last.

REV. Dr. Ketcham will address the Temperance Grove Meeting next Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. All are welcome.

THE Republicans will swing another banner, as soon as they can get the name of their candidate for Governor painted thereon. He will be made Pot-pie of next Nov.

THE Second Annual Fair and Exhibition of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association opens on Sept. 27th, near Plainfield, and continues the 28th, 29th and 30th.

VENNOR predicted a cool to cold term, with frosts, between the 15th and 20th of August, after which heat may be again expected up to Sptember 1st. He struck the cool wave portion all right on the 15th.

IF you notice anything remarkable about our hat band, just inspect the same. It is made from birch-bark, cut and prepared by Mr. M. M. Thorn while on his recent trip to the Adirondack regions, and presented to the senior.

A DECIDED improvement in the looks of the surroundings of the Friends Meeting House, corner Peace and Third Sts., has been made by those having the matter in charge, in cutting away the rank weeds and grass growing along the sidewalk on Third street.

MANY Republicans express themselves as disgusted with the enterprise (?) shown by the parties interested in swinging a Republican banner across the street with a view to stop the Democrats from swinging theirs in the same locality, after advertisement had been given of such purpose.

THE Democrats of Plainfield have purchased a fine piece of ordnance, six pound calibre, with which they propose to fire salutes from during the campaign. A company of artillerymen is being organized, who will have the piece in charge on such occasions. Oh! she'll make a noise.

JOSEPH M. MYERS, Esq., Cashier of the City National Bank, has been appointed Agent for Plainfield and vicinity of the old and reliable Home Insurance Company of New York, which for many years was represented here by the late Zachariah Webster, and also by his son, the late B. Frank Webster.

DURING the prevalence of the severe thunder shower which visited this section Wednesday evening of last week, the barn of Rev. Mr. Gibbs, at Millington, N. J., was struck by lightning and entirely consumed, together with all its contents. There was no insurance on either building or stock.

IT is said that a use has at last been discovered for potato bugs. A Maryland man who had employed a lot of boys to gather the pests from his field killed them by boiling them and was surprised to find that fabrics dipped into the water in which the bugs had been boiled turned a beautiful permanent scarlet. He proposes to turn his discovery to practical account.

A YOUNG man passed down Albany street on Thursday afternoon on a bicycle. Dressed in a suit of dark corduroy with knee breeches and being an expert rider, he attracted considerable attention. He rode from Plainfield and passed over the Albany street bridge to return, via Metuchen. Several young men in this city are quite expert riders of the bicycle. —New Brunswick Fredonian.

WE were witness to a bet the other evening as follows: One Hundred Dollars was put up by a Hancock advocate against the hound dog of a Garfielder that New Jersey would go Democratic by over 5,000 majority, the dog to be killed immediately after election, by the winner—the Hancock better, of course. The dog was delivered promptly into the stakeholder's hands, who tied the animal up. Mr. Hound, however, gnawed his rope apart and returned to his former home. He didn't want to die just yet.

JULIAN SCOTT is the happy possessor of an interesting revolutionary relic, in the shape of a piece of bomb or shell, one of three unearthed by Captain J. McCasey, Superintendent of the Atlantic Coast Mining Company, on the premises leased by that corporation back of Washington Rock, known as the "Field Mine." It is supposed that these shells were fired by the British army during their invasion in this section when Washington was in the habit of visiting that historic spot on top of the mountain known as Washington Rock to view the movements of the army encamped on the plain beneath his feet.

DR. BOBUM, a noted advocate of Tanner principles, visited our sanctum last Tuesday, and to test his capacity for watermelon, we wrote a suggestive note to Mr. George Rockfellow, of the firm of Rockfellow & Kilbourn, grocers, corner of Park and North avenues, asking his opinion of the Dr's strange taste for watermelons after his long fast. For an answer, we received a mammoth specimen of Georgia melon, which was speedily devoured with the aid of the whole combined Force of the establishment. Our doubts are removed. He who would enjoy health and regain strength, purchase them 40 lb. melons of Rockfellow.

THE body of Mrs. Elizabeth Compton was found last Wednesday morning in a shallow pond at Metuchen, N. J. Mrs. Compton is about 90 years old, and was the widow of Ephraim Compton, who has been dead for over forty years. She lived with her son, Joel Compton, at the old homestead bequeathed to her by her husband. Mr. Compton tells the story of his mother's death as follows: "This morning mother left the house for a walk at 9:30 o'clock; about 11 o'clock the servant girl found her lying in the water of the pond near the house. The pond is nowhere more than twelve or fourteen inches deep, and as she was lying on her back her face was not half covered with water. She frequently said that water on the back made her head feel better, and I think it quite possible that in a moment of insanity she laid down in the pool to wet her head, and died without really intending suicide."

THE Garfieldites of Plainfield have had a good deal to say since the Hancock & English banner was suspended across the street from the Democratic headquarters. They think there is to much green about the portraits of the candidates, and they cry aloud in their agony because there is not a coat-of-arms, a harp, or some other emblem appearing on the face of the banner. All this they contend will make votes for Ames D. G. Garfield. Now will some one please enlighten us as to the reason why there is no name of any party appearing on the banner surreptitiously thrown across the street in the same locality by Republicans, when they found that the Democrats were about to hang out their banner? Is it because they were ashamed of their candidates? The Hancock and English banner bears above the portraits of its candidates the words —"Regular Democratic Nominations." On the Republican banner there appears nothing to tell us whether the portraits displayed are candidates of the Republican, Greenback, Prohibition, or any other what-is-it party. Enlighten us, please, and don't talk about greenness. Give it a name!

THE Republican party of New Jersey, realizing the fact of their inability to carry the State, has, this year—as a leading Republican of Plainfield remarked to us yesterday—gone to Pott.

EVERY Hancock & English Club and organization in Plainfield numbers among its membership Republicans who have deserted the Garfield banner. They are not "heelers" either, but intelligent men.

LET us hear the names of any Democrats (?) who have joined a Garfield club in Plainfield. If there are any such they ought to feel as proud to have their names in print as any traitor would in a gay campaign suit or behind a drum.

THE Plainfield Republicans had to paint the stars and stripes on their banner, that observers might know the principles of their party. But they had not the facial area necessary to put a uniform on their "General" and claim him thereby as one of the saviours of the Union.

SOME malicious person cruelly shot a valuable dog belonging to a gentleman on Seventh street, one morning last week, injuring the animal severely. The owner desires us to say that if the person who shot the dog will forward his name to the owner he will guarantee to give the shooter suitable satisfaction.

AN engine attached to a coal train passed through our city on Tuesday evening last burning soft coal, the smoke from which for a few moments obscured the view for blocks. It is to be hoped for the continuance of the good reputation of the Central Railroad that this will be the only instance of such a nuisance.

DON'T forget the excursion up the Hudson to Alpine Grove to-day, (Friday) for the benefit of Mr. Edward Meader, a former conductor on the Central Railroad, but now in destitute circumstances caused by illness. While the object is a good and charitable one, the excursion will be a most enjoyable occasion.

HOTEL Netherwood was the scene of a fine entertainment last Tuesday evening, the guests being favored with readings by the popular young elocutionist, James S. Burdett, who is stopping at the hotel, singing by a Glee Club of young men, banjo solos, &c. The occasion was a enjoyable one and highly appreciated by the guests.

THE Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine Manufacturing Company have removed their quarters to No. 23 East Front street, where instruction in running the machine are given purchasers by competent lady attendants. DR. C. A. Bucklin, surgeon to the New York Eye, Ear and Throat Institute, as recently performed an operation on one of the eyes of Mr. Henry J. Hankinson of this city, who has been blind for the past eight years, removing a cataract therefrom. DECIDED improvements are again being made in Laing's Hotel by the present proprietor, Col. Geo. Miller. The old kitchen part of the building is being remodelled and transformed into a handsome room, in which will be placed two of the latest style billiard tables. The next thing we expect to hear of is that the enterprising and genial Col. is having a long-needed want attached to the hotel —a bowling alley. We are glad to learn that the patronage of the hotel, under Mr. Miller's management, is rapidly increasing.

IT is amusing to witness the antics of the Republicans of Plainfield in their endeavors to bolster up their cause. First, one of their leaders goes to the Republican headquarters in N. Y. city and tells his hearers in a glowing speech that "Plainfield will give Garfield a majority." Wonderful prophecy, when it is considered that our poor benighted city is in the habit of giving from two to three hundred and fifty Republican majority. (This year, however, it may be an exception, because there is no certainty of its going for Ames D. G. Garfield.) Next, they organize four campaign clubs (?) with names of members on the rolls of one which appear on another. Then they capture (?) the colored vote (we don't say "niggers," as they do) by organizing them into a club, (they tried two, but it wouldn't work,) and now they say there is no life in the Democratic party of Plainfield, because the leaders and members of that party don't make a great spread, build a stable, etc., and let every one know what they are doing. Well, all we can say is, that with the three campaign clubs already organized, (and more to come) of the friends of Hancock & English in Plainfield, the members of which number many from the Republican ranks, we defy and ask the Republicans to produce and publish in full, the name of a single Democrat who has joined one of their clubs, (?) and furthermore, we will mildly state to the terrified Republican leaders (?) of Plainfield, that the Democracy are moving on their works, and propose to capture them on Nov. 2, 1880.

Church Dedication.

The new R. C. Church, "St. Mary of the Assumption," in this city, will be dedicated on Wednesday, Sep. 8, at 10:30 o'clock, A. M., on which occasion there will be interesting ceremonies.

Congregationalists at Coney.

In saying that the excursion of the Congregationalists to the Iron Pier on Thursday of last week, was as successful as it deserved to be, is saying a great deal. Under the able and efficient management of Mr. George Rockfellow, the out-door entertainments of this Sunday School are always among the most enjoyable and praiseworthy of the season, and the one just passed was no exception to the usual rule of excellence. Twelve loaded cars left this city on the day selected, and although they "failed to connect" at the Jersey City terminus and were compelled to wait some time for the boat that had been engaged to meet them, yet all arrived safely at the Pier by noon and proceeded to seek the pleasures which the Island grants. Those who failed to discover and pursue an unending continuance of pastimes, can blame only themselves, as the majority came home surfeited with enjoyment. In return for the untiring labors of the managers, a "big sum" is added to the treasury of the church.

Grand Concert at Hotel Netherwood.

This (Friday) evening a Grand Concert will be given at Hotel Netherwood, in which will appear some of the most distinguished Artists of the day. The programme will be found in full in our advertising columns. The price of admission is 50 cts." For sale at Reynolds' and Stelle's Drug Stores.

A Grand Picnic.

On Thursday, Aug. 26th, the members and friends of A. O. H. No. 4, of Plainfield, will hold their First Annual Picnic in Stelle's Grove, on Plainfield avenue, this city. Prof. Franze has been engaged to furnish music for dancing, a large platform being erected for that purpose. A smaller platform will be erected for old-fashioned reels and jigs. Refreshments will be furnished but no intoxicating liquors allowed on the grounds. Tickets 25 cents. Dancing commences at 1 p. m. and will be continued in the evening, when the grove will be brilliantly illuminated.

To the Secretaries of Union County Democratic Organizations.

All Hancock and English Campaign Clubs and other organizations which support the Democratic candidates are requested to send to W. H. Barnum, Chairman National Democratic Committee, 138 Fifth avenue, New York—

1st. The name and location of their organization.

2d. A statement of the number of members enrolled.

3d. The names of the officers.

4th. Accounts of meetings held.

More Enthusiasm.

At 2 p. m. on Friday the 27th inst, the inhabitants of Alton (known as Dog Tavern) and vicinity will unite in carrying out the old time principles of Jeffersonian Democracy—followed by themselves and their forefathers year after year—by erecting a hickory pole at the four corners adjacent to Mr. Benjamin Connett's tavern. From this will be unfurled a Hancock and English flag, and as invitations to speak upon the occasion have been sent to Captain James Brady and other well-known orators, all who attend may be assured of an interesting time.

Truth.

During the present century, when the majority of our newspapers appear to be controlled by private cliques, political organizations &c., and publish what they are told, instead of what the public demand and are entitled to, it is decidedly refreshing and relieving to peruse the columns of a paper so fearless in the right and so determined to discountenance the wrong—whatever the political complexion of the party or person—as the New York Truth. Upholding the nomination of General Grant and the principles of the Republican party, yet its eyes are not blind to the tainted character and blemished reputation of James A. Garfield, nor is it backward in expressing the sentiments of all unbiased and independent thinkers, to the effect that Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock is the fitter candidate.

A Beautiful Flower.

A beautiful tropical flower is that species known as Espiritu Santo, or "Flower of the Holy Ghost," which, though once rare, can now be easily obtained in its native country at Panama or Aspinwall while many specimens are found in conservatories in this country. A description of it is thus faithfully portrayed in an article written by F. N. Otis, M. D., and published in Harpers in 1867: "Its blossom, of alabaster whiteness, approaches the tulip in form and gives forth a powerful perfume not unlike that of the magnolia; but it is neither for the beauty of shape, its purity of color, nor its fragrance that it is chiefly esteemed. Resting within the cup of the flower, so marvelously formed that no human skill, be it ever so cunning, could excel the resemblance, lies the prone image of a dove. Its exquisitely moulded pinions hang lifeless from its sides, the head bends gently forward, the tiny bill, tipped with a delicate carmine, almost touches its snow-white breast, while the expression of the entire image (and it requires no stretch of the imagination to see the expression) seems the very incarnation of meekness and ethereal innocence." It is an annual, blooming in July, August and September. There are several specimens of this plant and flower in this city. On our desk lies a specimen presented us from the conservatory of Mrs. Seymour Halt, residing on Union avenue. This lady has had several of the plants in her possession for years, and has presented her friends annually with bulbs from them, who have had no trouble in producing flower-bearing stalks from the bulb. We know of two instances where plants raised from these bulbs are now ready to bloom. The flower is certainly beautiful and wonderful.

The Firemen Aroused.

It used to be the boast of the Plainfield firemen that the annual parades of the Plainfield Fire Department exceeded all others of like kind in the State for display, deportment and elegance. Of late years, however, an apathy has come over our fire laddies, and annual parades were talked over as things of the past. We are glad to record, however, that new life has been infused in the breasts of Plainfield firemen, and they have resolved to once more have a parade and inspection, which is promised to eclipse all others of past years. At a meeting of the officers of the various fire companies, with the Chief and Assistant Engineers, held in "Alert" Hose Co's house last Tuesday evening, it was unanimously resolved that the Plainfield Fire Department parade with their apparatus on Thursday, October 14th next. These parades, while a source of benefit to the department itself in cementing together the companies and their members in closer bonds of friendship, is of still greater importance to our citizens themselves, who are enabled to see of what class of citizens the Department is composed, and learn the strength and condition of their allies and machinery with which to combat the fiery element. Not only this, but the city itself is benefited by the influx of strangers who come to view the demonstration; it is a benefit to the storekeeper and land owner alike, for who knows how many persons are convinced of the eligibility of a city like ours as a place of residence by a first visit to us on such occasions. We are led to speak thus because we think our citizens should assist the members of the Department to make the occasion a grand one by lending their aid in decorating their residences and places of business appropriately on the day, and also by contributing with their cash, which is a desirable consideratum, and justly due to the class of men who are willing to turn out at all times and in every kind of weather to battle with one of the most destructive monsters known —Fire. They do it gratuitously, too, remember, pay their own expenses and receive the —— thanks sometimes and curses, other times, of a certain class of citizens. The Fire Board itself is in such a crippled condition financially, as to render any aid in this particular toward a parade. Therefore the firemen must bear the expense themselves if they do not receive aid from those who ought to give it to them—the people whose property they risk their lives to save. We are confident our citizens will respond liberally to the firemen when they are called upon for "supplies," and they will be rewarded by seeing the finest firemen's parade in our city it has been their pleasure to view in many years.

Narrow Escape from Serious Injury.

Monday evening last about eight o'clock, when Park avenue was crowded with carriages and pedestrians, those in the immediate vicinity of Roberts & Cadmus' Livery, were startled by seeing a horse attached to a light open wagon, in which were seated three females, suddenly break into a run toward the railroad, amid the screams of one of the affrighted occupants. Before the animal could be seized he had turned the corner of North avenue, and when opposite Rockfellow & Kilbourn's grocery, the wagon careened throwing the three ladies to the ground, and continued on a run toward the depot. A large crowd soon gathered, and the ladies were carried into Reynolds' drug store, where the services of Dr. Fritz, who happened to be passing at the time, was brought into requisition to assist the drug clerks in dressing and attending to their injuries, which happily proved to be not serious, the ladies all being, however, terribly frightened. The parties proved to be Mrs. W. W. Coriell, her sister, Miss Sallie Hargraves and Mrs. James Acor. It seems they were driving through Park avenue behind a perfectly gentle horse, urging the animal into a good trot, when he suddenly started on a run. Mrs. Coriell, who was driving, could eventually have brought the animal to a walk, by keeping straight ahead, as she is a good horsewoman, but her sister becoming frightened commenced to scream and catching hold of the lines turned the horse suddenly into North avenue, upsetting the wagon as above stated. Mrs. Coriell sustained a sprain of one of her ankles, as did Mrs. Acor, while Miss Hargraves was cut about one hand and face. The horse ran as far as the depot, where one of the wheels of the wagon to which he was attached became locked in that of a phaeton standing there. Hackman James Farley ran and caught the animal, and in a few moments was driving him back to his home, with not a blemish or break on either horse, wagon or harness.

A cheap Fire Bug.

Great excitement was created in the village of Cranford on Monday night of last week, by the discovery of a person endeavoring to fire a frame dwelling house occupied by a German family named Bremmer, the head of the family being named Adam. From the Elizabeth Herald we glean the following particulars of the case, which was given to that journal by the officials: The house consisted of three apartments, the front used as a shoe-store and the others as a bedroom and kitchen. Bremmer is at present in Europe, and for several weeks the occupants of the house have been Mrs. Bremmer, her sister, children, and a hired man—a journeyman shoemaker. On Monday night two of the villagers detected a man in the act of setting fire to the house. An alarm was raised and the would-be incendiary was pursued some distance, several neighbors joining in the chase. After an exciting chase the man was caught by Joseph Shindler and held until others came up. The fellow struggled desperately, and after stabbing a colored man named Samuel Bateman, one of his captors, and being severely beaten himself about the head, succeeded in breaking away and made his escape.

It was at first believed the object of the attempted incendiarism was theft, but after an investigation, ex-Chief Keron of Elizabeth, and Constable John M. C. Marsh of Westfield began to suspect that the motive of the crime was to get the insurance on the stock, and obtained a clue which threw suspicion on Mrs. Bremmer and Robert Snyder, a shoemaker living in Fanwood, and who was once in the employ of Bremmer. Snyder, it was learned, went away on Monday and did not return to his home until Tuesday night. When he came back he was bareheaded, and his head was badly cut and bruised. He said he had been to Elizabeth, and was attacked opposite the Court House by three men, and beaten. His story was partially corrobrated on enquiry at the Fanwood depot, where it was ascertained that he bought an excursion ticket to Elizabeth on Monday afternoon, but subsequently the suspicion against him was strengthened by the finding of his hat, where the struggle had taken place on Monday night between the villagers and the man who had attempted to fire Bremmer's house. He and Mrs. Bremmer were arrested by constable Marsh Monday, taken before Justice Mendell, and committed to the County Jail.

Snyder protested his innocence until reaching Elizabeth, when he made voluntarily a confession to ex-Chief Keron and other officials. He said he was 29 years old, and lived in Fanwood, where he had a wife and four children. On Monday night, August 9th, he bought an excursion ticket to Elizabeth, leaving Fanwood at 8:15. He did not come on to Elizabeth, but got off at Cranford, and went to Mrs. Bremmer's. He borrowed of her a box of eyelets and a punch. He remained at Mrs. Bremmer's until 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Bremmer's sister, the children and the hiredman went to bed at a late hour, and he and Mrs. Bremmer remained up. Bremmer, he alleged, previous to going to Europe, told him that he had an insurance of $500 on his stock, and if he (Snyder) would set the house on fire during his absence Mrs. Bremmer would give him $25. Mrs. Bremmer and he talked over the burning. She got a kerosene can, poured some of the contents on a straw mattress lying in a crib and pushed the crib against the wall in the corner where it was agreed he should kindle the fire on the outside. She then gave him a bundle of splinters, the kerosene can, and a shoe knife to defend himself in case he was detected before he could make his escape. This was the knife he used in cutting the negro in the scuffle. He went out, and while kindling the fire was caught in the act.

Mrs. Bremmer denied any complicity in the attempting burning. She also denied seeing Snyder on Monday night at all. Snyder's wife, it is alleged, has said that Mrs. Bremmer came to their house in Fanwood on Saturday. She brought two dresses for the children of Snyder, and a large apple cake. During her visit Mrs. Snyder found her husband and Mrs. Bremmer in a whispered conversation in the yard, and it is asserted that Mrs. Bremmer then tried to induce Snyder to burn the house on Sunday night.

The prisoners retained Mr. George P. Suydam, of the firm of Suydam & Jackson, of this city, as their counsel, and were held to have an examination before Justice Mendell, at the Court House, Elizabeth, on Monday last. At that time Mrs. Bremmer was brought before the justice and through the advice of her counsel, waived an examination. The Justice then committed Mrs. Bremmer and Snyder in full to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Monday afternoon Mrs. Bremmer made a confession to Warden Marsh and his wife, corroborating Snyder in all particulars in regard to her participating in the affair. Great credit is due Constable J. M. C. Marsh for his activity in ferreting out this crime and arresting the criminals, in conjunction with ex-Chief John Keron. As regards the insurance, it appears from an insurance policy found in the name of Adam Bremmer, that the personal property was insured in the German American Insurance Co. for $500; $150 on stock and $350 on furniture, and from the statements made by good judges, the whole value of goods insured will not exceed $50.

Personalia.

J. Hervey Doane and E. M. Young started on Saturday last for a ten day's trip to Wilmington, N. C.

Mr. George F. Brown, of the firm of G. F. & C. E. Brown & Co., dealers in wall papers, No. 321 Canal street, N. Y., a resident of North Plainfield, started on last Saturday, in company with his wife, on a decidedly enjoyable vacation trip. The couple departed by way of horse and buggy and propose driving through various parts of this State and Pennsylvania, intending to be absent about three weeks. By this means of locomotion they will be enabled to stop at various points of interest, view it at their leisure and drive on to another point. Their many friends wish them a pleasant trip and return with renewed health.

Mr. Joseph Miller has returned from a three week's visit at Lynn, Mass., and assumed his former position in his father's hotel. "Joe's" friends are glad to see him again there.

Mr. Peter Bogert, of Messrs. H. D. Wade & Co., of New York, the foremost printing-ink establishment in that city, visited our office yesterday, looking younger and heartier than ever. He reports his family in good health, as well as that of his father-in-law, the Rev. N. E. Smith.

Rev. Dr. Willetts, of Philadelphia, will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue Church next Sunday morning.

Washington Rock News.

Notwithstanding the cool atmospheric wave that passed over this section of the country, commencing on Monday last, the number of guests at the Washington Rock Mountain House continues as large as ever. The few that on the first intimation of a change in the thermometer fly back to the city anticipating fall and winter weather, in a very few days generally have cause to regret it, for it often happens that the early part of September rivals July and August in its midday heat. The most beautiful season of the year is yet to come, and those who remain in the country until a relapse of the heated term is placed beyond possibility, will always find it to their true interest and advantage.

The Saturday evening Hop of last week was largely attended, and the dresses of the ladies were especially rich and elegant. The rain kept many away from this city and Elizabeth, but the affair was nevertheless brilliant and enjoyable, and much credit is due the Committee, Messrs. Krause, Gannon, Kenneth and Dawson.

Among the recent arrivals at the Washington Rock Mountain House are Mrs. Geo. H. Parser, of New York, and her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Ferd. C. Valentine, late of Guatemala. The latter lady is the author of the interesting series of letters that appeared in this paper last year from Central America.

FIRE MATTERS.

The New Brunswick firemen's parade on Tuesday, October 5th, will be the largest and finest that has ever taken place in that city.

The members of Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1 are hereby notified to attend a Special Meeting of the Company at their rooms, on Tuesday evening, Aug. 24, at 7:30 o'clock. Business pertaining to the approaching parade will come before them.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS.

All interested in the election of Hancock and English are requested to attend a meeting at Blatz' Hall, corner Somerset street and Green Brook road, on Friday evening next 27th inst., at eight o'clock, at which time an organization will be perfected. Several speakers will be present and address the meeting. Let their be a full turn-out.

We are pleased to record the fact that Collector E. C. Van Norstrand has so far recovered from his late severe sickness as to be enabled to visit his sister in Elizabeth.

Wm. S. Potter, Chairman of the Somerset County Dem. Ex. Com. has issued a call for the holding of Primary meetings to select delegates to attend Gubernational and Congressional Conventions. The Primaries are called for Saturday, Aug. 28th, to elect delegates to both Conventions. Demler's Hotel is the place selected for North Plainfield Township. Time, 3 o'clock, p. m. The number of delegates for each Convention is two.

A Hancock & English Club is to be organized in North Plainfield.

Mr. Charles E. Place received the flattering appointment as member of the State Republican Committee.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

In front of the residence of a gentleman on the Springfield Road, just outside the village, is the handsomest laid out grounds we have seen in a long time. Flowers of every hue and variety abound all around the building and grounds. In one place, forming a semi-circle about a tall flag staff, appears the words—"Liberty Forever," in a white flower plant. The party occupying the premises display good taste and arrangement in floral decoration.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

On the Edward's farm, back of the village of Westfield, some of the finest fruit and vegetables are raised that comes into market. Happening to call there one day last week, "Uncle Joe's" hospitality was extended us in right royal style, our pockets loaded with fruit, and some wonderful specimens of a new variety of cucumber given us to test. The variety is peculiar, because from its budding into a cucumber, the fruit is of a creamy whiteness and perfectly smooth, with a delicious flavor when served up. Where this wonderful seed came from is not imparted to every one by Mr. Edwards. Specimens of the cucumber, which grows to an enormous size, will be exhibited at the forthcoming Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair.

And now it seems that there is a prominent personage of Westfield who desires the nomination for Congress in this District.

The colored people are making great preparations for holding a Camp Meeting at Woodruff's Grove, near the village, from Aug. 26th to the 30th. The proceeds are for the benefit of M. E. Zion church and pastor.

Says Hon. M. W. Field in the Detroit Free Press:—"Garfield worked like a beaver against the bill to equalize soldiers' bounties, and asked me to vote against it in the House of Representatives. I refused, and he voted 'nay.' When he found the bill carried by an overwhelming majority, he went to the Clerk's desk and in my hearing asked the Clerk to have his vote changed to 'yea.'"

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The State Sportsmen's Association offer a reward of $25 for the detection of persons shooting woodcock before Sep. 1st.

George M. West, while fishing in the Delaware at Sand's Eddy, caught a black bass weighing six pounds and four ounces. It measured 21½ inches in length and sixteen in circumference.

It was our pleasure, on Saturday last, to visit the grounds of the Short Hills Athletic Club, near Milburn, N. J., and were most hospitably welcomed and entertained by members during our stay there. These grounds are laid out on a fine level plot of ground surrounded by woods and shade trees on either side. The track, which is ¼ of a mile in circumference or length, is kept in good condition for pedestrian practice and contests, some of the members of the club having won deserved honors and medals in competition at athletic games throughout the State. A neat and commodious club house stands in one corner of the grounds, where hospitality is always dispensed in true good-fellowship style to members and friends on occasions of entertainments, practice, &c. On the day in question, it was expected that a return shooting match at wild pigeons would take place on the grounds between members of the Short Hills Club and the Far Rockaway Club, but, in consequence of an unfortunate misunderstanding, the birds did not arrive, consequently the members present of both clubs indulged in glass ball shooting, which resulted in some fine scores being made. The officers and members of the Short Hills Club are gentlemen in every respect, and we desire to return our thanks in this manner to those present on the day and occasion of our visit for attentions bestowed. Among other guests present we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Jacob Pentz, Field Editor of the Turf, Field and Farm, than whom there is no more true or ardent sportsman, while the journal he represents is one of the best in the country to keep posted on in sporting matters. Besides he is a gentleman of pleasing manners and a capital shot.

TOO LONG.

There is not a man living of the shirt-wearing species who has not known the misery of having his wristbands fall down about his hands. The cause of this phenomenon is the excessive length of shirt-sleeves. All other parts of all other garments are made to fit the man for whom they are designed. Trousers are never wilfully made too long, and coat-sleeves are invariably adjusted to the length of the wearer. The shirt-sleeve, however, is always made about six inches longer than the arm which it is to inclose, and hence it is a constant source of annoyance. At the present day men succeed in reefing their shirt-sleeves by the use of the newly-invented India-rubber reefing gear, but as yet no shirt-maker has dreamed of obviating the whole difficulty by making shirts with sleeves of a reasonable length.

The waste of force and of material resulting from this curious and indefensible custom of making shirt-sleeves too long is enormous. It should provoke the severe reprobation of every philanthropist and political economist. If we add together the excess of material to be found in the two sleeves of each existing shirt, we shall find that the average amount is one hundred and twenty square inches per shirt. This extra and wholly useless amount of linen, cotton or flannel, as the case may be, is daily carried by every shirt-wearing man, while an equal amount of superfluous material lies idle in connection with every shirt that is waiting its turn to be worn. The aggregate amount of waste thus caused is so immense that the public would scarcely believe the figures were they set down in black and white. In fact, there are hardly slates enough in existence on which to make the calculation. It is estimated that this wasted material now lying idle is sufficient to fully clothe twelve millions of native African Kings, provided we allow six square inches of cloth to each King. Were it to be made into bathing-dresses of the present fashion, it would fit six millions of ladies to bathe in public. If this material were to be sewed together in a continuous strip, two inches wide, it would form a girdle around the earth, were the latter smaller than it now is. If twisted into ropes, it would assist two million six hundred thousand prisoners of average weight to escape from prison windows twenty feet from the ground, and would let down over eight million letters from six-story female seminaries. It could be made into shirts of reasonable size for nine hundred thousand (in round numbers) boys of twelve years of age, or into four millions of handkerchiefs or eight hundred and sixty thousand corset-covers. If made into a tent, it would cover the united Sunday schools of Christendom, besides leaving room for a dozen lemons out of which to manufacture lemonade enough for the entire assembly. In fact, our superfluous shirt-sleeves could be put to more uses than a committee of a dozen imaginative men could jointly imagine, and it is, perhaps, unnecessary to say more upon this branch of the subject.

As to the force, or energy, if the latter term is preferred, which is used in making this now useless material, it may be estimated to be sufficient to lift three hundred thousand tons weight a foot above the surface of the earth. This misspent energy might be applied to driving steam-ships, reaping crops, or causing sufficient spontaneous political enthusiasm among the people to elect any specified candidate. Countless men and women in numberless factories labor to weave the material which is subsequently wasted in shirt-sleeves, and vast sums of money are squandered in paying the cost of production. The labor thus spent represents wealth, and wealth represents bread, so that we can unhesitatingly assert—if we have sufficient statistical boldness—that, with the material now used in making our shirt-sleeves absurdly long, seven hundred thousand people might be fed for an entire week. How honest and conscientious men can calmly contemplate such a terrible waste of energy and material it is difficult to see.

How the custom of making shirt-sleeves four inches too long originated is a very interesting question. It is undoubtedly closely connected with the theory and practice of tucks. From time immemorial the careful mother when making clothing for her small-boy has provided against the contingency of his outgrowing his clothes by putting tucks in the legs of his trousers and the sleeves of his shirts and coats. Tucking consists simply in folding a leg or a sleeve so as to reduce its length. The fold is carefully stitched, and when the boy outgrows the original garment the tucks are let out, and the leg or sleeve is thus made longer. A tucked leg is really a reefed leg, and the process of lengthening it is analogous to that of shaking out a reef in a topsail.

Now, it is obvious that tucks, which are essentially ungraceful and betray too plainly a thrifty and economical spirit, cannot be forced upon men. Boys must submit to them, as they do to many other evils, but when a boy becomes a man he repudiates tucks. He employs men to make his coats and his trousers, and the masculine tailor knows nothing of the art of tucking. Women, however, retain, in all communities, the right and privilege of shirt-making, subject only to the condition that they must not put tucks in the sleeves. With their ineradicable conservatism they insist upon making shirt-sleeves as much too long in the case of men as they have been accustomed to make them in the case of boys. Not being permitted to correct this error by tucking, the excessive length of the sleeves is at once perceived by the wearer, and he goes through life a victim to the vicious conservatism of the shirt-making sex.

Some day there will arise a bold and original thinker, who will stand over his wife with a heavy, persuasive argument, and induce her to make his shirt-sleeves just long enough and no longer. The emancipation of man will date from that grand event, and in a few years men will read with wondering pity of their predecessors who submitted to wearing shirt-sleeves of preposterous length, and never dreamed of freeing themselves by the exercise of the right of revolution.—N. Y. Times.

A DOG THEIR MASTER.

Charles Rice died recently in Berlin, Prussia, from injuries inflicted on him several months ago by a royal Bengal tiger, in whose cage he was at the time. It is known that the mere presence of an animal in a cage of others of different species, no matter how wild or savage they may be, will sometimes prevent them from fighting. Why this is so animal tamers can offer only theories in explanation. It is said that tigers and lions in the jungle will run from the presence of a dog as they do from that of a man, unless pressed by hunger or standing in defence of offspring. Mr. Rice, before his death, as an experiment, and without much hope of success, introduced a large dog, a cross between a mastiff and bull terrier, into a cage containing polar bears and a Russian black bear. The effect surprised him. The dog instantly asserted a mastery over his companions, although any one of them could have killed him in two minutes. He seemed to feel the necessity of preserving the upper hand, and of not letting any one of them imbrue his teeth in warm blood. As soon as trouble threatens, the peace-maker has but to show his teeth and growl, in order to restore harmony. Mr. Rice, before his death used to enter the cage with this happy family and perform with them, though he dared not to do so before the dog was introduced.

ODD LOCOMOTIVES.

The Grant Locomotive Works at Paterson, N. J., are building a very queer-looking locomotive, with two sets of driving wheels, one on top of the other, the reverse motion of the upper wheels driving the lower ones. Mechanics are divided in opinion as to whether it will run at all, although it is being built for the purpose of obtaining great speed.

The oddest thing in the way of a locomotive, however, is one that is being constructed in Concord, N. H. The boiler is flat, and the tubes run horizontally. The boiler rests over the fire box and in the middle of the locomotive. The engineer occupies a little cab, located similarly to the pilot house on a steamer, at the forward end, while the fireman's position is at the back end, as in ordinary locomotives. This locomotive is considerably longer than the largest now used.

THE SEAWANHAKA DISASTER.

The Grand Jury of the United States District Court has presented indictments against the owners, the Captain and the Engineer of the Seawanhaka, and the Federal Inspectors of hulls and boilers. It seems to be perfectly plain that a number of lives were lost through a violation of conditions imposed by law for the safety of steamboat passengers, and upon the above indictments for manslaughter being handed in, bench warrants were issued for the arrest of the parties named. These were served on Wednesday morning, and upon the appearance before United States Commissioner Shields, bail was fixed at $5,000 in each case.

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The question is often asked as to how many votes this or that State will have in the Electoral College. We publish the table below, and it would be prudent to cut it out and put it in your pocket book for reference:

Alabama,	10	Minnesota,	5
Arkansas,	6	Nebraska,	3
California,	6	Nevada,	3
Colorado,	3	New Hampshire,	5
Connecticut,	6	New Jersey,	9

Mayor Daniel F. Beatty, of Washington, Warren Co., writes to the New York Sun that "there are twenty-five Republicans and seven Greenbackers employed in my piano and organ works who will vote for Hancock and English."

Dr. Tanner has sustained his feasting as safely as he did his forty days fasting. He first treated his stomach to a peach, then a glass of pure milk, then several slices of watermelon, and then to beef steak. Within twenty-four hours after the closing time of fasting he had gained 4¼ pounds in weight.

The Coroner's jury in the case of Catharine Monahan, who died at Seabright, N. J., from the effects of a dose of Magendie's solution of morphine, given in mistake for Epsom salts, by Geo. H. Vanbrunt, a druggist, have rendered a verdict asking that Vanbrunt be held for manslaughter. By direction of the Public Prosecutor Vanbrunt was put under arrest.

The attempt of the Republican organs to defend General GARFIELD for his connection with the Credit Mobilier bribery, at the expense of OAKES AMES, has called forth a public protest from the sons of AMES. They are indignant at a defence which they say not only blackens his memory, but impeaches his veracity. The best vindication the AMES can make of their father is the publication and circulation of GARFIELD's own memorandum which corroborates AMES on the material question at issue between them. AMES swore that GARFIELD received dividends. GARFIELD swore he didn't. The memorandum showed that AMES told the truth.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

Pursuant to adjournment the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Union, met at the court house, Elizabeth, on Thursday, Aug. 5th, 1880, at 2 p. m.

All the members present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, (reading of bills on motion, being omitted) and on motion the minutes approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS

A communication from the county physician relative to the disposition of money and articles of value that belonged to John Crosbie, deceased.

On motion received and placed on file.

A petition from citizens of Linden township, asking for the appointment of a committee to examine and report upon the necessity for a new bridge on the road leading from Roselle to Rahway, near the residence of Mr. C. V. Banta, was read. On motion received and placed on file.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From the committee on South avenue bridge, Cranford.

To the board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Your committee appointed to report the necessity for a probable cost of an iron truss bridge over Rahway river on South avenue, Cranford, N. J., and afterwards instructed to put the same under construction, beg leave to report that the committee received proposals for erecting the necessary masonry and awarded the contract for the same, to J. G. Moore, of Cranford, for the sum of $6.94 per cubic yard for new masonry, and $2.13 per cubic yard for old masonry, which, according to present measurement will aggregate about $800.

They also received proposals for erecting the iron superstructure, and awarded the contract to the New York bridge company, for the sum of $2,150.

Aug. 5th, 1880.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN ISENMANN, J. T. WILCOX,
J. K. ROLL, G. W. F. RANDOLPH,
WM. H. BRIANT, Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Doty report received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph it was ordered that all committee reports in future be spread upon the minutes.

From Committee on Grand street bridge, Rahway:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your Committee appointed to examine the bridge over Rahway River on Grand street, Rahway, reported as being in an unsafe condition, beg leave to report that the Committee met and carefully examined the present structure on Tuesday, July 20th at 2 p. m. and found many of the timbers rotted, and the bridge so much impaired that it was the opinion of some of the Committee that it was unsafe to risk further travel over it, and that prudence demanded that the street should be closed up. The present structure is built of white pine in the whole width of the street, 64 feet 8 inches space, and is supported by three frame bents resting on mud sills. The committee organized by appointing Director Martine Chairman and Geo. W. F. Randolph Secretary, after which the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That this Committee recommend in their report to the Board that an Iron Truss bridge, 40 feet wide, 64 feet 7 inches span, be ordered built, and that it be put under construction as soon as possible. The bridge will cost when completed not exceeding $3,000.

W. M. CROWELL,
WM. JEWELL,
J. T. WILCOX,
G. W. DOTY,
G. W. F. RANDOLPH,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph, the report was received and recommendation adopted by a unanimous vote.

From committee on open water course in the city of Rahway.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Your committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board "to examine into and confer with the county attorney as to the jurisdiction of this board in a matter complained of as a nuisance caused by an open water course in the city of Rahway," beg leave to report that they visited the location in question, and find that the water course complained of formerly drained a large section of land crossing the Pennsylvania railroad, and several streets, including the main street of the city. Recent grading and sewering has diverted a greater part of or nearly all the water through the sewer in another direction, thus leaving the water course nearly dry, a receptacle for the accumulation and drainage of the few yards of the neighborhood which under a summer sun is certainly unpleasant. We find at all the street crossings the bridges in good order and sufficient to carry all the water, and after conferring with our Attorney have come to the conclusion that the Board has no jurisdiction in the matter. All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. FORSYTH,
W. H. BRIANT,
S. C. SMITH,
Committee.

Elizabeth, Aug. 3, 1880.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph the report was received.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That the money and effects of John Crosbie, fatally injured on the 4th inst., and now in possession of the county physician, be retained by him until such time as an administrator is appointed or some other legal disposition can be made of them.

On motion of Freeholder Roll adopted.

By Freeholder Briant:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to meet with a committee of Morris county, and report as to the condition of a bridge near the New Providence depot.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph adopted, and the following committee appointed: Freeholders Briant, Roll, Smith, Wilcox, Doty.

By Freeholder Forsyth:

Resolved, That the collector be instructed to make a warrant payable to order of John Berger for the sum of $200, as part payment on Bridge street draw bridge contract.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, which was carried by the following vote:

Ayes, Freeholders Briant, Ball, Doty, Forsyth, Jewell, Nolte, O'Sullivan, Roll, Thompson, 9.

Nays, Director Martine and Freeholders Crowell, Hubbard, Isenmann, Miller, Randolph, Smith, Wilcox, 8.

By Freeholder Roll:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to inquire into the necessity of building a bridge over the branch of Westbrook in Linden Township on the road leading from Roselle to Rahway, and report the probable cost of same to this Board.

On motion of Freeholder Briant, adopted, and Freeholders Roll, Ball, Miller, Isenmann, Randolph appointed as such committee.

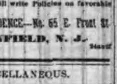
How to Correct and Improve



IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit—over a million pair now being in daily use.

We are glad to announce that the Sole Agent for this place and vicinity is

Would call the attention of the public to their New Styles of

PARLOR STOVES,

of original designs, superior make and finish, with the latest improvements. Special attention is invited to the

ASTRAL AND LAGRAND

as being the best of this class. Their

Parlor Heaters

are perfect in construction, easily managed, and warranted to give satisfaction. Attention is also called to their different kinds of

Cooking Stoves and Ranges,

Of the former, their

"PLAINFIELD COOK,"

With heavy durable castings, and extra large oven and low price, is well worthy of inspection. Of the Ranges, their

Sunshine Hot Closet Range

has superior Cooking and Baking qualities, having a reputation equal to the best in market. Their cheaper kinds, by name—CHAMPION, ALPINE, MAYFLOWER and BEAUTY, (the last can be furnished with Symonds' Celebrated Grate,) have been well tested, and stand No. 1 with those having them in use.

They are Sole Agents for the justly celebrated

Stag's Head Double Elevated OVEN RANGE.

Other Elevated Oven Ranges have been taken out and the Stag's Head put in on account of their superior qualities.

WINE

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS Celebrated Native Wine is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

SPEER'S

P. J. SHERRY.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior character, and partakes of the golden qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S

P. J. BRANDY.

This Brandy stands unrivaled in this country, being far superior for medicinal purposes.

It is a pure Distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

Sold by H. P. Reynolds, R. J. Shaw, and W. H. Voorhees, Druggists.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A DENIAL!

SIMPSON & CO.,

(Late Wilson & Simpson,) respectfully announce to the public of Plainfield that they have not cut ICE on SYLVAN LAKE or RANDOLPH'S POND, in this city, for the PAST FOUR YEARS; therefore the report in circulation now that they are supplying their patrons with the ICE of said lake or pond is INCORRECT; or in broader terms, FALSE, as the depth of water at both of times is insufficient to allow of any being cut, independent of filthy state of the pond which is gradually filling up. All the ice harvested by them is cut off their own pond in WASHINGTON VALLEY, and made from Pure Spring Water.

They are sorry to be obliged to take this means of correcting the false report, but do it in self-defence.

A CARD.

Being compelled by the increase of business to have an assistant, I have taken in my employ Mr. A. J. Mills, a mechanical specialist, late first preceptor for five years to the celebrated Norman W. Kingsly, M. D. S. D. D. S., of New York city, and for six years with Dr. Kingsly of Elizabeth, I feel confident I can recommend him to my patients and the public as a competent mechanical operator in every particular. I will therefore take this method of proving to those that wish to take advantage of the lowest and price that a first-class set of teeth can be made for, viz: for 3 months, commencing June 1st, I will make whole sets of teeth on celluloid for $10, and guarantee them to be made of the best material that can be produced, satisfaction guaranteed in every respect. We would strive to do only first-class work, and hope by so doing at the end of 3 months to secure favor and patronage by perfection in operations, rather than by cheap competition.

POETRY.

THE ARMY OF TYPES.

BY A. P. M.

DEDICATED TO THE MINNESOTA EDITORIAL CONVENTION.

O, a glorious fame is the fame of the fray
For the banner of stars and of stripes!
But the mightiest soldiers of all are they
Who march in the Army of Types!

How they come at the wave of the captain's hand,
How they gather with rattle and click,
And leap to the ranks at the silent command,
On the forming ground of the stick!

And whether it storm or whether it shine,
And ever by day and by night,
With a click, click, click, they fall into line,
And march away to the fight!

Each soldier moves on in his squad of a word,
To the drum of the Age in the van,
And armed with a two-edged, invisible sword,
That cuts through the spirit of man.

Where Ignorance sits on her shadowy thrones,
Built round by the walls of old Night,
They crumble and crush into powder the stones,
And let in the Legions of Light!

Where Tyranny reigns with his foot and his yoke
On the neck of the poor and the just
They cease not to smite till the fetters are broke,
And the tyrant is laid in the dust!

O, Army of Freedom! and Army of Light!
O, host of G-d! battle on,
Till THE PEOPLE shall rule in their God-given right
And the long night of Error is gone!

O, a glorious fame is the fame of the fray
For the banner of stars and of stripes,
But the mightiest soldiers of all are they
Who march in the Army of Types!

Written for the Pioneer Press.

CAPTAIN TODD'S HORSE.

"You see, Dr. Bragg," observed Capt. Todd, "I want a reg'lar clipper-built hoss. I don't want stiffness and breadth of beam so much as I want a hoss to show off with, ye see."

"Well, sir," said the doctor, patting the neck of a vicious-looking animal, which he held by the bridle, "if you want a smart horse, I can't recommend a better animal than this. Just look at those heels. Hi! Don't go near 'em. As I told you, I've three horses that I want to sell; but, if you want a horse that will go, this mare is the best for you."

"You see," said the Captain, confidentially, "I don't know much about horses. I'm a sea-faring man. Followed the sea, man and boy, nigh thirty-five years. Now, I'm going to settle down on shore, and I'm looking around for a wife. I don't mind telling you that I'm sorter sparking the widow Bunn. Now, the widow is mighty fond of a good fast hoss, and there's another fellow, Sam Bliss—perhaps you know him—that's shining around the widow, too. Sam's got a first-class horse and takes the widow to ride a good deal. Now, if I don't get something better than Sam's got, I won't stand any show, for the widow will be sure to ride most with the man that's got the fastest hoss, don't ye see?"

The doctor nodded affirmatively. "I see," he said I see. Well, I think the mare will suit you. She's a knowing animal. Just see how her ears are laid back listening. If you find her getting lazy just tech her with a whip and she'll climb, I tell you."

"Well," said the captain, "If she's all you say she is, bring her around to-night and turn her into my pasture, and to-morrow I'll hitch her up in my new buggy and give her a trial."

The next morning Captain Todd ran his bright new buggy out of the barn, and, throwing a halter over his arm, summoned Bill Tyke and proceeded to the pasture, where the doctor had left the mare the previous evening.

Bill Tyke was the Captain's right hand man. He had sailed with the Captain all his life, and now the former had retired from active duty, Bill had retired with him, and undertaken to learn the art of farming. In appearance he was much like what the immortal Bunsby might have been and he was not much the inferior of that worthy in taciturnity or oracular wisdom.

The Captain and his factotum circumnavigated the pasture and "bore down" upon the mare persuasively from the windward. But the intelligent animal saw them coming and flattened her ears. The captain was almost within reach when she threw up her head, changed ends, and cantered to the further end of the field.

The captain swore a round oath and divided his forces. Bill Tyke was sent to coast carefully around the fence while the captain lay "off and on" in the offing. But it was a game the mare understood the best. She trotted leisurely around the pasture, keeping tantalizingly out of reach and resisting all the blandishments offered her in the way of wheedling words and ears of corn.

The captain and Bill Tyke both fell to swearing, and followed the beast around for an hour. At last, with consummate generalship, they succeeded in cornering her, and as she tried to rush between them, both sprang at her mane. The captain was successful and hung on like grim death, but Bill Tyke failed to secure a satisfactory grip, and was kicked heels over head into a blackberry bush, whence he emerged torn, bleeding and swearing worse than ever. As for the captain, he was dragged for a hundred yards before he managed to "board" the beast, but at last he found himself on her back, tearing across the pasture and bounding about a foot in the air at every jump. The mare made straight for the bars, bounded over them and finally came to a halt in the captain's dooryard. The captain slipped off in an exhausted condition, and drove his new purchase into the barn.

The operation of harnessing was one requiring all the seamanship of both the captain and Bill Tyke to successfully perform. The use of the various straps, buckles and "belaying pins" was the subject of several animated discussions, before the harness was finally adjusted. When all was completed, Bill Tyke cruised around the wagon several times, and observed that "the thing was all right, anyhow."

"Then," said the captain, "just put that old boat anchor into the buggy, with about three fathoms of stout line, and you get in behind. Darn ye,' he continued, addressing the mare, "if ye play a trick like that again, I'll fix ye."

Bill marched off to the tool house, and returned carrying an iron kedlock and a coil of inch manilla rope. To one end of the line he fastened the anchor. The other, by the Captain's direction, he tied by a double hitch to the rear axle of the wagon.

"Now," said the Captain, "jump in, Bill. I'll make the old vixen hum when we git the widow in."

To the Captain's great delight the widow was at home and surveyed his new turn-out with admiration. The harness, she thought, looked somewhat peculiar, but she didn't know much about such things. Of course she would go to ride. How kind of the Captain! and what a beautiful horse.

She was not long in getting ready, for expedition at such times was one of the widow's many virtues. The Captain helped her in, and the mare trotted placidly off, while Bill Tyke sat behind, with his legs dangling over the "stern" of the wagon.

It was a delightful drive. The mare's head was turned away from home, and she behaved herself much better than the Captain had expected. The sun was setting as they turned about to go home, and as the evening shadows began to fall the Captain began to grow tender. Gradually the Captain's arm slipped about the widow's waist, but promptly she removed it.

"Captain Todd," she exclaimed, "you must not; I cannot allow it."

She glanced backward at Bill Tyke, who still sat dangling his heels over the tail-board in blissful unconsciousness.

"Oh, don't mind him," said the Captain. "He don't see nothing."

"It isn't that," said the widow, blushing, "but—I suppose I ought to tell you—in fact I don't know that I ought to have come to ride with you at all—because—because—"

"'Cause what?" asked the Captain.

"Because I'm engaged to be married."

"Engaged!" roared the Captain. "Blast my toplights! Who to?"

"To Mr. Samuel Bliss."

"Heavens and earth!" yelled the Captain, giving the mare a savage cut with the whip, but he had no opportunity to add another, for the mare made a bolt as though about to jump out of her skin, and tore along the road like mad.

The widow shrieked, and grasped the Captain by the arm.

"Let her rip!" exclaimed the Captain, more forcibly than politely. "I want to git hum. Engaged to Sam Bliss! Good Lord!"

The Captain gave the mare another slash with the whip, and Bill Tyke rose up on his knees and held on for dear life. It was getting dark rapidly. The road was full of deep holes, and the side of the road was bordered by clumps of bushes and large rocks, over some of which the carriage bounded like a rubber ball. The mare had it all her own way now, for she had the bit between her teeth, and was on a dead run.

"Hold her up, cap'n; hold her up," exclaimed Bill Tyke in evident alarm. "Port your hellum and lay to."

"Hold up your grandmother!" replied the Captain, savagely. "I can't hold her any more than I could a three masted schooner in a hurricane."

The widow relieved herself of a series of piercing screams, and threw her arms about the Captain's neck.

"I shall be killed," she cried. "Oh, Captain, dear Captain! For heaven's sake stop the horse and let me get out."

Captain Todd gave a quick jerk to the reins. The bridle gave way and both he and the widow went over backward into the bottom of the wagon. The mare, increased her speed, if that was possible, and the occupants of the vehicle devoted all their energies to keeping on board the craft, which touched the ground apparently about once in fifty feet.

The Captain surmised that the mare would make straight for Dr. Bragg's corn crib, and if the wagon held together long enough they might hope to come to a [illegible] right side up. It was certainly to be hoped for. The mare was evidently not that kind of a horse.

"We're almost to the long hill," shouted Bill Tyke.

The road thus far had been straight, but at the foot of the long hill was the lane that led to the doctor's barn, and the Captain surmised that at her present rate of speed the entire party would get out about the time the mare turned the corner.

The Captain extricated himself from the widow's petticoats and threw his arms around the wagon seat.

"All hands on deck!" he shouted.

"Ay, ay, sir," Bill Tyke responded.

"Let go the anchor," screamed the Captain.

Bill Tyke raised the kedlock in his hands and flung it overboard. It bounded along the road for a few yards, and then caught under a large rock among the bushes. The mare dashed headlong onward; the stout rope straightened in a second; there was a crash like the report of a cannon; the mare fell forward on her knees, tearing up the ground as she went; while the widow, the Captain and Bill Tyke shot up into the air about six feet and alighted in a semi-unconscious condition amid the rock and debris of what had been the wagon.

It was the end of Captain Todd's courtship. The wagon was an undistinguishable mass of kindling wood; the mare had broken both fore legs and required to be shot, and the widow kept her bed for three weeks afterwards. The Captain again follows the seas, for, as he often remarks to his first mate:

"The sea, Bill, is our proper sphere. We know more about sailin' vessels than we do about drivin' hosses."

"Speak for yourself, Cap'n," Bill always replies. "At my end of the wagon I did my dooty."

A WIFE'S DEVOTION.

The Westfield correspondent of the Springfield Republican tells this story:—An illustration of what a man can accomplish in spite of adverse circumstances and bodily affliction, with a loving, willing wife to aid him, is found in Dr. C. N. Germaine, for years one of our most respected and successful physicians. Three years ago his eyes began to fail, and gradually his sight weakened until about a year ago it was entirely lost. He had no means of livelihood aside from his profession, so as his sight grew dim his wife, who is a woman of broad culture and refinement, accompanied him on his visits to patients to guide him. Gradually accustoming herself to note the various symptoms of the sick, and by earnest study, she became fully competent when her husband's sight was wholly gone to describe all the outward symptoms of patients to him, so that he has not been obliged to give up practice, but can be found every day going his regular rounds with his wife by his side. His former patrons with very few exceptions continue him as their family physician, and his blindness has not affected his skill and success in treating various forms of disease, although, of course, it prevents him from practicing surgery. Every one sympathizes with Dr. Germaine in his affliction, and admires his courage and his noble wife's devotion and energy.

Coalescence—Petroleum.

If the calamities predicted for 1881 visit us, the lucky ones will be those who peg out in 1880.

Even death himself is not free from the ills of life, for death will take cold. That is, it will take old and young alike.

"Next; spell fume." "F-i-u-m-e." "Right; go up one." "No, thank you, I am not prepared to pass in my checks yet."

HIS FIRST DRUNK.

"I am sixty years old, and never got drunk till day before yesterday," remarked Uncle Jesse White, as he sat on a salt barrel in front of a grocery store. "I have lived in Arkansas for forty year—cum here from Tennessy—and the thought that I got drunk in the evening of my life, when I can just see my gray hairs shining in the twilight, is enough to make me throw myself into the river."

"Tell us how it occurred, Uncle Jesse," said a bystander.

"Well, some time ago, up in my neighborhood," and he stopped talking and drew his pipe vigorously to see if the fire was out, "a Good Templar's lodge was organized. All the young people in the community jined, and pretty soon they came after me. My son Ike was the leadin' man, and he says to me, 'Pap, I want you to jine this thing.' 'Ike,' says I, 'I don't know the taste of liquor, and I don't see the use of jinen.' 'Pap,' says he, 'we want your influence. We are gwine to vote on local option pretty soon, and we want you publicly identified with the work.' Then the daughter, Susan, she cum around and begged me to jine. 'Susan,' says I, 'you never seed your old father take a drink.' 'No, pap,' says she, 'but we want you to help us frown down the curse of intemperance.' Next our parson come around and sot my wife on me, and when they all got to drummin' I had to jine. I jined on a Friday night, and on the following Saturday I got on the boat to come down here. Somethin' ailed me. Somethin' kept sayin', 'Jesse White, you are not a free man.' It bothered me, and when I saw one of the deck hands turn up a jug I wondered if he had ever taken the pledge, and when he sat the jug down I walked around and looked at it, took hold of the corn-cob stopper, walked away and smelt of my fingers. I went up on deck and sat down in front. Pretty soon two men came out and sat down. After awhile one of them remarked: 'The Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina,' and without finishing the sentence both men laughed and drank out of a big black bottle. Thar was somethin' in that Governor business that took me. I had heard my father talk about it and laugh. I had often heard it, but not one had ever been positive what it was that the Governor said, only that the time between drinks had been rather long. Pretty soon one of the men reached down, took up the bottle, took out the cork and said: 'The Governor of North Carolina said to the—' Then both men laughed and drank. I never felt so curious in my life. I looked around at the trees on the bank and the women waved their handkerchiefs at us as we passed. Those governors had a ring about them that tingled in my own blood. Just then one of the men turned, held the bottle toward me, and said: 'The Governor of North—,' before I knew it I had hold of the bottle. I turned it up and drank. All I thought of was the Governors, and when the shadows of Ike, Susan, the parson and my wife flitted through my brain, the Governors, tall and grand, stalked right up and ran over me. The Governor of North Carolina and I had taken another pull, and a long one. I thought that they were the best fellows in the world. The [illegible] I didn't care what she did so long as the Governors were with us. Well, boys, the Governors kept a remarkin' and I kept pullin' and by the time I got to Little Rock I was as drunk as a mule—a mink. I got off the boat and yelled, 'Hoorah for the Governor of North Carolina!' and the first thing I knowed I found myself in a sort of prison. Fust time I was ever locked up, boys. Fust time I ever was drunk and I am sixty-odd years old."

A MINING CHARACTER'S VISIT TO CHICAGO.

A Chicago boy, who had spent some six months in the Black Hills, struck home last week and sauntered up Clark street. He was dressed in an antelope skin shirt, a pair of black tailed deerskin pantaloons beaded moccasins, and a white felt hat with a brim like a wagon wheel. He wandered into a saloon, thumped his feet on the counter and howled for jag juice with a glittering eye.

"Will yer jine me, strangers?" he said to three or four gentlemen who were sitting at a table, adding as they hesitated, "I reckon yed better. With me a invite means liquor or blood. Ye'd better come up."

They approached the bar and all took beer except one, who took cider, explaining that he had never touched spirits in his life.

"Wall, I'll be dogged!" roared the skindecked traveller. "Ef yer was with me whar I hang out ye'd be later a hole, cause thar's whar yer got ter drink whether yer drink or not. 'Slock!'" And he poured in the poison.

"Where are you from, if I might ask?" enquired the elder man.

"From? Right from the gulch. The clean up put me a few thousand ahead, and I am wanderin to see the sights. You bet!"

"From the mines?"

"Straight from jist whar yer reckoned I was, stranger. I been into the Hills, Panned big, and now I'm in for a regular old He. You bet!"

"How are things in the Hills, now? Is business depressed or are things flourishing?"

"I don't know nothing about them big words, but if yer want for to know how things is, they're thar: right thar. I seen twenty millions o'money taken out o' my mine in fourteen hours. That's trade. That's hittin' grit every wash, and don't you forget it. You bet!"

"How does Custer City seem to progress?"

"I ain't no business with Custer City—I'm a miner, I am."

"I saw in a recent paper that a number of troops have been moved to Fort Meade. Do they think there is any danger from Indians?"

"Injuns! Injuns, pard! Why ther's more'n seven millions of 'em scatted around on the rocks waitin' for a chance to lite in. Injuns! Why you don't know nothin' about injuns here. I seen ten hundred thousand troops killed in an hour and a half. But I don't mind no Injuns! I tunnelled under four tribes camped half a mile from my claim, and every doggoned one of them went up in the blast. You bet. There can't no injuns git away with a Hiller, and don't yer forget it!"

"Deadwood must be rather a dangerous locality. I had no idea it was so exposed."

"Deadwood! Dangerous! Say, stranger, if you ever learn to gamble, jist put yer money on the statement that Deadwood is dangerously placed. Yer'll win pard. Yer'll scoop the pot each tussle, or count my judgment deuce box."

"Going to be in Chicago any length of time?"

"Jis' come to take a squint at it. Say, show me around. Show me a faro bank. I've got too much dust for comfort and I'd like to drop or pick up. Show me around, stranger, and I'll make yer profit of yerself."

"I don't think you would find me a very good guide, for I've only been here a comparatively short time, but perhaps one of my friends who reside here would—"

"Don't belong here? Whar yer from, stranger? What's yer lope?"

"I live in Deadwood," responded the stranger. "I'm only—"

If the young traveler will come around and pay for those drinks all will be forgiven.—Chicago Times.

A PRECOCIOUS YOUTH.

K——, five years of age, was accompanying paterfamilias on his walk lately. They met a friend. Peter says, "There's a fine morning." The friend passed. K——, after passing, asks papa, "What was the use of telling the man that? He knew it before." In summer 1879, K——, when little over 4 years of age, meets a railway guard, who inquires if he was not going to see his grandfather (living sixteen miles distant)? In a few days a lady, on going into a carriage in a train at the station about to leave, finds a little fellow sitting in it, and on inquiry not getting a satisfactory answer called the porter, when it turned out that the boy had taken the guard's question as good as a ticket, and was bound for his grandfather's residence. Of course he was sent home. Persons passing the public well, commonly called "the spout," in the street in which he lives may see children practising teetotalism pure and simple with the ladle. K——, not being able to reach the handle which draws water, is in the habit of pulling himself up by means of the iron chain. In the course of last autumn, when thus at work in company with a brother 3 years of age, K—— aloft, and the junior manipulating the handle below, the hook on which the chain is fastened when out of action caught the waistband of his trousers he was suspended. He and his brother set up a fearful howl, and fortunately being heard by Peter he was relieved.

Democratic Nominations.

FOR PRESIDENT,
Winfield Scott Hancock
OF PENNSYLVANIA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
William H. English,
OF INDIANA.

Democratic Electoral and Gubernatorial Convention.

The Democratic voters of the State of New Jersey, and all others desirous of uniting with them in securing pure, economical and constitutional government by the electing of Winfield S. Hancock and William H. English, are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by the several County and City Executive Committees, to elect Delegates to a State Convention, to be held at TAYLOR OPERA HOUSE, in the city of Trenton on WEDNESDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER NEXT, AT 12 O'CLOCK, M., for the purpose of placing in nomination nine electors for President and Vice President of the United States, and a Candidate for Governor of the State of New Jersey.

The basis of representation will be one Delegate for each one hundred Democratic votes, and one for each fraction of the same over fifty, cast at the last Gubernatorial election, and each Ward and Township shall be entitled to at least one Delegate.

If any Township has been created since the last Gubernatorial election, the representation from a County shall not be increased thereby, but the Delegates shall be apportioned among existing Townships by the County Committee according to the votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election.

CHARLES A. RYAN, Secretary.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

The Democrats of the City of Plainfield are requested to assemble at their rooms, on Front St., opposite the Post Office, the evening of

Monday, Aug. 30, '80,

at 7½ o'clock, to elect delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention, to be held at Trenton, Sept. 1st, 1880.

JAMES E. MARTINE,
President.

DEMOCRACY.

It is an honor to be a Democrat, because that means a devotee at the shrine of Liberty, Equality and Justice, those three glorious principles of American Independence.

Democracy to-day means precisely what it meant when Jefferson warred against the monarchal designs of Hamilton, and hurled from power imperious Federalism.

The same as when it upheld Madison through the war of 1812-15 with England, and saw displayed along the shores of Federal New England traitorous signals to the enemy.

The same as when it stood by Jackson and aided him to throttle the corrupt political ambition of a Bank of the United States.

The same as when it sustained Polk and the Mexican war, in the face of wishes expressed by political opponents that American soldiers might sink into bloody graves, and conquering peace, gave the stars and stripes dominion over Texas, California and New Mexico.

The same as when it extinguished the dark lantern of Know Nothingism and saved the life of religious liberty.

The same as when amid the throes of civil strife it crowded the ranks of the Union army with fighting men, pleading that the Constitution might be preserved from partisan violence, and the Union vindicated and restored in its original integrity.

It is an honor to be a Democrat, because now as ever, that party yields implicit obedience to the Constitution and all laws made in pursuance thereof, and seeks to spread over the whole land, from ocean to ocean and from lakes to gulf, the blessings of brotherly love and lasting prosperity.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

If elected I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union, and see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.—[General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

A SOLID SOUTH.

The Garfield Republicans are raving like madmen because the Southern States are united for the great Union hero, General Winfield Scott Hancock.

The reasons why the South is solid are as clear as sunshine.

They read as follows:

Because Hancock is an honest and capable man.

Because he is a patriot, not a corrupt trading politician.

Because he will perform every official duty with strict obedience to the Constitution as it stands amended.

Because he abhors the doctrine of sectional hate, and is loyal to an equitable Union of all the States, for the honor of country and welfare of all the people—rich or poor, black or white.

Because in peace he venerates the majesty of civil law.

Because nearly all the white and most of the colored voters in every Southern State are, as they have the right to be, from freedom of choice Democrats.

Because the wicked falsehoods against Southern people, constantly circulated throughout the North by unprincipled Republican editors and speakers, have made that partisan name a by-word and reproach.

Because the Republican leaders, instead of honorably carrying out in victory the object of the war—"fidelity to the Constitution as amended and to the Union as it was," sought and still seek to fasten upon the South the military tyranny of Austria—the domination of England over Ireland.

Because the Democratic party is the only safe refuge for civil and religious liberty, and the only source of permanent peace and prosperity.

As ex-Republican Senator Pool, of North Carolina, declares—

"Year by year, the Northern managers of the Republican party have been steadily driving the South to the Democracy."

"It has been done by a policy and by conduct which, if pursued by them towards New England or Ohio, would have made New England or Ohio Democratic in half the time it has taken to make the South so."

"They have made the Republican party an organization of all in the North that is unkindly and malignant towards the Southern people."

"As a matter of course, the South has gone to the Democratic party."

"The Republican managers have succeeded in making every Southern State Democratic, thus giving themselves the opportunity of appealing to the North to sectionalize its vote and keep them in power, and I suppose they mean to continue the reign of sectional hatred as long as the North can be induced to endure it."

It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people.—[General Hancock.

ATTENTION! TAXPAYERS!

The expenditures of the United States Government, exclusive of pensions and interest on the public debt, for the past ten fiscal years, foot up as follows:

1871	$132,156,727
1872	131,626,720
1873	156,235,130
1874	150,975,643
1875	142,073,632
1876	129,950,130
1877	113,591,745
1878	107,326,433
1879	126,498,452
1880	115,108,208

These figures are authentic, not like the distorted statements recklessly published by the Garfield managers.

They prove something very important for the people to know and consider.

It is this:—

That for the first five years above named, when the Republican party swayed national legislation, the average annual expenditures, exclusive of pensions and debt, were $142,613,570.

and that for the latter five years, when there was Democratic power in Congress to check extravagance, such expenditures averaged $118,496,793.

The Democratic party therefore saved to the Treasury in five years or over twenty-four million dollars annually.

$120,583,884,

Such are financial facts, and when it is remembered, that the Democrats in Congress had to contend against the enormous estimates and persistent demands of Republican Administrations, they portray the vast saving of public money that will surely follow the inauguration of President Hancock, with a Democratic Congress to sustain his measures of prudent economy.

BULLDOZING.

At Montgomery, Alabama, Horace, Edwards, colored Republican, attempted to murder Lafayette Thomas, colored Democrat, because he voted the Democratic ticket.

At the same place, Prince Smith, colored Republican, was bound over for endeavoring to prevent George Washington, colored Democrat, from casting his ballot.

At Yonkers, N. Y., a would be political despot, the Republican Superintendent of a large mechanical establishment, has been forcing workmen to join a Garfield Club against their will or be thrown out of employment.

Bulldozing is all done by the Democrats, you know?

THE RECORD.

In January, 1879, Mr. Hayes addressed the Collector of the Port of New York in language as follows:

"With a deep sense of my obligations under the Constitution I regard it my plain duty to suspend you in order that the office may be honestly administered."

That Collector, suspended for lack of honest administration, is now the Republican candidate for Vice President.

As in the case of Mr. Garfield, the black marks around his name were drawn by Republican hands.

Enough said.

VOTE FOR HANCOCK AND ENGLISH!

THE COMING VERDICT.

March 1, 1873, the Buffalo Commercial, then and now a strong Republican paper, reviewing the Credit Mobilier perfidy of certain Congressmen, including James A. Garfield, thus remarked:

"When those who have betrayed the confidence reposed in them come up for trial—if they ever dare to do it—they will be rejected as wicked and unprofitable public servants."

The day of trial is at hand.

Mr. Garfield asks the people to elect him President of the United States.

In November the verdict in his case will be—DEPART THOU UNWORTHY PUBLIC SERVANT!

POPULAR DEMAND.

It is the settled conviction of a large majority of voters that the public good would be enhanced by a change of administration.

The Republicans have had control of government affairs for twenty years, an unusual length of time, as the following record shows:

J. Q. Adams,	4 years,		Opposition.
Jackson, Van Buren,	12	"	Democratic.
Harrison-Tyler,	4	"	Opposition.
Polk,	4	"	Democratic.
Taylor-Fillmore,	4	"	Opposition.
Pierce, Buchanan,	8	"	Democratic.
Lincoln, Grant, Hayes,	20	"	Opposition.

A change is now demanded by the people.

March 4th, 1881, is the appointed day.

Winfield Scott Hancock is the coming man.

JUSTICE REFUSED.

Mr. Lawson, of Plainfield, a colored delegate to the Republican State Convention at Trenton, asked, as a matter of justice to his race, a representative on the State Committee.

That was a reasonable and appropriate request and should have been instantly granted, but, it was refused.

The colored men of the North will discover after a time, as their Southern brethren have already found out, that voting the Republican ticket simply means hewing wood and drawing water for designing white politicians.

The colored voters of the South are joining the Democracy by thousands, and those of the North must do the same, if they desire proper treatment and genuine civil freedom.

"A full vote, a free ballot and a fair count."—[Hancock to Sherman, December 28, 1876.

STILL ANOTHER.

Hon. John Pool, of North Carolina, a leading Republican of that State, and its Senator in Congress a few years ago, in a published letter of convincing argument has announced his support of the Democratic nominees, Hancock and English.

Ex-Senator Pool says:

"In view of the whole situation, involving sentiment, duty, sound policy and the future, I regard the nomination of General Hancock as a most fortunate and providential event."

"He is endeared to the North and commended to its fullest confidence by the purity and firmness of his personal character and by the services he rendered in defense of the Union."

"He has the confidence of the South as an honorable and gallant soldier representing that feeling in the North which would respect the just rights of all, and make the nation solid in peace and unity instead of the sections in discord and hate."

As speaks Mr. Pool, so do tens of thousands of other Republicans speak.

A GARFIELD CHAMPION.

Bob Ingersoll, the atheistical defamer of Christianity, is on the stump for Garfield and Arthur, and in a recent speech delivered in Massachusetts larded it with a score or so of false assertions.

Among other things, he charged Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, with saying—"That the principles of the Democratic party are the same principles for which Lee and Stonewall Jackson fought."

Which Mr. Hampton never uttered, as the New York Herald has clearly proven.

Truth cannot be expected to pass the lips of a reviler like Ingersoll.

BOSH!

Section 4 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution says—"Neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void."

And yet the Republicans think they can find voters who will believe that the election of General Hancock will bring about a different order of things.

John Hancock was President of the Continental Congress, Winfield Scott Hancock will be of the United States.

Mutual confidence and forbearance will bring harmony and security to the whole country, and that is the aim of the Democratic party.

Federalism wanted to keep the power of government in the hands of the rich and well born, and Federalism despised the Democratic party as royally as some Republican editors now do.

For twenty years the Republicans have been keeping books at Washington according to the theory of "addition, division and silence." The people now demand an audit at the hands of General Hancock.

Extreme Republican partisans at the North strive to repress and hold back that returning feeling of good will and confidence which ought long ago to have buried forever the animosities and resentments bred in the conflict of arms.

Winfield Scott Hancock, like his great prototype, Andrew Jackson, laid down his conquering sword in the temple of civil liberty. The people with unanimity called Jackson to the Presidency and they intend to act the same way toward Hancock.

The Democracy believe that the people throughout the whole Union, in city, village and country, whether lawyers, doctors, bankers, merchants, mechanics, farmers or laborers, are just as honest and as capable of holding free and fair elections as are Davenport and his minions appointed by Federal power.

General Hancock on the heights of Gettysburg met and drove back the Confederate army and upheld the flag of the Union, and afterwards, as Military Commander in Louisiana, he met and drove back a horde of carpet-bag thieves plundering a prostrate State and upheld the Constitution of the United States. He is the man for President.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

The Boston Globe, referring to the Chairman of the New Jersey Republican Convention, says:

Ex-Secretary Robeson is the most expensive official rascal this country has ever produced.

It is noticed as one of the strange circumstances of the canvass that Longstreet, the Confederate General whom Hancock defeated at Gettysburg, now holds the position of Minister to Turkey given him by a Republican administration.

Colonel H. C. Ullman, an eminent lawyer, residing in Rockland county, N. Y., and heretofore a strong Republican, has made a stirring speech in favor of the candidacy of General Hancock, and will take the stump on behalf of the gallant hero of Gettysburg.

Ex-Lieutenant-Governor Muller of Cleveland, Ohio, formerly a Liberal Republican, made a strong Hancock speech before the German Liberal Republican Club of Cleveland on Wednesday night of last week and the club in a body went over to Hancock with him.

The Philadelphia Times, an Independent journal, says:—"The nomination of Hancock by the Democrats was a confession by that party that every issue of the war is irrevocably settled, and the persistent efforts of party leaders and organs to revive a crusade of hate will cost the Republican party tens of thousands of votes."

Colonel Worthington, formerly a Republican Congressman, and recently Collector of the port of Charleston, S. C., has openly declared in favor of General Hancock for President. The Colonel justly says:—"I believe that the prosperity of the country and perfect harmony between the sections can be best promoted by the election of Hancock."

"Garfield," says the Hon. Richard Harrington, ex-safe burglar, and at present stump orator in the sacred cause of Garfield and Reform—"Garfield is still willing to send his bullets where he sent them during the war." And Mr. Harrington, we presume, is ready to send his jimmies and wedges where he sent them during the Grant regime—into the first eligible safe, that is.

The Garfield journals say Democratic speakers have no arguments other than abuse of Republicans. If to fearlessly and truthfully expose the despotic centralization, official corruption, wanton extravagance, hypocritical pretension, bribery, fraud and jobbery of political opponents be abuse, then Democratic speakers are full of the article and every honest citizen will applaud them for letting it out. Democratic statements are fact founded, and that is what hurts the tender corns of De Golyerism.

There was great delight in the New York rooms of the Republican National Committee one day last week, because a Mr. Shea, represented as a prominent Democrat of Utica, had announced his resignation from the Democratic State Committee and intention to vote for Garfield. Desertions from Hancock being such a novelty, the single case of Mr. Shea seems to have inspired the Committee with wild enthusiasm, but the political distinction of the convert appears dubious, as the roll of the Democratic State Committee fails to reveal the name of Shea, of Utica. Score 1 for Garfield—300 for Hancock.

LAST Tuesday evening, about dusk, the Republicans of this city suspended a very fine banner across Front street from the corner of Somerset street to Berry's building opposite.

Not a drum was heard, nor a cornet band's note
As their heroes were swung in the air;
Not a cheer arose from out of the throat
Of a single Republican there.

Garfield Fishing.

Garfield will have, counting New York, Indiana and Connecticut among the Republican States, 222 Electoral votes.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Fishing, sonny?"

"Yes, sir."

"What have you caught?"

"When I get two more with the one I'm after now, I'll have three."

State Hancock Veteran Association.

At a meeting of the State Hancock Veteran Association, held at headquarters, the Essex County Democratic Club Rooms, Newark, N. J., on Monday last, the members were in receipt of flattering and encouraging reports throughout the State for the success of the Hancock and English ticket. Reports were received from over 70 clubs, all showing great activity. Three additional members were added to the Committee, Messrs. Col. Dudley Steele, of Jersey City, Col. Wm. E. Hoy, of Elizabeth, and Gen. Francis Price. The Secretary, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, has issued a circular asking the officers of all clubs throughout the State to report the number and condition of their organizations. At the next meeting of the State Association, which will be held on Sept. 6th, at above mentioned quarters, more complete returns will be received. All applications for enrollment papers, documents or information, should be addressed to the Secretary, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of Plainfield, N. J. The National Veteran Hancock Association met yesterday, 27th inst., at Westminster Hotel, N. Y. city. From all quarters came pouring in the gratifying intelligence that a grand victory in the election of Hancock and English awaits us in November next.

New Jersey.

The Republicans of New Jersey have nominated Frederic A. Potts for Governor. They regard him as a strong candidate. This opinion will doubtless be generally accepted in the State. At all events, by repudiating the preposterous pretensions of Gen. Kilpatrick, the party will avoid so crushing a defeat as it would have encountered under the lead of that fussy politician. New Jersey is Democratic to the core. In 1876 it gave Tilden a majority of 12,445. The year following it repeated this majority in the election of Gov. McClellan. All that is necessary to secure an equally overwhelming victory for Gen. Hancock is for the Democrats to follow the example of the Republicans, and nominate their strongest man for Governor. The real contest in New Jersey is not over the electoral ticket or the Governor. The intelligent Republicans do not expect to carry either. A Senator is to be chosen next Winter to succeed Randolph, Democratic, whose term will expire in the coming March. Therefore the sharpest struggle in the campaign will be to obtain a majority of the Legislature. In this particular many Republicans claim that the chances are with their party. In addition to this there will be a warm contest in some of the close Congress districts. The delegation in the present House of Representatives consists of four Republicans and three Democrats. Impartial observers believe that in November four Democrats and three Republicans will be chosen. There may be errors in some of these predictions concerning minor matters. But on the main question of the Presidency no sensible politician of either party in New Jersey doubts that the State will go for Hancock by a large majority.—Sun.

Ex-Gov. James E. English, Democratic candidate for Governor of Connecticut, met with an entirely unexpected enthusiastic reception on the occasion of his visit to New Haven Tuesday night. It seemed as though the whole State of Connecticut turned out to greet their next Governor, immense crowds gathering at every point along the railroad at which he stopped on his journey. Fully 10,000 persons met him at the depot upon his arrival at New Haven.

Hancock Veterans.

The regular meeting of the Hancock Veteran Association took place at the Democratic Headquarters on last Wednesday evening. A large attendance was present, and reports of flattering progress were received from the different committees. The uniform selected consists of a blue cap with red band, blue army blouse with brass buttons, and white pants; which are expected to be delivered in a few days. Patent torches are also ordered. The drum corps was organized as follows: Drummers; Messrs Charles Davis, Wm. Peer, Geo. A. Moore, Chas. F. Johnson, Thos. Carty, Fred Clark and Francis Vreeland, (Bass.) Fifers; Geo. Hines, Thos. Fay, Richard Ashton, James Carty, Edward Kennedy and P. Kegler. Those selected to man the piece of artillery are, Martin Van Buren Benson, S. Davis, Garrett P. Smith, E. Vanderweg, Wm. Gratton, Chas. Cleveland, Jacob Naylor, Alonzo C. Townley and Frank Vreeland who are now being drilled in their respective positions and duties. After the meeting an impromptu procession of about 200 men took place, headed by the drum corps. The line of march was up Front street to Washington, then to Second and so back to headquarters.

Letter from Leon Abbett.

Hon. Leon Abbett, of Jersey City, who was a prominent candidate for the Governorship, has sent the following manly letter of declination to Hon. John McPherson:

JERSEY CITY, April 17, 1880.

Hon. John R. McPherson:

SENATOR:—During the past two months my name has been used in connection with the Democratic nomination for Governor.

I have been warmly supported by my friends, and am grateful to every one of them for that support. I was willing to be a candidate, because I believe that I could give to the people a Democratic administration that would have united and strengthened the party, and that would have been satisfactory to the people of the State.

I now find that an opposition to my nomination has been organized, which, while it cannot prevent it, may place the party in a condition that may imperil its success in the contest for the Legislature. When I consented to be a candidate I stated that, while I would be pleased with a nomination, I would not enter into a contest to obtain it. I now find out that I am gradually being placed in the attitude of fighting for a nomination, and I cannot consent to occupy that position.

My whole life has been devoted to the success of the Democratic party and the advocacy of its principles. I have never wavered in my allegiance; I have always been willing to sacrifice my personal feelings and ambitions for Democratic unity and harmony.

I cannot, under the circumstances, permit my name to be longer used as a candidate for Governor, and I herewith withdraw from the canvass, and authorize you to publicly announce that fact.

Yours truly,
LEON ABBETT.

To Sportsmen.

We desire to call the attention of sportsmen to the large and fine stock of guns and fishing tackle for sale by A. Vanderbeek in the Chatauqua building on Park avenue. The Greener Club Gun for $85 is a splendid breech-loading piece. In fishing tackle he has all varieties and kinds at New York prices. Campaign goods of every discription for sale at low prices. Call and examine the goods.

A Fragrant Breath and Pearly Teeth

Are easily obtained by cleansing your teeth daily with that justly popular dentifrice, SOZODONT. Composed of rare antiseptic herbs, it imparts whiteness to the teeth, a delicious aroma to the breath, and preserves intact, from youth to old age, the teeth. Acidity of the stomach will destroy the strongest teeth unless its effects are counteracted with SOZODONT, and this pure tooth-wash protects the dental surfaces by removing every impurity that adheres to them. Ask your druggist for SOZODONT.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap2y1.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Mary E Holton, complainant and William B. Stewart, et al., defendants. Fi. fa. etc.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on at two o'clock, p. m., FIRST, all that tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey. Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth street, a corner of David Jones' lot (now or formerly); thence running along his line a northwesterly course one hundred and fifty-three and [illegible] feet to a stake in his line, and in the rear of Fifth street lots; thence running a southwesterly course, along the northwesterly boundary line of said mortgaged premises sixty-three and [illegible] feet to a point for a corner; thence [illegible] along line of other lands of said Stewart one hundred and fifty-three and [illegible] feet more or less to a point in the centre of Sixth street distant fifty feet southwesterly from the place of beginning; thence northeasterly along the middle of Sixth street fifty feet to the place of beginning. And if the sale thereof shall not realize a sufficient sum to satisfy the amount of complainant's mortgage debt, then I shall sell secondly, the remainder of the mortgaged premises, described as follows:

WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-SECOND DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D., 1880,

The first tract—Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth and Peace streets, in said city, as now laid out; thence running along the middle of Peace street north sixty-eight degrees and seventeen minutes west, one hundred and eleven and four-tenths feet to a point in the middle of said street; thence still in the middle of said street north, fifty degrees and twenty-seven minutes west, seventy-one and nine-tenths feet to a stone and corner of [illegible] Bethold's land; thence running along his line north, forty-two degrees east, two hundred and [illegible] feet, to a stake and corner of other lands of said Shotwell; thence running along his line a south-easterly course one hundred and sixty-[illegible] and five-tenths feet to a stone in the middle of Sixth street; thence south, thirty-eight degrees west, one hundred and seventy-one and nine-tenths feet to the place of beginning. The second tract—Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth street, and corner of other lands lately conveyed to Randolph Stewart; thence running along the middle of said street, a north-easterly course seventy feet to a point and corner [illegible]; thence running along his line a southwesterly course one hundred and fifty-three feet and nine tenths of a foot to a point and corner in his line and in the rear of the Fifth street lots; thence running a south-westerly course seventy feet to a corner of said Stewart's other lands; thence running a north-westerly course along his line one hundred and sixty-four and five-tenths feet to the middle of Sixth street and the place of beginning.

SEVERAL young Democrats, all fine singers, are organizing a campaign Glee Club in Plainfield.

THE pulpit of the First Baptist church will be occupied next Sunday morning and evening by the Rev. Mr. Sanders of Yonkers, N. Y.

THE drum corps of the Plainfield Hancock Veteran Association made the welkin ring with martial music at headquarters last Monday evening.

THE gold and purple colors of early autumn already appear. Golden rod is usually regarded as an autumn flower, though the first rich, yellow tinge of yellow has lighted up the banks.

THE Crescent avenue and First Baptist churches were well filled during last Sunday's services, and eloquent and impressive discourses were listened to from the Rev. Drs. Willetts and Henson.

BESIDES his usual complete stock and varied assortment of oils, varnishes, wall-papers, curtains, &c., Mr. H. S. Barnes at No. 6 West Front street, has just laid in a fine line of wax material and artists' supplies.

THOSE who thought the back-bone of summer was broken a week or so since, have altered their minds considerably. We have been sweltering under some of the hottest weather of the season the past few days.

A most delightful shower passed over our city Wednesday afternoon, cooling the heated atmosphere decidedly. Before the rain commenced falling, the thermometer fell from 96 to 82 degrees inside of half an hour.

THE Woodbridge Independent Hour, which a year ago declared its intention to preserve an independent attitude in regard to politics, appears this week with the names of the nominees of the Cincinnati Convention at the head of its columns.

THE excursion of the Atlas Lodge F. & A. M. of Westfield to Ocean Grove, which took place yesterday (Thursday) was a most successful affair. Many Plainfielders availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the much favored sea-side resort.

FORTY-FIVE thousand watermelons were shipped from Mauricetown in three days last week—the largest South Jersey watermelon shipment for some years. The apple crop is astonishing large, and immense quantities will be made into cider and apple jack.

EVEN residents of Plainfield's adjacent towns are recognizing the wisdom of dealing with Collier. The Congregationalist church of Westfield has recently purchased a magnificent communion service of this popular merchant; feeling fully assured of fair dealing and complete satisfaction.

THOSE desiring to make a trip to the Delaware Water Gap may do so by taking the 6:36 train from this city on the morning of September 8th, to North Branch, and joining thereat an excursion to the popular resort. Tickets for the round trip, between North Branch and the Gap, one dollar each.

THE old cider-mill at Green Brook, noted for the admirable quality of its productions, has been re-opened under the experienced management of the Vail Bros. Those having apples they desire to have manufactured into a sweet and pleasant beverage, would do well to deliver them to these gentlemen.

THE Hancock Veteran Corps, (or corpse as the De Golyer Garfieldites choose to term them) seem to worry the Republicans of Plainfield. We presume it is because so many of the veterans of the war are flocking to the Hancock banner. They will find the corpse a lively one before they are two months older.

MEMBERS of sister churches in this city, desiring to aid the building fund of the Heavenly Rest Mission Chapel of Evona and at the same time enjoy the pleasures of Ocean Grove and Long Branch, may do so to day (Friday) by joining the excursion of the latter society which leaves Plainfield at 8:32 a. m. Tickets, one dollar each.

THERE is a reprehensible practice among boys of our city, of ringing the door bells and knocking at doors of citizens and then running away. One lady particularly, residing on Front street, is oftentimes annoyed by the practice. The lads in this case are known, and may yet find it convenient to sleep over night at Capt. Dodd's Mansion, if the habit is not stopped.

WE would heartily recommend those of the public who are intending to spend any time at Asbury Park, to call on Mr. J. T. D. Myer at the "Crescent House," corner of Cookman and Grand avenues, and inspect the comforts and conveniences the place affords. Many Plainfielders have boarded there during this season, and all agree in praising the fine table, enjoyable quarters, pleasing arrangements, reasonable terms and untiring efforts of the proprietor in their behalf.

THE excursion to Alpine Grove from Easton, that went over the C. R. R. on Friday of last week, was as entirely successful as it deserved to be. About four thousand tickets were sold, and fully eighteen hundred took part in the day's pleasure. Two sections of eight and twelve cars respectively, transported the patrons along this portion of the line of the road, while other trains from Newark and Long Branch were well loaded. Between two and three thousand dollars were made.

A DYED-in-the-wool Republican recently taunted a lady of Democratic proclivities with "the idea of having a nigger policeman to guard your property." We presume he alluded to the colored special policeman, Robert Randolph, who is acting in the capacity of "regular" in a very efficient manner, and is likely to continue to do so, as His Honor Mayor Harper is tired of sending names of applicants to Council to fill vacancy, and having them refused by a Republican Council because said applicants were Democrats. Policeman Randolph suits very well, thus far. The "immaculate" however don't seem to like to affiliate with brethren of his color only about election time.

THE Rev. Mr. Honeyman will preach in the Crescent avenue church, next Sunday.

MESSRS Martin Bros., are offering extra inducements to purchasers of pure cider and white wine vinegar.

THE building on North avenue occupied as an office by Messrs. Woolston & Buckle, has been recently purchased by the gentlemen and thoroughly re-painted.

A MOVEMENT is on foot among the young people of the Park avenue Baptist church, the nature of which is enwrapped in mystery, but the object is to suitably welcome Dr. Lowry on his return from Europe, early in October.

MR. John Morris the well-known dealer in horses of New Brunswick advertises in our issue of to-day a lot of fine animals just received. Parties desiring roadsters for family and other use may be sure of satisfactory dealing if they patronize this gentleman's stables.

MESSRS. Edsall & Price begin to remove their business to the large accommodations they have secured, on Monday. The new location in Conklin's block on Front street, has been in the hands of painters and refitters for some days, and an attractive store is the result of their endeavors.

THE Nameless Banner, hung out in front of the Post Office a few weeks since by a few interested Republicans, was drawn in out of sight yesterday. We are informed by a reliable Republican that the reason of this act is the rumored resignation of Ames D. G. Garfield from the candidacy of President of the U. S. Arthur has nothing to say in the matter.

WM. BORDENSCHOOK of Newark was among the passengers on one of the Newark and New York Railroad trains Tuesday evening. At the sharp turn in the road from the main line of the New Jersey Central to the Newark branch he was thrown to the ground, and his head was crushed in and his arms broken by the fall. He died at 1 o'clock on Wednesday morning. There are suspicions that he was pushed off the train.

Copper Plate Printing.

Parties having engraved copper plates from which they desire to procure copies, may have their orders promptly filled by leaving same at this office.

Notice.

The regular business meeting of the Plainfield Saengerbund, will be held on the first Wednesday evening of each month, at 8 o'clock, until further notice.

Athletic Games.

The public should bear in mind the date of the annual games of the Plainfield Athletic Club, on their grounds, this city, September 15th. The occasion promises to eclipse all previous efforts. Renowned athletes from abroad will be present and compete for the prizes offered, which are elegant and costly.

Grove Meeting.

The Temperance Grove Meeting last Sunday was the largest of the season. Instructive and interesting addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Ketcham and Doctor U-ta-wa-un, an Indian from Troy, N. Y. The meetings will be continued at the usual hour of 4:15 o'clock. Next Sunday afternoon able speakers are expected. The public are cordially invited to attend.

The Field Gold Mines.

Active operations were commenced last Saturday to relieve the Field mine of its water by means of a powerful steam pump, and has continued night and day since. The Superintendent of the Company says that as the water is drawn from the mine so that observations can be taken, the richness of the veins of ore becomes more and more apparent. It is contemplated to immediately have a large quantity of the ore assayed as soon as the mine is cleared of water. This mine is situated in the valley back of the "Rock," and is operated by the Alantic Coast Mining Company.

Military.

On the 14th of September, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, Inspector of Rifle Practice, will organize a State team to contest in the international, inter-State and Army and Navy matches at Creedmoor. The team will compete against the New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pensylvania National Guards, teams from the Regular Army of the East, West and Southern Departments and a team from Canada and the Regular army of Great Britain. Our State team will be selected with great care and it is presumably certain they will give a good account of themselves in shooting during the contests.

Delegates to Trenton.

The Democratic County Executive Committee has designated Monday the 30th day of August as the time of holding Primary meetings to elect delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention to be held at Trenton Sept. 1st, and the President of the Democratic Association of Plainfield has issued his call in accordance thereof. It will be found on our 2d page. The occasion is one which demands that delegates of intelligence and knowledge of the political affairs of the State, be selected, and it is to be hoped that the Democracy will turn out in full strength at the Primary and see to it that such men are chosen.

The Fair at Waverly.

In announcing the coming State fair at Waverly, in our issue of last week, the types gave the date as the 30th of September instead of the 20th when it will commence. As usual great attractions have been secured, and the entries of live stock are noticeably full. Spacious exhibition halls will be provided and the products of farm, orchard and dairy will be most extensively displayed. On Wednesday, "Ladies Day," there will be spirited contests at archery, Lawn Tennis and La Crosse; on Friday, Bicycle Races will be a feature. The horse track will be open on Monday after 12 o'clock, and the entertainment continued daily throughout the entire exhibition.

Chained for 27 Years.

A great sensation has been caused throughout Berks county, Penn., by the discovery of Benjamin Zechler, a lunatic, who had been confined in a house in Albany township by his brother, Jacob Zechler, for twenty-seven years. When found he was chained to the floor in a small house built especially for him, and in a room about eight feet square, with only one window for ventilation. This chamber was in a shocking state. The man was perfectly nude, and in the entire 27 years he had never been washed, combed or shaved. He made a desperate resistance when the officers attempted to remove him, but he was subsequently taken to the insane asylum. The case is to be investigated by the authorities.

The Last Opportunity.

Each year it becomes the duty of the Crescent Avenue Sunday School to, in a measure, celebrate the closing of the summer's enjoyment by a grand excursion. This, always pleasant event, is extensively patronized by the better class of our citizens, and the able managers under whose supervision it takes place, insure the success it achieves, financially and otherwise. Next Tuesday is the date selected for this year's excursion, and already friends of the school are wisely securing tickets for the occasion. The train will leave Plainfield at 7:20 a. m.; returning, will leave Ocean Grove at 5:40 p. m.; stopping at Long Branch both going and coming. Tickets at $1 each; children under twelve years, 50 cents.

Garfield's Record.

Will some of those skeptical (?) Republicans who loudly shout "liar" and "mud slinger," when allusion is made to Garfield's Credit Mobilier record, please step inside our office and read the facts from Luke Poland's Report, which they will find always ready to be put at their disposal. Figures won't lie, neither is it to be supposed that Judge Poland, who was a Republican, did, or the Investigating Committee, who were Republicans, appointed to ascertain the truth of the charges. It is there in black and white, just as THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and other Democratic journals have stated. Come and read it.

Democratic Pole Raising.

This (Friday) afternoon, at 2 p. m. a beautiful hickory pole will be raised on the square in front of Benjamin Connett's store at Alton, (Dog Corner) and the Stars and Stripes, bearing the names of Hancock & English flung to the breeze from it. Addresses will be delivered by that popular and eloquent young orator, Captain James Brady of New York city, and others. Members of the Hancock Veteran Association of this city, with their drum corps will attend with other Hancock & English clubs, and a salute will be fired from a piece of ordnance. Undoubtedly there will be a large attendance to witness the raising.

A Plainfielder in Rome.

We give below copy of a postal recently received from our fellow citizen ex-Judge Good. It will be seen that he was then amid the antiquities of Rome and diligently pursuing a study of unsurpassed interest. We hope the Judge, when he returns, will make public some of the information he is now acquiring as a traveler in foreign lands.

HOTEL COSTANZI,
ROME, ITALY, Aug. 6th, 1880.

Professor S. Russell Forbes, the well known archaeological scholar, is giving our party daily lectures on the very spot of the ancient places we are visiting. I cannot write a long letter, as my time is all taken up in the study of antiquity. Rome is a marvelous city and its history extraordinary. We go to Naples next week, en-route for Pompeii and Vesuvius, many new things have been excavated there this summer. All our party are very well. The weather is delightful, warm in the middle of the day, then we lay by. No rain in this city for three months. European crops all good.

Concert at Netherwood.

A most select and aristocratic audience comfortably filled the parlors of the Hotel Netherwood on last Friday evening. The announcement of a concert to be given under the management of the proprietors of this Hotel, combining the talents of well-known vocal artists, was sufficient to attract those whose tastes by education and cultivation were able to appreciate the opportunity afforded. The only disappointment of the evening was caused by the substitution of Stoddard, who is only generally liked, for Remmertz, who is universally admired. The latter was at that time suffering from so severe a cold as to be unable to speak. Miss Florence Rice (Mrs. Knox) was in her usual good voice, and received flattering encores to both her solos. "O Don Fatale" and "St. Agnes Eve" being followed respectively with the "lighter" selections, "Twickenham Ferry" and "Mrs. Lofty and I." Mr. Charles Fritsch's tenor still retains its power to please, and his hearers of Friday evening appeared to thoroughly enjoy it. The solos he rendered were "Soll Onda" and "The Winds that Waft"; the former of which he followed, upon recall, with a selection from Opera Bouffe, that was intensely amusing to the children and (seemingly) to himself. Mr. Stoddard's first contribution to the programme, "Noel," is not suitable for one voice, and its selection was injudicious. "The King and Beggar Maid," however, which came later, gained for this gentleman appreciative applause. Herr Walter's instrumental productions were not as enthusiastically received as the efforts of the vocalists. But for this the artist was not to blame; his performances being beyond unfavorable criticism. Besides those especially spoken of above, other musical compositions were rendered as duetts by Miss Rice and Mr. Stoddard, Miss Rice and Mr. Fritsch and Messrs. Stoddard and Fritsch. All of which were undoubtedly enjoyed.

Personalia.

The Miss Bakers of East Front street are again "at home."

Judge E. W. Runyon is feeling better than ever since his trip to the Catskills.

Elijah Alligar, the defrauding New York insurance broker, is very closely related to a highly esteemed family of this city.

The State of Connecticut is at present swelling with pride over a visit from our popular and successful merchant, S. C. Peck.

Night-watchman Wright is recuperating his wasted flesh in Pennsylvania, and his youngest performs his duties in his absence.

Those who remember the heated atmosphere of last Friday evening, will envy Langhorn the Photographer, who caught a cold.

Mr. Arthur (sometimes called "Pete") Varian's bicycle is the latest addition to the graceful wheels that drop their riders in the gutter.

Gen. Albert J. Myer, "Old Probs," died at Buffalo, N. Y., at an early hour Aug. 24th. He was Chief Signal Officer of the U. S. A.

Messrs. Warren Randolph and Thomas Roberts are in town again regretting that their two weeks visit to Ocean Grove is a thing of the past.

Mr. James Symmers entertained Mr. Charles Simms, of the Weber Quartette of N. Y. city, at the Hotel Netherwood during last Sunday.

Mrs. H. P. Talmadge, who loses so many wedding testimonials of friendship by the Netherwood burglary, is the daughter of Mrs. H. L. White of Crescent avenue.

Mr. Edward Everitt has returned from his summer's trip full of fish stories, the most authentic of which recounts the capture of three four-hundred-pound sharks.

Mr. George Wotherspoon Jr., led the German at the Hotel Netherwood on last Saturday evening, with Miss Daisey Abbott of New York. About twenty couple took part.

It is rumored that Mr. Harry Kaufman will occupy the position of basso in the Grace Church quartette now forming. Mr. Andrew Gavett remains with the Crescent avenue choir.

Miss Grace Johnson of North Plainfield returned on Wednesday from a short visit to her sister at the Delaware Water Gap, both looking and feeling much better in health and spirits.

Mrs. Wallace Vail and Miss Radford, are the recipients of the public's thanks for the opportunities they afforded all of inspecting their Night Blooming Cereus while in blossom, last week.

Major-General J. M. Corse, who won such renown at the battle of Missionary Ridge, where he was seriously wounded, is a resident of our city. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the National Hancock Veteran Association.

Messrs. Hervey Doane and Erwin Young, are back from Washington, D.C. They report the whole country as enthusiastic for Hancock. Their alligator hunt was postponed, as the attractions of button-gaiters claimed their undivided attention.

The many friends which the universal courtesy and gentlemanliness of Mr. Fred. MacDonald have drawn around him, will unite in congratulating him upon his recent admission to the firm of MacDonald & Son, and his enrollment upon the list of Plainfield's successful merchants.

"An Enterprising Burglar 'Gaged in Burgling."

Residents of Netherwood Heights, our aristocratic suburb, were thrown into quite a "fever of excitement" on Friday evening of last week, by the discovery of a burglary in their midst that assumed quite alarming proportions when first considered from a financial point of view. The residence of Henry P. Talmadge, Esq., a prominent Wall street broker, was entered during the absence of the family for a few days at Manhattan Beach, and at the time the robbery was discovered all traces of the perpetrator—except such as showed his presence in the past—had disappeared. The house was in charge of a faithful Swede named John Christianson, but his duty merely involved the occupancy of the house during the night; being engaged elsewhere by day. Having left the premises all right on Friday morning, it was only upon his return at about 8 o'clock in the evening that the deed was discovered. Word was immediately sent to the Hotel, where had gathered for an entertainment Netherwood's entire population, and Messrs. Bowen, Brigham, Bleecker and a representative of this paper made a thorough inspection of the premises. Throughout the entire affair was to be observed the judgment and experience of an old hand. Entering through a window in the cellar, a door at the head of stairs leading into the main hall was found to have been opened by the removing of a heavy oak panel and the subsequent insertion of the burglar's arm. Afterwards, with plenty of time at command and no danger of interruption, a careful trial was made by the house-breaker of the silverware in the dining-room and closets, which resulted in the rejection of everything that failed to stand a scientific test and prove itself sterling. Bureau drawers were thoroughly searched for easily transportable valuables, but cumbersome apparel—although many rich costumes were available—seemed to have been neglected. In an upper bedroom, tufted satin cases formed to hold gold-bowled coffee spoons, chased pie-knives, carved-handled berry, preserve and ice cream servers, and massive ladles, were shorn of their contents and strewn over the floor. No trouble was experienced in entering the rooms, the locks having been picked seemingly with ease; not a mark of force used—if any was used—being visible. Of course the affair became at once the sole topic of conversation among friends and neighbors; and as reviewed and discussed, a score of theories were weighed and considered. Among the men employed around the residences of the place, there was but one, however, whose honesty was not assured. He was known to have been employed by Mr. Lyman Briggs—a gentleman living opposite the house robbed—who was at the time away for the summer; but nothing was known of the man's antecedents or upon what recommendation he had been employed. It was then remembered that this man had kept away from the excitement of the affair in which all had taken an interest, and that on the day of the offence was conspicuous by his unusual absence. Michael Udhal told of meeting the man—whose name is George Rosevain—at the depot on Saturday morning displaying a quantity of money, and others mentioned suspicious circumstances that created in the mind of Mr. Henry E. Bowen, of Netherwood, a belief that the person should be looked after. Before leaving for New York, Mr. Bowen called at the Brigg's residence and found, upon conversing with George about the late robbery, that he was very contradictory in his statements as to his whereabouts on the day before. Upon expressing an intention of going to the city, Mr. Bowen advised him not to leave his employer's house while matters were in such a state. Mr. Bowen afterwards spoke a word or two to the Swedes employed in and around Netherwood, cautioning them not to let the man get entirely out of their sight during the day. After the departure of Mr. Bowen, Rosevain expressed an intention of going to Plainfield for dog-meat, and one of those who had been told to watch him—a milkman by the name of Sorenson—invited him to ride. Upon reaching this city, Sorenson stated that he was going to drive to the post-office, when Rosevain immediately decided to stop at the telegraph office and send a message to his employer to the effect that his house and property were safe. Leaving Sorenson he turned in the direction of the depot, but the former instead of continuing on towards his destination, drove through another street and reached the express office just in time to observe Rosevain inside engaged in tearing to pieces a receipt that had been handed him. All these and other circumstances that upon the surface might appear merely strange and suggestive of no guilt, were considered by Captain Dodd as sufficient reason for arresting the man on suspicion and holding him to await developements. After his return to the house, Dodd, accompanied by C. R. R. detective Morris, sought Rosevain and in the pleasant and sociable manner for which Plainfield's Chief of Police is noted, informed the suspected one that he were to consider himself under arrest. Morris wishing to get a view of the scene of the burglary, left the two engaged in kindly intercourse; his surprise may be imagined upon discovering, when he returned, Dodd on the outside of the house expostulating with Rosevain who was pointing a revolver at the officer through a window inside of which he stood. Upon Morris appearing he was asked by Dodd for his pistol, and Rosevain hearing the question left the window, darted through the hall and out of the house, ignorant of the fact that John Morris had left his "pop" at home on the piano. Rosevain headed due northwest and the two detectives were joined by a half-dozen persons in fierce pursuit. Among them was Sorenson, who was following faithfully his instructions given by Mr. Bowen, and who was so earnest in fulfilling the trust that his near presence to the fugitive and the watch he had kept on him during the morning, so incensed Rosevain that he leveled the revolver he still retained in his hand at head Sorenson's when only about six feet distant. A sudden dodge on the part of the milkman, or the incorrect aim of Rosevain (or both) spoiled the intention of the shooter, and a hole in Sorenson's hat was the only damage accomplished. Reaching South avenue the pursued turned in the direction of this city, followed by his pursuers, on whom he continued to gain. Dodd had borrowed of Christianson a long-range revolver, and as he ran emptied three barrels in the direction of Plainfield, but the escaped one only ran the faster. Down South avenue to the Harris farm, through the orchard, up the bank, over the track, down the other side and across the fields the race continued. Meeting Edward Willis, Jr., of Netherwood, Dodd who had ran his hat and shoes off, handed the pistol to him with instructions to continue the chase. In and out among the low buildings and shanties of the "Great Eastern" the pursuit was kept up; but the pursuer was a fresh one and the pursued was at last run to earth in Kenyon's machine shop, on the corner of 3d and Richmond streets. Covering Rosevain with his revolver, Willis kept him at bay until the arrival of officers Dodd and Morris, when he was transferred to the reception room of the City Jail. The scene here was an interesting one. The two principals in the affair covered with dust and soaked with perspiration, talked over their late match, between the vigorous onslaught they were making on a dozen lemons. The cause assigned by Rosevain for his suspicious actions and subsequent flight, was the excited state of his mind remaining after an attack of typhoid fever. He had become frightened by Dodd's looks, and denied any knowledge of shooting at Sorenson. The prisoner was searched and a note to his order for $55, twenty-five dollars in gold and fifteen in bills were found, and retained by the officer. Consigning the prisoner to a cell with a bag of lemons and a pen-knife, the police and the press left to continue the investigation. At the express office was opened a satchel supposed to have been shipped by Rosevain, which was found to contain three handsome dresses; and upon the arrival of Mr. Talmadge on the 12:05 train, the costumes were identified by him as the property of his wife. From this gentleman it was learned that he also, upon hearing of the robbery, and before any facts had come to his knowledge, immediately suspected Rosevain and had telegraphed Mr. Briggs confidentially for information as to his knowledge of the man's character. On Saturday evening before Judge Runyon, an examination was held, which conclusively proved the prisoner's connection with the deed. Baggage-master Garretson, express-agent Holmes and night-watchman Smith identified Rosevain as the party who had brought the satchel to the depot on Friday night, left it until the next morning, and then shipped it to Brooklyn. Those who had taken part in the chase and capture were present, but their testimony was not considered necessary. The prisoner declined to make any statement before the Judge, expressing a preference to confide the true inwardness of the affair to Chief Dodd. The examination was thereupon adjourned until Monday morning; but the confession subsequently made, proved to be a fabrication extremely thin in construction. During Rosevain's confinement in the cell on Saturday, it seems that his whole time was not passed in the eating of lemons. With the small pen-knife loaned him to cut the fruit, and another he had in his pocket, the prisoner industriously labored and succeeded in cutting through a floor plank at about the distance of a beam from where the end of the board rested. When Dodd went to wish his guest good-night at about 11:30 p. m., a hole was discovered through which Mr. Rosevain would eventually have made his departure "by moonlight alone." Recognizing the fact that "stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage" (in Plainfield, N. J.) Chief Dodd moved his bed into the corridor, and slept all night just outside of the cell door that enclosed the prisoner securely ironed. Mr. Lyman W. Briggs, Rosevain's employer, arrived on Sunday evening, both surprised at the news he heard and perplexed at the discovery of dishonesty on the part of one whom he had such faith in. He stated that the man had come to him very highly recommended, and during his service had proved invaluable by his faithfulness and honesty. Not only giving entire satisfaction as a servant, but in his kind and pleasant ways with the children had gained his employer's approbation. To Mr. Briggs, Mr. Talmadge and others, Rosevain, on Sunday, confessed the robbery and gave an address in New York city as the place where he had left the silver. He claimed that the goods were not sold, as he was to call for them again after their value had been estimated, and gave the gentlemen to understand that the property could be recovered by going after it. On Monday morning the prisoner was again brought before the City Judge and committed to the County Jail at Elizabeth to there await the action of the Grand Jury. Rosevain was then taken to photographer Langhorne's, where his picture was taken for addition to Chief Dodd's gallery. Detective Morris arrived on the morning train, and at 10:02 the trio left for Elizabeth. During their journey Rosevain offered Dodd $100 if he would procure him three small jeweler's saws which he (Rosevain) stated he could hide in the seams of his coat.

Our County Fair.

Public announcement is made through our advertising columns of the time of holding the Second Annual Fair of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Ass'n, which will occur on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th days of September. The first Fair of this Association, held last October, was a grand success throughout, and was regarded by all who attended, as the best managed Fair held in the State during that year. This year additional attractions and improvement of grounds and buildings will be an extra inducement for exhibitors and visitors. The first day will be exclusively devoted to the reception and arrangement of articles for the exhibition. The succeeding days will be full of interest. The large premiums offered for best trotting is sure to bring out some of the fast trotters owned in the three counties, and as the Association are members of the National Trotting Association, it is evidence positive that all trotting will be square and genuine. All articles raised, grown or manufactured in the counties of Union and Middlesex and in the township of North Plainfield may be exhibited, although the owner may not reside in such counties or township, and this gives an opportunity to ladies, children, farmers, gardeners, manufacturers, horse or cattle raisers, poultry breeders, and to everybody in this county, the opportunity to exhibit and obtain a premium. The premium lists are published and those desiring them can get them by applying to the Secretary, County Clerk Jas. S. Vosseller, either at the Court House, Elizabeth, or at his place of residence, Plainfield. The Board of Directors are causing needed improvements to be made about the grounds, one of which is the construction of thirty new box stalls, 10x15 feet in size, for the accommodation of horses and cattle. Messrs. Shepherd, Johnson & Godown have the contract for erecting the same. A supplement programme has been issued which provides extra premiums for trotting. Let exhibitors make their arrangements early to display their goods at the approaching fair.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The stable of Mr. W. B. S. Taylor at Fanwood, was broken into on the night of the 18th inst., and robbed of two setts of light harness. Mr. Taylor offers a reward of $20,00 for the return of the harness, and the Scotch Plains Theft Detective Society offers $25 reward for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the thief or thieves. Cap. Dodd, where are you?

A Sudden Change.

On Wednesday the thermometer marked 96 degrees. On Thursday it was down to 69.

FIRE MATTERS.

Eight members of Zephyr H. & L. Co. of this city, were entertained in a most generous manner at New Brunswick on last Sunday by the Hibernian Engine Co. No. 6, of that city. A few hours spent in social intercourse at the house of Chief Smith, was a pleasing part of the day's enjoyment.

"Plainfield" steamer, No. 2, have sent an invitation to "Niagara" steamer, No. 2, of Morristown, to participate with their in the coming annual parade.

Efforts are being made to get out the exempt firemen of our city to participate in the coming annual parade, by assigning them in a body the head of the line, with the relic of Plainfield's ancient fire department, the hand engine formerly used by "Gazelle" Co. No. 1, following them. Such a feature of the parade would prove an interesting and attractive one on the occasion.

"Gazelle" No. 1 expects to entertain a Company from abroad the day of the parade.

"Alert Hose Co. No. 1" will entertain their friends, the "Resolute H. & L. Co. No. 1" of Morristown, also Chief and Officers of New Haven Fire Department, in right royal style on the occasion of the annual parade.

About 5 o'clock Wednesday morning a fire broke out in the kindling wood factory of Mr. L. A. Rheaume on Grandview avenue near Somerset street, North Plainfield. The attention of the owner was called to the fact by his wife and he immediately took measures to save the horses contained in his stables adjoining. The "Warren" bell was rung by parties living opposite the tower after the engine had left the house; and before the alarm in the city was given, Steamer No 2 had received a private notice of the fire and was on its way to the situation, assisted by a wagon to which its rope was attached. In response to the general alarm the entire department turned out; long before their arrival, however, Warren's suction had been placed in the well at Jackson avenue and it was endeavoring with its small quantity of hose to put a stream on the flames. The hose of Alert Co., and No 1. were placed at the disposal of Warren when the companies reached the spot, but after about five minutes steady pumping the water gave out and matters were at a stand still. Asst. Eng. Krausse bravely volunteered to enter the well, when with a shovel the gravel was pushed to one side and a board subsequently laid on the bottom upon which the suction pipe was placed. Afterwards, by an economical use of the water, a clear and steady stream was obtained. In spite of the efforts of the department the factory and adjacent stables were consumed; and owing to the lamentable lack of hose, nothing but the absence of any wind saved the long sheds attached to the buildings, and prevented the conflagration from spreading and proving still more disastrous. There was no insurance on the property and both the factory and stables are an entire loss. Two wagons and three horses were fortunately saved; Mr. Adam Fritz assisting, in getting one of the latter from the burning building. It is supposed the fire originated about the boiler.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Democrats have called a Primary meeting, to be held at the Hotel, on Monday evening, 30th inst. to elect delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention at Trenton, Sept. 1st.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

On Wednesday of last week the person engaged in cleaning the windows of Mr. John Hughes' saloon on Somerset street, left the fan-light over the main entrance unfastened; and through that opening a thief entered during the following night. Closets and drawers were pretty thoroughly searched and things thrown around generally; while about $40 worth of cigars were carried off. A large screw-driver which was placed under the fan-light to hold it open while the burglar entered, was left behind; as the party made his exit by the front door, unlocking it from the inside. No clue to the perpetrator of the deed is possessed.

The Democrats of North Plainfield, and all those interested in the welfare and election of Hancock & English, are invited to attend a meeting to be held at Blatz Hotel, this (Friday) evening, for the purpose of organizing a Club for the campaign. Prominent speakers will be in attendance to address the meeting. Let there be a full attendance.

The Democratic Primary for selecting delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention at Trenton next Wednesday, also for the Congressional Convention, will be held at Demler's Hotel, on Saturday, Aug 28th, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The petit jurors from North Plainfield to serve during the September term of court, are Wm. White, Stephen O. Horton, John C. Spencer, Lewis B. Boice, Samuel S. Smalley and Chas. M. Vermeule.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Ernest Von Schoening and George Werhan swam from the Battery to Coney Island on Sunday last and back for the championship of America. Werhan gave up on the way back, but Von Schoening swam the entire course of twenty-five miles.

A tame woodcock is an object of much interest now in Jefferson Market, New York City, it having been supposed hitherto that this bird could not live in captivity. Dick is a large and handsome bird, about five months old. When first captured he was put into a small conservatory, with but little hope of rearing him. An ingenious way of serving him his favorite dish of worms, so that he could "bore" for them in marshy earth, proved a great success, and ere long Dick forgot his captivity. He has been put into a large cage, is now quite tame, and well accustomed to the many spectators who watch his movements. His appetite is voracious, requiring at least a pint of worms daily.

Weak fishing is splendid at Woodbridge. Put up at Sawer & Tappan's Pavilion, where you will find ample accommodations, good cheer, boats, baits, lines, etc., at reasonable figures.

The season for shooting woodcock opens September 1st. In the Spring there were plenty of birds in this section.

A catfish weighing five pounds was caught out of the canal below Bound Brook last week.

Four Plainfield fishermen had a splendid catch of fish near Bound Brook the other day. Among the catch was a 2½ lb. catfish.

The guests at the Mountain House at this place were very highly entertained on Saturday evening last by an impromptu musical entertainment given on the piano and violincello. Mrs. Henry Freedman of New York presided at the former, while the latter was played by Mr. Sadlinger of the same place. The selections were of the highest order, bringing out the rare skill of the performers. Mrs. Bash gave several solos from "The Huguenots," and sang "The Lover and the Bird" with fine effect, and which were received with loud applause. Dancing followed until midnight when the guests retired or remained promenading on the pavilion in the moonlight. A sacred concert was also held on Sunday evening in which all the guests took part. The hotel still continues full and taxes the indefatigable proprietor, Mr. Stephen O. Staats, to his utmost to provide rooms for applicants.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operation, it is indispensable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous. For sale by all dealers.

A copperhead snake, three feet long, was killed in the truck garden of John J. Kolb, in Williams Township, Northampton county, a few days since, by a stone thrown by one of the hands. The stone cut the snake in the side, and out of the wound there issued a smaller snake. The large snake was then examined, and forty-eight more snakes, ranging in size from five to seven inches, crawled out of the wound and were killed, and they say it was not a good day for snakes either.

HANCOCK UNDER FIRE.

A STORY OF HIS DASH THROUGH THE WILDERNESS HITHERTO UNRELATED.

We do not remember to have seen anything in reference to General Hancock's dash through the Wilderness and on the line of the Po River, without it be a mere reference to the series of engagements he had with the rebels during the first days of the Grant advance on Richmond.

That General Hancock had been offered the command of the entire army of the Potomac was generally credited ere the army had moved out of its Winter quarters and started on the road to Richmond under General Grant and General Meade. But the experience of Generals McClellan, Hooker, Pope and Burnside with the Government had caused a settled conviction in the army that the success of any movement upon General Lee depended in a large measure upon the support the Government was disposed to grant the general in command, and while the Government was censured by the rank and file of the army for its "shortcomings" in support of the several commanders no doubt exists that General Hancock, seeing the way in which his associate commanders had one by one dropped out of place under the persuasive powers of the Government, felt no desire to take up the sceptre of command and run the gauntlet of a political fire in the rear. He was content with the simple command of the best corps in the army. His decision was a wise one as the sequel shows. To be commander then was but a sinecure. To command a corps the way was open to do a service to the country alike of profit to the cause for which the army was contending and the men whom he had the honor of leading into the thickest of the fight.

It was well understood in the commencement of the memorable campaign of "On to Richmond" that General Grant's reliance of individual support and co-operation, as well as in an advisory capacity, was in General Hancock. The confidence of the army was in Hancock; he was equally as popular with the army as was McClellan in his palmiest days. Grant saw in Hancock the make-up of a thorough soldier and disciplinarian, whose banner had never trailed in the dust or been shadowed by defeat. He was the man to lead, the one of all others in whom the chief commander placed his reliance for the successful encounter which must pave the way to a final victory. Some one must bear the brunt of the battle and Hancock was chosen, so to speak, as the right-hand man to Grant.

At the dawn of day, May 12, 1864, sheltered by the dim twilight and a dense mist, the Hancock corps moved quietly and cautiously up from its position on the south side of the Po to the north side and towards the enemy's lines. Imagine a bluff covered from base to top with rifle-pits and breastworks, with half a dozen tiers of cannon—eighteen and thirty-two pounders—stretching along over the rugged and woody space, and you have a fair idea of the position of the two rebel divisions when attacked by the Hancock corps.

The troops gallantly surmounted all the difficulties in reaching the base of the hill, the excitement increasing, till it broke out in a splendid rush at the rebel intrenchments which the troops leaped with loud cheers, dashing into the enemy's camp and compelling their surrender en masse. Three thousand men, forty guns and two Major-Generals, with several stands of colors, was the trophy of the first dash on the rifle-pits. The charge of the Second Corps was followed by heavy cannonading all along the line, and under the cover of which the whole line moved up to the support of Hancock's corps, and immediately an incessant rattle and roar of battle arose along the whole line. Often rival bayonets interlocked, and a fierce and death-like grapple over the intrenchments lasted for hours, the rebel flags now surging up side by side with those of the Union, and anon torn and riddled disappearing in the woods. It was here that Hancock exhibited the true ideal of the General. Finding his men likely to waver, they being considerably outnumbered, he rode up close to the lines and in a loud voice called to his men to "stand firm!" and as if necessary to encourage them at this critical moment, he drew his sword and led the column forward until they had scaled the pits. Then the air was rent with the cheers and huzzas from the victorious band. The losses had been fearful, yet the Second Corps held its position, though repeatedly attacked. They were there to stay, grand old guard of the army. It completed the first act in the campaign on Lee's army, and closed the eighth day of almost continuous fighting. The Union forces suffered 29,350 hors-de-combat, and the rebel loss exceeded 30,000, forty cannon, twenty-two stands of colors, and 8,000 men taken prisoners.

It is thus we speak of a single engagement and of the commander of the Second Corps, who in all the battles of the campaign was conspicuous, among the many brave officers of the army, for daring, enthusiasm and steady valor.

Will he not make equally as steady an executive of the nation and govern, as he was wont to do, the men who love and adore him as a ruler in firmness, yet with simplicity, given to moderation and kindness.

SECRETS OF THE PRINTING OFFICE.

ONE CLASS OF MEN WHO WERE NEVER KNOWN TO BETRAY PROFESSIONAL CONFIDENCE.

Printers have never, we think, received appreciation for the honorable confidence which they have preserved in regard to the secrets with which they have necessarily been entrusted. Such a case as this often happens. An article in a newspaper or magazine makes what is called a "sensation." It is entirely anonymous, and public curiosity is excited to the utmost to discover the names of its author. The writer may be a Cabinet Minister, a high official, a courtier, or any of the thousand and one persons who, if he were suspected of writing for the press, would at once lose his position, his office—perhaps his reputation. On the other hand, the writer may be a struggling author, a hard-working journalist, or a mere literary amateur. In any case his secret is preserved; his anonymity is safe so long as it is confided to the printers. Some years ago there was a great stir made about a book entitled "Ecce Homo." It was a clever work and had an unexampled success. "Who is the author?" was the question on everybody's lips. Some scores of persons were named and they repudiated their participation in it. All sorts of conjectures were hazarded, and no doubt large sums would have been paid by several conductors of journals for authentic information as to the name of the author. Yet that name was known to a master printer, his overseer, and at least some of the compositors, but it was never revealed. When the name was published, it was not through the instrumentality of the printers, but entirely independent of them. They had faithfully kept their secret.

There is another species of secrecy—that relating to the careful supervision of confidential public documents, books printed for secret societies, and the authorship of articles or pamphlets, already referred to, which has to be most scrupulously maintained. When treaties are prematurely published in newspapers, the copy is obtained from some leaky or venal official, and not from any of the printers who set up or work off the original.

INFECTED WATER.

On the 19th of January, 1879, there was a sudden outbreak of typhoid fever at Caterham, England, and on the 20th a similar outbreak at Redhill, a town eight miles distant. There were forty-nine cases of this fever within a fortnight; and by the end of February, in both places there were three hundred and five, of which fourteen were fatal. The patients were scattered over a wide area, and were confined to no particular class. The localities had previously been remarkably free from disease.

The Government Board of Health instituted a thorough investigation into the cause of this outbreak. All ordinary causes—sewage, milk-supply, and personal infection, etc.,—had to be set aside, since in all these particulars the families had little in common.

It was, however, at length found that most of the persons affected had their water-supply from the mains of the Caterham Water Works; that others who were attacked spent the days at the houses where this water was used, and drank of it; that at the Caterham Lunatic Asylum, with two thousand inmates, and at the Caterham barracks, with five hundred soldiers, both of which had a different water-supply, not a case occurred; nor a case at Reigate, which belongs to the same sanitary district with Redhill, but is supplied with water from a different source.

It was plain that the Caterham Water Works were somehow the cause of the epidemic. But that it should be so, was a mystery. At length, it was found that one of the workmen employed in establishing an underground connection between the existing wells and a new bore, had been suffering from a mild form of enteric (typhoid) fever. The excrements of this patient had been allowed to pass into the water, and were thence distributed through the company's water system.

The facts here given indicate that the cause of the many cases of typhoid fever in the towns mentioned, was the poison germs in the water that had been polluted by this workman. They convey a lesson to every householder, and to every person who has the care of a typhoid patient.

"Why do you keep yourself so distant?" said a fair one to her bashful lover. "Because," said he "distance lends enchantment to the view."

Atmospherical knowledge is not thoroughly distributed to our schools. A boy being asked, "What is mist?" vaguely responded, "an umbrella."

A little boy being told by his mother to take a powder she prepared for him, "Powder, powder?" said he putting on a roguish smile, "mother, I ain't a gun!"

A Wisconsin woman has been married fifty-eight years and has never missed building her kitchen fire. Her husband is probably the oldest fire escape on record.

"A comedy," says Mr. H. J. Byron, the well-known actor and dramatist, "is like a cigar. If it's good, every one wants a box; if it's bad, no amount of puffing will make it draw."

When a boy falls and peels the skin off his nose the first thing he does is to get up and yell. When a girl tumbles and hurts herself badly the first thing she does is to get up and look at her dress.

One reason, says the Detroit Free Press, why Leadville has no schools is because all the school ma'ams who go there find husbands between the station and hotels, and don't care a cent whether school keeps or not.

THE POPULAR CRY.

A leading Republican in Hudson County proclaims his intention to vote for General Hancock in the following language:—

"I am sick and tired of this continual waving of the bloody shirt, which keeps the two sections of the country divided, and, I believe, has seriously retarded the prosperity of both, and I feel that I should take a stand that is going to bind me regardless of party. Republicans tell me the country was never more prosperous than now. I can't see it. I own a large quantity of real estate, and am almost ruined by taxes. I want to see if a change will not be for the better. I was never such a partisan Republican as to justify the keeping up of the sectional feeling between North and South. It has only been kept up to retain certain office-holders in power. Not only so, but I believe General Hancock to be the better man of the two. They tell me that Garfield has had experience in politics. Judging from the record, as I have read it in the Republican papers for years—and if the Republicans do not believe them, who would they believe?—General Garfield has had too much experience in politics already. I have talked with a score of influential Republicans and although I am not authorized to use their names, their general feeling is that a change is needed. It is fifteen years since the war was over and yet the Republican leaders have kept on inflaming the North against the South, so that they hate each other nearly as much as ever. Any sensible man ought to know that the prosperity of this country can't be what it ought to be while North and South are thus divided."

That states the issue as it really is, and speaks the sentiments and determination of thousands of other Republicans.

"We are sick of the bloody shirt?"
"General Hancock is the better man?"
"Let us have a change?"

"The Democrats [of New Jersey] find a long list of names each of which has urgent supporters for the chief nomination. It is noted that General McClellan's name is not in this list. He has failed to win the friendship of his party leaders and will be allowed to drop back to private life as suddenly as he was taken out of it three years ago."—New York Evening Post.

What stupidity. The writer should study the Constitution of the State of New Jersey. He will find that in it is a provision that a Governor of the State is ineligible to the office till three years after the completion of his term of office. Were Gov. McClellan eligible to re-nomination, no other candidate would be thought of.

The Views and Opinions of a Business Man and Republican.

Among the speakers at the Democratic ratification meeting in Newark the other evening was Lorenzo N. Fuller. In introducing him the Chairman said that the gentleman had requested to be introduced not as a judge or lawyer, but as a simple merchant. Mr. Fuller was greeted with applause:

"He said he stood before them as a merchant. He had voted the Republican ticket for twenty years, and wanted to explain to them why he was going to vote for General Winfield S. Hancock. Of all the frauds that had ever been committed in this country none was so great as the Presidential steal of 1876. He, as a Republican, had then stated to his friends that the Republicans would not carry another Presidential election in twenty years. He would say that the main reason why he voted for Hancock was because Hancock was an honest man and Garfield was a dishonest man. Garfield had sold his manhood for the paltry sum of $329. Some say they do not believe that he would sell out so cheap as that. If the New York Times and Tribune lied at the time they declared Garfield to be a bribe-taker, why don't they come out now and take back what they said? He would like to vote for Garfield and Arthur, but would not, because they were not honest men. He did not feel inclined to stand up for the Republican nominees this year for fear that some Democrat might come along and ask him some very curious questions about their honesty and integrity, which he could not answer. If the New York Tribune cannot answer the question, who else in God's name can? Like hundreds of thousands of Republicans he had turned his back on those men and proposed to vote for honest men. [Applause.] He believed Garfield would be beaten in New York alone by 80,000 majority. He, as a Republican, was ashamed of the Republican nominees, and when he heard that Arthur was nominated, he thought that the Republican party had better go into liquidation. Two years ago he made thirteen trips to Washington to procure the removal of this man Arthur, because he was ruining all the honest merchants and dividing the profits with corrupt men. The name of Arthur has been foisted upon the Republican ticket by Roscoe Conkling, who has carried the Republicans of New York in his breeches pocket until they had worn a hole through it and slipped out. [Laughter.] Sherman, when he saw that he was to be beaten, brought out his Uriah Heap Garfield, merely for the purpose of keeping his position as Secretary of the Treasury. The machine won't work. It is clogged with corruption. There never before has been such thievery and corruption as has been practiced at the Custom House in New York for the past 8 or 10 years. When the Democrats get into power they will have to place an eight-horse power plow in there, and plow out the corruption clean up to the rafters of the roof. He wanted the Democracy to go steady until November, and they would be supported by the independent vote, and General Hancock would be elected. He believed that the election of Hancock would bring about the most prosperous years the country had ever seen, because all sections of the land would be prosperous. One fact should never be forgotten, namely, that Arthur was removed by a Republican administration for corruption and something worse; and now the very men who removed him support him for the highest office in the gift of the people. In conclusion, he urged all present to stand firmly and unitedly for Hancock and English, who were honest and pure men."

POLITICAL CLIPPINGS.

Oscar Lindsley, of New Vernon, is styled "the farmer orator." We trust to hear him speak in Plainfield during the campaign.

Wanted—somebody who has heard of any reputable Democrat declaring for Garfield.

The Chicago Daily News, until recently a stalwart Republican sheet, has come out in favor of Hancock and English.

A Hancock Club of 65 members is reported in Knoxville, Pa. Four years ago Tilden had 34 votes there and last year there were but three Democrats out.

The Club of republicans who served in the civil war, and who will vote for Hancock, now organized in San Francisco, numbers about 150 and is daily increasing.

The colored men of Flushing have organized a Hancock Club. J. W. A. Shaw, editor of The Suffragist, is President. They have hired rooms, raised a banner and will soon hold a ratification meeting.

Abraham Lincoln's declaration to Mr. James McDougal of Baltimore, shortly after issuing his Emancipation Proclamation, will bear repetition:

"I believe that Gen. Hancock is destined to be one of the most distinguished men of the age. Why, when I go down in the morning to open my mail—and I rise at 4 o'clock—I declare that I do it in fear and trembling, lest I may hear that Hancock has been killed or wounded."

There is a great flutter in certain circles over the forthcoming book of Gen. Jno. McDonald about the doings of the whiskey ring under Grant. He implicates by documentary and other proof, many prominent Republicans, and the worst of it all is that he has a recommendation of good character from Grant himself, as follows:

> Joyce and McDonald are reliable and trustworthy. Let them have the information they want.
> U. S. GRANT.

The Gold Mine at Plainfield.

Under the above heading the New Brunswick Times of last week, contains the following:

A paragraph relating to the supposed newly-discovered gold mines of Plainfield, originating in a Somerville paper of last week, is going the rounds of the papers and was copied by us. The way the item is worded is apt to mislead, and, as stated, is in fact false. Dr. George H. Cook of Rutgers College is said to have expressed himself to certain official gentlemen from the "gold" mines (visiting him last week) that "the evidence presented by the aforesaid gentleman satisfied him that he was wrong (as to doubts heretofore expressed) and that the company have every reason for continuing their work."

The State Geologist told us Thursday that he had been visited by the gentlemen as stated. "But," continued Prof. Cook, "I have not said that they have convinced me that there is any valuable gold or silver there; I am willing to be convinced, but I don't know that there is. The company's assayer got gold out of the mixture which he showed me. I have been to the opening at Hopewell and have some of the mineral from there; but it has not yet been assayed. This will be done. It is still a question whether there is any gold there."

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press has compiled the following table showing how many times the several states have voted for or against Democratic candidates at the Presidential elections, which have been held since the foundation of the government or their admission to the Union:

How to Correct and Improve
YOUR SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.
One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.
As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.
It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.
All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.
THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.
The KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit over a million pair now being in daily use.
We are glad to announce that the Sole Agent for this place and vicinity is
JOHN A. CLARE,
Practical Watchmaker, Jeweler & Optician,
9 Park Avenue.
French Clocks and Fine Watches cleaned and repaired equal to New York Houses. Good references given if required.

C. O. Meeker & Co.,
No. 18 EAST FRONT ST.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.,
Would call the attention of the public to their New Styles of
PARLOR STOVES,
of original designs, superior make and finish, with the latest improvements. Special attention is invited to the
ASTRAL AND LAGRAND
as being the best of this class. Their
Parlor Heaters
are perfect in construction, easily managed, and warranted to give satisfaction. Attention is also called to their different kinds of Cooking Stoves and Ranges,
Of the former, their
"PLAINFIELD COOK,"
With heavy durable castings, and extra large oven and low price, is well worthy of inspection. Of the Ranges, their Sunshine Hot Closet Range
has superior Cooking and Baking qualities, having a reputation equal to the best in market. Their cheaper kinds, by name—CLARION, ALPINE, MAYFLOWER and BEAUTY, (the last can be furnished with Symonds' Celebrated Grate,) have been well tested, and stand No. 1 with those having them in use.
They are Sole Agents for the justly celebrated
Stag's Head Double Elevated
OVEN RANGE.
Other Elevated Oven Ranges have been taken out and the Stag's Head put in on account of their superior qualities.
FURNACES
of all kinds put up at short notice at the lowest rates.
Agricultural Implements, Hardware, Tinware, Wood and Willow Ware, House Furnishing Goods, Carpenters' and Masons' Tools, PLOWS and CASTINGS,
Plaster of all kinds, Fertilizers, Super-Phosphate of Lime, Pit. Phos. of Lime, Coarse and Fine Bone Dust. Special attention given to Tin Roofing and Leadering.
Jobbing Promptly Attended to.

POETRY.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

A pretty deer is dear to me,
A hare with downy hair;
I love a hart with all my heart,
But barely bear a bear.
'Tis plain that no one takes a plane
To have a pair of pears;
A rake though often takes a rake
To tear away the tares.
All rays raise thyme, time razes all;
And, through the whole, hole wears.
A writ, in writing "right," may write
It "wright," and still be wrong—
For "write" and "rite" are neither "right,"
And don't to write belong.
Beer often brings a bier to man,
Coughing a coffin brings,
And too much ale will make us ail,
As weighs other things.
The person lies who says he lies
When he is but reclining;
And when consumptive folks decline,
They all decline declining.
A quail don't quail before a storm—
A bough will bow before it;
We cannot rein the rain at all—
No earthly powers reign o'er it.
The dyer dyes awhile, then dies;
To dye he's always trying,
Until upon his dying bed
He thinks no more of dyeing.
A son of Mars mars many a sun;
All days must have their days,
And every knight should pray each night
To Him who weighs his ways.
'Tis meet that man should mete out meat
To feed misfortune's son;
The fair should fare on love alone,
Else one cannot be won.
A lass, alas! is something false;
Of faults a maid is made;
Her waist is but a barren waste—
Though stayed, she is not staid.
The springs spring forth in Spring, and shoots
Shoot forward one and all;
Though Summer kills the flowers, it leaves
The leaves to fall in Fall.
I would a story here commence,
But you might find it stale;
So let's suppose that we have reached
The tail end of our tale.

SKETCHES OF TRAVEL.

A PLAINFIELDER IN HOLLAND.

On July 12th we left our London hotel for the Great Eastern station at Liverpool street, where we took the train for Harwick. We traveled at great speed, about a mile a minute, not knowing we were going so fast. Reaching Harwick shortly after 9 o'clock p. m.—went on board an English steamer, Dutch build, called the "Avalon," and as soon as we put our feet on her deck realized for the first time that we were in a foreign country and singular were the sensations that came over us. The voyage from Harwick to Rotterdam, across the North Sea, was a fine trip, the water perfectly smooth and the weather delightful, with bright moon-light to guide us to the old commercial port of Rotterdam, where we arrived about 10 o'clock the next morning.

After breakfasting at the Grand Hotel Victoria we visited the museums and other places of note, taking copious minutes of things seen and heard. Our first impressions of the Dutchmen were highly favorable and such have continued throughout the town in Holland. Leaving Rotterdam we went to Hague, a beau[illegible] There we saw splendid residences, drives, picture galleries and the palace of the late Queen of Holland, the most magnificent place that had so far greeted our sight. The drive through the King's forest and down to the seashore was among the many fine incidents of our journey. We left Hague for Haarlem, a quaint old city, solid as a dutchman in build, and were honored with a grand concert, specially given our party on the world famous organ by Mr. J. Bastiaans. We visited many places of interest in Haarlem, and from thence traveled to Amsterdam, another commercial city of Holland.

It is in Amsterdam where you see many canals throughout the city, and on their account, the place is called "Vulgar Venice." You also here witness a city below the level of the sea, protected by miles of dykes, which are interesting works of engineering. We had in Amsterdam the usual course of sight-seeing—museums, picture galleries and costly palaces.

Holland is a flat country, every inch of it under cultivation. The government is of a mild character and managed quite well, no political disturbances as in other countries of Europe. No misery to be seen as in England, the people are all well to do, everybody works, men, women and children, rich and poor, and cows, dogs and other animals, consequently it is a very wealthy land. We visited some of the schools, they do not come up to the American system by any means. The women of Holland are beautiful, healthy and sound, and it is just the place for Americans to find wives, if they are desirous of getting ladies who can attend to household duties well without being under the necessity of depending upon foreign servants. Good hired help in England, Holland and Germany may be had for fifty dollars per year.

From Amsterdam we go to Berlin, Germany. F. P. G.

MY OWN STORY.

"We've been married just a twelvemonth come next Friday, haven't we, Jennie, my dear?"

"Just a twelve month John."

He was standing in the doorway, my handsome young husband, with his dinner-basket on his arm, his honest eyes all aglow with love and delight.

"Just a twelve-month, and now I've got a baby as well as a wife. Oh, Jennie, girlie I'm the happiest man alive! Come here and kiss me before I go, and tell me what you would like me to give you on the anniversary of our wedding day."

"What's the use, John?" I said, as I received his kiss; "you know we haven't an extra shilling to spare."

"Well do: but we'll play and make believe, as the children do. What would you like to have, provided you could have it? Speak out, girlie."

I laughed, and fell to thinking.

"Let me see. There's so many things I want, John, 'tis hard to decide; but I think I'll take that pattern of brown silk that we looked at down at Wilson's the other day."

"All right and what for the baby?"

"Oh a christening-robe, of course."

My husband's brown eyes danced.

"Poor Jennie," he said, "I'm afraid you'll not get 'em, unless we keep up our game of make believe. By-by; take good care of Blossom." And with another kiss for us both, he was gone.

I got baby to sleep, and fell to work cleaning my kitchen and baking tarts. We could not afford to keep a servant, John's wages being small, and I had all the house work on my hands; but I did not mind it, at all. I love my husband, and he loved me, and a happier couple did not live.

In the midst of my busy work in comes Miss Dorcas Dent, an old friend of my mother's. An old maid, too, was Miss Dorcas, a great scoffer at matrimony and at mankind in general.

"So, you're hard at it, Jennie," she said, sitting down and throwing back her bonnet strings. "A drudging yourself to death, and that child on your hands, too! Such a trim, handsome lass as you used to be, and look at you now! A poor, fagged slattern! What a fool you was to marry, Jennie. Wasn't ye, now?"

"No, indeed Miss Dorcas; I'd do the same thing over again to-morrow."

"Pah! Such simpletons as you lasses are! Well, you'll open your eyes to the truth soon enough. A-working your hands to the bone and spoiling your good looks, as if any man that ever had breath was worth it. I say, why don't John keep you a hired girl?"

"He can't afford it Miss Dorcas."

"Can't he? Maybe not! Has to squander to much on his own pleasures, does he!"

"No, indeed!" I answered, indignantly. "John never squanders a penny."

Miss Dorcas shook her ample sides with sarcastic laughter.

"Never squanders a penny!" she repeated; "and never stays out o' nights either, and go gallivanting round the town with other women, and ye a-sitting at home a-darning his stockings? Don't tell me about 'em Jennie—these good husbands—I know 'em. I havent got these two eyes for nothin'. Didn't I see John, only night afore last, a walking down and another woman beside him?"

"John?" I gasped. "My John! Oh, you must be mistaken!"

"I never mistake. 'Twas your John."

"And who was the woman?"

"Can't tell. Didn't see her face."

When John came home to supper I determined to ask him, but a feeling of shame kept me silent while we were at the table, and the minute he arose he took down his hat.

"Why, John," I asked, "are you going out again? And it is raining, too."

"So it is; but I must go to-night, Jennie."

"What for, John?"

His eyes fell and he turned from me in evident confusion.

"Well—you see—don't ask me, Jennie. I've promised to go, that's all; but I shan't have to go again, maybe."

My foolish, jealous heart rose in my throat, and I stood hurt and silent.

John kissed me, and kissed baby in her crib. Then he took off his coat and and threw it on a chair.

"If you don't feel too tired, little wife, you might fasten in that sleeve-lining. I'll wear my thick coat to-night."

He was gone and after clearing away our small table I sat down to think, and soon made myself miserable enough. At last I thought of John's coat and picked it up to mend it. It was his best coat, which he had only taken for common wear a few days before. Brushing the coat, I heard the rustle of paper in the breast-pocket.

Is there a wife loyal enough, unfeminine enough, to refrain from prying into her husband's pockets when she has a chance? I drew the rusty paper forth. It was a note—a dainty, three-cornered affair, with a rose-bud on the broken seal. I looked at the direction, "John Danton," my own husband's name, written in fine feminine characters. A sharp pang pierced my heart, a mist dimmed [illegible] know. I had a right to know. I tore open the tiny sheet.

MY DEAREST JOHN—Do not fail to come tonight. I am alone, and shall look for you—"

I could not read another word. A blindness like that of death filmed my eyes—a faint, horrible sickness crept over me. Miss Dorcas had told the truth; John was untrue to me. And I loved him so! I crushed the fatal note into my pocket, and caught up my hat and cloak.

"Come, baby," I sobbed, driven out of my senses for the minute by my terrible pain; "we will go. When he comes he will find us gone."

I gathered up the little one and wrapped her in a heavy shawl; then we left our cheerful fireside and set forth through the pelting rain.

"Why, what in the name of wonder has brought you out to-night?" cried my father, as we entered the sitting-room. "And you've brought the child, too! What's out?"

I sank down beside my mother, and began to sob out my misery, my head upon her breast.

"John untrue?" repeated father. "Is that what you're driving at? Oh, bosh, Jennie, you're jealous, that's all, that's all. I don't believe a word of it! A truer, better man than John don't breathe!"

I drew forth the crumpled note and held it toward him.

"He's gone every night," I sobbed, "and—and I found that in his pocket."

Father pulled his spectacles over his nose and opened the note. A minute, perhaps, he peered at it cautiously, then he exploded with laughter.

"Oh, Jennie, Jennie, what a sell!" he cried; "what a precious little fool you are! Take this note and look it over again. Did you ever see it before?"

I took the note and looked at it, wondering what he could mean. The name at the bottom of the tinted sheet caught my eye for the first time. I grew hot with shame from head to foot. The letter was my own, written to John by my own hand in the days of our courtship. I fell upon my mother's bosom and burst into tears.

"Come, Jennie, gather up the child and I'll go home with you," said my father. "Now, don't you feel cheap?"

I did not; I only felt supremely happy. Home we trudged through the dark and rain. John met us at the door.

"Why, here you are, Jennie," he cried. "You've given me a terrible fright. I was just shutting up the house in search of you."

"She's not worth the trouble, John," put in my father, and then and there he blurted out the whole story.

"Forgive me, John," I whispered.

He bent forward and kissed me.

"Nothing to forgive, Jennie. The fact is, I'm rather pleased to see you care so much about me. Sorry to have made you suffer, though. I was wrong; I should have explained before, but, you see, Jennie, I wanted to surprise you. But, we'll have it all out to-night. I've been doing a little extra work, you see. I wanted the money to buy the anniversary gifts, and here they are. To-morrow's the day, but to-night will do as well."

He put them in my lap—the glossy brown silk that I had coveted, and the embroidered muslin for baby's robe. I looked up with brimming eyes.

"Oh, John, how good you are! But let my happiness be perfect. Miss Dorcas says she saw you walking with—"

"Yes, she did," he interrupted, "with old Mrs. Grimes. I built her green-house; that was the extra work, Jennie."

Father laughed and buttoned up his coat.

"You've a good-natured husband, John," he said. "She deserves a sound scolding for being such a little goose—"

"But I'll not scold her," said my husband, with his dear hand on my head, "and I'll never keep another secret from her. Between married hearts there should never be concealments."

"Good-night, Jennie," said father. "I'm sorry for you. I'm sure you feel cheap."

I only felt unutterably happy.

YOUNG LADIES FISHING.

PURSUING PISCATORIAL SPORTS UNDER GREAT DIFFICULTIES.

"There are generally about six of them in a bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three poles with as many hooks and lines among them. As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the bank, and the most venturesome sticks her boot heels in the bank, makes two careful steps down, then suddenly finds herself at the bottom, with both hands in the water, and feeling that everybody in this wide world is looking at her, and she never tells anybody how she got there. The other girls profiting by her example, turn around and go down the bank on their hands and toes, backward. Then they scamper over the rifts until they find a shallow place where they can see the fish and shout:

"Oh, I see one!"

"Where?"

"There!"

"Oh, my! so he is."

"Let's catch him."

"Who's got the bait?"

"You lazy thing, you're sitting on my pole."

All these exclamations are gotten off in a tone that awakens every echo within a mile around, and sends every fish that hears into "galloping hysterics." Then the girls, by superhuman exertions, manage to get a worm on the hook and throw it in with a splash like the launching of a washtub and await the result. After awhile a feeble minded sunfish contrives to get fastened to the hook of a feeble woman and she gives vent to her tongue.

"Oh! something has got my hook!"

"Pull up, you little idiot!" shout five excited voices, and poles and hooks are dropped and they run to the rescue. The girl with the bait gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate "sunny" into the air the full length of the line and comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop that sets her to clawing as though there were bumble bees in her hair.

"Oh, murder, take it away! Ugh, take it away, the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather round the fish as it skips over the logs, one and all of them holding the line in both hands with her foot on the pole, as though she had an evil disposed goat at the end. Then they talk it over.

"How will it get off?"

"Ain't it pretty!"

"Wonder if it ain't dry?"

"Poor little thing; let's put it back."

"How will we get the hook from it?"

"Pick it up," says a girl, who backs rapidly out of the circle.

"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it! There, it's opening its mouth at me."

Just then "Sunny" wriggles off the hook and disappears between two logs into the water, and the girls try for [illegible] they get three headaches in the party and all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpies. If an unwary chub dares to show himself in the water, they poke at him with poles, much to his disgust. Finally they get mad all over and throw the poles away, hunt up the lunch basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit on the grass, and eat enough dried beef, rusk and hard boiled eggs to give a horse the nightmare; after which they compare notes about their beaux until sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of their friends by telling them what "just a splendid time they had!"

PEARLS.

No man is hurt but by himself.

Faults are thick where love is thin.

It is our care we are to cast upon God, not our work.

As if you could kill time without injuring eternity!

A great deal of mischief is easier done than a little good.

Do good with what thou hast, or it will do thee no good.

The word "impossible" is the mother tongue of little souls.

It is weak and vicious people who cast the blame on fate.

No one is ever fatigued after the exercise of forbearance.

A cheerful carriage that gives no hint of heartache is heroic.

We can do more good by being good than in any other way.

Living a religious life is coming out of bondage into liberty.

It is a good thing to learn caution by the misfortunes of others.

The scales of justice are for the weight of the transgressor.

Act upon your impulses but pray that they may be directed by God.

A talent without a tact has been said to be like a fiddle without a fiddlestick.

A propensity to hope and joy is real riches; one to fear and sorrow, real poverty.

The yoke a man creates for himself by wrong doing will breed hate in the kindliest nature.

'Tis with our judgments as our watches; none are just alike, yet each believes his own.

A FEW HINTS TO PARENTS.

Teach your children those things they will need when they become men and women. As women they should understand how to cook, how to make a bed, how to preserve cleanliness and order throughout the house, how to ornament their rooms, to renovate and preserve furniture and clothing, how to sing, how to play various games, that they may enliven the household. They should be taught how to swim, how to ride, how to drive, how to do business, and how to preserve health. The mother should entrust money to the girl, with which to buy articles for the household. That she may learn its value. Think what a man and woman need to know in order to be healthy, happy, prosperous and successful, and teach them that.

Teach your children how to work; how to obtain a living by their own efforts. Teach the nobility and dignity of labor that they may respect and honor the producer.

Explain the reason why. The child is a little walking interrogation point. To it all is new. Explain the reason. Your boy will some day repay this trouble by teaching some other child.

Teach your children the evil of using vice, and the consequences of using intoxicating and spirituous liquors; teach them to be temperate, orderly, punctual, truthful and honest.

Encourage your children to be careful of personal appearance; to return every tool to its place; to alway pay debts promptly; to never shirk a duty; to do an equal share and to always live up to an agreement.

Teach your children to confide in you by conferences together. Tell them your plans and sometimes ask their advice; they will thus open their hearts to you and will ask your advice. The girl who tells all her heart to her mother has a shield and a protection about her which can come only with a mother's advice and counsel.

Give your children your confidence in the affairs of your business. They will thus take interest and become co-workers with you. If you enlist their respect, then their sympathy and co-operation, they will quite likely remain to take up your work when you have done and will go ahead perfecting what you have commenced.

If you are a farmer do not overwork your children, and thus by a hard and dreary life drive them off to the cities. Arise at a reasonable hour in the morning, take an hour's rest after meals and quit at five or six o'clock in the afternoon. Let the young people in games and other amusements have a happy time during the remainder of the day. There is no reason why a farmer's family should be deprived of recreation and amusement any more than others.

Teach your child the value of the Sabbath as a day for the spiritual improvement of the mind; that on the morn the ordinary work of the week should not be resumed if it is possible to avoid it; that the day should be passed in attendance upon religious service of some kind, or exercises that will ennoble and spiritualize the nature. While rest and recreation may be a part of the day's programme true philosophy dictates that the spiritual faculties of the nature should be cultivated by setting apart a portion of the time for their improvement.

SCAN THE RECORD.

In April, 1866, the Congress of the United States adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That in addition to the thanks heretofore voted by joint resolution, approved January 28, 1864, to Major-General Meade, Major-General Oliver O. Howard and to the officers and soldiers of the Army of the Potomac, for the skill and heroic valor which at Gettysburg repulsed, defeated and drove back—broken and dispirited—the veteran army of the rebellion, the gratitude of the American people and the thanks of their Representatives in Congress are likewise due and are hereby tendered to MAJOR-GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK for his gallant, meritorious and conspicuous share in that great and decisive victory.

In January, 1868, James A. Garfield, a Representative from Ohio, introduced into the House a bill providing as follows:

"The army of the United States shall be reduced by the discharge from the military service of the Major-General who was the last commissioned in that grade before January, 1868, to take effect from the passage hereof, so there shall be but four Major-Generals in the Army."

That last commissioned officer the political Mr. Garfield sought to discharge from the military service of the country was MAJOR-GENERAL HANCOCK.

Why such partisan malevolence?

Because General Hancock, as Commander at New Orleans, in the spirit of genuine patriotism, had proclaimed the supremacy of the Constitution and vindicated the real purpose of the war—a Union restored in its original integrity.

The foregoing record reveals the difference between the two candidates for President—Hancock the true patriot, Garfield the mere politician.

OVERHAUL.

The Republicans have been for twenty years manipulating a vast amount of public money.

It is proper that the accounts should be handed over to the Democrats for examination.

The people want to know if everything is financially straight, and it is right that they should possess such information fully detailed.

If, during the past twenty years, there has been no defalcations, no stealing, no Ring corruption, no swindling contracts, no false book-keeping, no behind-the-door jobbing, the Democrats will so declare.

But, if there has been, every crooked thing will be divulged under the administration of President Hancock.

It is time the books were overhauled and balanced.

Every truly honest and independent citizen will vote aye on that—

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

ALABAMA.

There are in the State of Alabama two Democratic newspapers owned and edited by colored men. The Herald of Huntsville is one of them. Hear what its editor, Mr. Councill, has to say about Lowndes county, a locality where, according to the New York Tribune school of falsification, the Democratic "shot-gun" policy prevails to prevent colored Republicans from exercising the right of suffrage:

"We went to Lowndes county week before last to assist in the canvass. On the night of our arrival we spoke to a small audience in the Court House. We never met kinder people than we found in Lowndes. The white people of the county are laboring earnestly by acts of kindness to convince the colored people that the false ones circulated by their vicious leaders are untrue.

On Wednesday of last week a barbecue was given, to which all were invited; irrespective of party or race. It was the nicest affair we ever saw. The first people of the country were out, and the olive branch of peace was offered the colored people, and we are proud to say that the better class of the colored people, in Lowndes were willing to forget the past and "clasp hands over the bloody chasm."

Up until last month colored men never voted their sentiments, because of the bulldozing carried on by the Radicals.

If a colored man voted the Democratic ticket he was afraid to confess it or let it be known. Dozens of colored men in Lowndes will testify to this. There may be places where the Democrats bulldoze, but we have yet to visit a place that comes up to this. This is owing to the wicked teachers in politics that these poor people have had among them. A young man, Frank Hamilton, said in our face, at Burkeville, last Saturday, that any man who would vote a Democratic ticket "is a ———," evidently endeavoring to provoke a fuss. Austin Chappel, at the same time and place, said that if the other colored men were of his mind, they would take the d—d traitors (meaning colored Democrats) into the woods and hang them. It is a prominent fact that colored men in that county have been bulldozed and frightened into sticking to the Radical machine, and until recently dared not vote their sentiments and make it known. Let Mr. Hayes send soldiers down there to protect these honest citizens in the exercise of the elective franchise. But, thank God, the sun of liberty has arisen in Lowndes, and more than a thousand colored men voted the Democratic ticket there last Monday, and will hereafter be protected from the assaults of the bulldozer."

That is the testimony of an intelligent and honest colored citizen of Alabama, one who speaks from actual knowledge.

Further in regard to Alabama it is appropriate to remark, that for eight years Republican Carpet Baggers held away and almost ruined the State, adding to the debt in that time nearly thirty millions of dollars, with little or nothing to show for it, making State bonds almost worthless, and depreciating State money to about sixty cents on the dollar.

In 1874 the Democrats regained possession of the State Government and what is the result?

Now State bonds are at a premium.

State money has been redeemed at par.

The people, both white and colored, are prosperous, and the latter have at last realized that the Democrats are the best conservators of the peace, the best promoters of the interests of all classes, and the safest guardians of the public credit.

THE CONSTITUTION.

Among the multitude of partisan fabrications against the Democratic party, gotten up and circulated without the least regard for truth, has been the charge that the Democrats, if they gained power, would pay rebel claims.

The audacity of such false representation is at once exposed by quoting from the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It reads thus:

"Neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void."

That is fundamental law.

It is the foremost principle of the Democratic party to strictly obey the Constitution. From that position Democracy never for a moment wavered.

That renders it the safe custodian of governmental affairs.

On that platform stands WINFIELD [illegible]

UNMASKED.

There has been for the past few years a paper published in Mississippi called the Okalona States, whose editorials were of the most extravagant and threatening character.

Republican journals throughout the North constantly quoted the utterances of the States, and severely commented upon them as illustrating the savage temper and bad designs of the Southern people.

It now turns out that the editor was a Republican in disguise, supported by money furnished by Republican party managers, and hired for the express purpose of coining falsehoods for a Northern political market. The unmasked fellow is now in Chicago associated with the Republican press of that city.

The above single article, taken in connection with the many proven misrepresented and even manufactured sayings and writings of prominent Southern men, all plainly evidence that no confidence whatever can be placed in the truth of any thing partisan Republican journals fulminate about the South. Deception is their editorial stock. Sectional bitterness their only hope of prolonging party power.

DE GOLYERISM.

The laws of the United States declare that "no Senator, Representative or Delegate, after his election and during his continuance in office, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered or to be rendered to any person, either by himself or another, in relation to any proceeding, contract, claim, controversy, charge, occupation, arrest or other matter or thing in which the United States is a party, or directly or indirectly interested, under the penalty of imprisonment for not more than two years and a fine of not more than $10,000, and be rendered forever incapable of holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the Government of the United States."

Yet in direct opposition to that law, James A. Garfield, a Representative from Ohio, and Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, accepted $5,000 for giving an opinion in favor of the De Golyer wooden pavement, and thereby fastening on the Treasury a claim of $3.50 per yard for work which was shown afterwards to have cost the contractors only $1.40 per yard, and after that particular kind of pavement had been reported against by a Board of Engineers headed by General Meigs, and the worthlessness of which is set forth in the following certificate:

CHICAGO, August 14, 1873.

I certify that I have examined a large portion of the frontized paving blocks (the De Golyer) which were put down on Lake and Dearborn streets in the year 1871. I find them in all stages of decay, and my opinion is that the life of the wood is destroyed by the intense heat they are subjected to in the curing process, thereby hastening the decay of the wood.

I make this statement because I believe the pavement to be a humbug and fraud, and for the interest of the people to know it.

W. H. WATSON,
Gen. Inspector of Wood Pavements for Board of Public Works.

That same Mr. Garfield is now striving to be President of the United States.

The people next November will respond in thunder tones NO!

No more De Golyerism!

GOVERNOR LUDLOW.

In placing before the citizens of New Jersey the name of Hon. GEORGE C. LUDLOW for election to the next Governorship of the State, the Democrats assembled at Trenton on Wednesday, have made a nomination worthy the suffrage of all. In him the party justly claim a leader of an aggressive instead of a defensive campaign, and have every reason to feel the confidence in his coming election that is expressed on all sides. Mr. Ludlow was born in Milford, Hunterdon County, just fifty years ago; and is a grandson of the late Gen. Benjamin Ludlow, of Morris County, a leading Democrat in his time. Graduating from Rutgers in 1850, he studied law in Newark and New Brunswick, and began to practice in the latter city during 1853, where he is ranked among the leading members of the New Jersey Bar and has appeared in many notable cases. He had been President of the Board of Education for several years, but held no political office when he was nominated for the Senate in 1876, and was the first to defeat the redoubtable Levi D. Jarrard. In his second year he was elected President of the Senate and filled the place so ably and fairly that the Republicans were warm in their praise of him when he quitted the office. It is to his credit, that while he was the man the Republicans most dreaded since his name has been mentioned, it is yet true that the nomination sought him. His lack of egotism is truly shown by the fact that he was the only candidate prominently named who did not appear in Trenton to look after his interests there. It will be indeed a glorious march to victory for his supporters, with no obstacles to surmount on the way, such as questionable acts in private and public life form for a less perfect candidate. The only dissension ever created against his course in political office was when he voted in the Senate against the bill to forbid the employment of convict labor in the making of shoes—a bill which made no other provision for the employment of the State prison labor, and would have left hundreds of convicts idle on the State's hands.

Democrats contend that the laws should be executed and criminals punished by the civil power of the State, and not by the military power of the United States.

General Butler was formerly a great and good man in the Republican party. Now that he has declared for Hancock, he is, according to the standard of De Golyer morality, a poor miserable wretch.

If General Garfield had not hurried away from the battle field to electioneer for a seat in Congress he might, possibly, have gained some military credit. As it was, the least said about his heroism the better.

We read in a Republican journal the other day about Garfield being a "clean hearted, honest, manly man." It made us laugh, but charity suggested that the author of such an expression had never seen or heard of the records of Congress.

The Republican electors are Senatorial—Zebina K. Pangborn, Barker Gummere. District—William E. Potter, Edward H. Grubb, Simeon Van Winkle, Dewitt C. Blair, George Richards, Charles M. Theberath and John J. Toffey.

A well established reputation for honesty and patriotism is the cause of General Hancock's wide extended popularity with people of all classes. Those are the ingredients of real greatness—integrity of action and devotion to country.

A strong centralized government, such as Federalism desired and extreme Republican partisans now advocate, means a weak and servile people, the beginning of despotism, and the end of the Republic.

Secretary Sherman sneeringly says of General Hancock that he was educated at the public expense, meaning West Point. Does the Secretary forget that he has a brother, now at the head of the army, who drew instruction from the same source and at the same cost?

The Republicans are making arrangements to flood Indiana with negroes from Kentucky and roughs from Chicago, hoping thereby to carry the October election. That is the immaculate party we hear crying so loudly about frauds in Alabama. What hypocrisy!

It is chronicled by the Republicans as a "phenomenon," more strange than shooting stars, that the Democratic County of Hunterdon once elected Mr. Potts, Senator. The phenomenon sprang from the fact that a serious division then existed among the Democrats of Hunterdon. The wonder won't occur this year.

Notwithstanding all the modern talk about "mud throwing" the art is evidently lost, judging from the following colloquy between two former well known New York editors:

Greeley to Bennett—"You're a lying old braggart."

Bennett to Greeley—"You're a galvanized squash."

It matters not what a man may have been, if he only avows political allegiance to their side the Republicans ardently embrace him. They have nominated a renegade for Congress in Iowa, who a few years ago pronounced "the Republican party so corrupt and malodorous that the man in the moon when passing over Washington had to hold his nose." Whew!

The Garfield Republicans, among other absurd pretensions, claim for themselves the credit of having turned the balance of foreign trade in favor of this country. Every truth respecting and intelligent man knows that it was solely the result of successive abundant crops, with European markets for our large surplus productions of this soil, and that no political party could have prevented the natural balance between supply and demand. With as much propriety might the Viceroy of Egypt be eulogized for the enriching overflow of the Nile.

In their futile efforts to relieve Mr. Garfield from the odium of Credit Mobilier, his party managers now seek to blacken the character of Oakes Ames, who, when living, was a Massachusetts Congressman and a shining light in the wigwam of political Republicanism. Mr. Ames being dead, the Garfieldites think they can easily throw mud at his memory, which they would not dare venture were he alive. It won't do them any good. Credit Mobilier and James A. Garfield are [illegible] together. The recorded stain is indelible. There is not water enough in Lake Erie to wash it out.

"SAVE THE COUNTRY FROM CORRUPTION."

SONG AND CHORUS
BY [illegible] W. [illegible], N. Y.
Air: "Hold the Fort."

I.
Gather, comrades, see the signal!
Democrats, draw nigh!
Pennsylvania gives us Hancock,
Illinois raise the cry.

CHORUS—Save the country from corruption,
Break the cursed spell;
Shout aloud for equal justice,
North and South as well.

II.
See the hosts of Fraud advancing,
De Golyers sharp;
Oakes Ames' ghost on Garfield's shoulders,
Grinning at the throng.

CHORUS—Save the country, etc.

III.
With false colors they are coming,
Fraud shall meet its end;
In Hancock 'twill find its master,
The whole country's friend!

CHORUS—Save the country, etc.

IV.
November will tell the story,
"Written on the wall;"
Right and Justice triumph ever,
Through the heavens fall.

CHORUS—Save the country from corruption,
Break the cursed spell;
Shout aloud for equal justice,
North and South as well.

The Republican managers are simply horrified at the rapidity with which colored Democratic clubs are being formed in the South. They are at a loss to account for it, hence they stand aghast and dumb.

In a speech in Congress, General Garfield said that the man who attempted to arouse sectional feeling at this late day in this country, would find himself without a party. This, he and his friends, will find to be true.

The Chief Clerk of the Indian Bureau, Department of the Interior, Washington, has been doing the crooked in connection with a Cherokee Indian Ring. Land claim money was the aimed for plunder. That is one case of a legion truthful investigation would bring to light.

Garfield is an honorary member of the Free-Trade Cobden Club in England. Out West he favors low duties, through Pennsylvania and New Jersey he goes for a high protective tariff. All things to all men. The people are going to elect an honest man President, one they can trust. His name is WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

It is charged by the Garfield organs that the tone of the Democratic press is low. The Democratic newspapers do not traffic in self vaunted righteousness, but speak the plain unvarnished truth, and there is not one of them in the land less than a thousand feet above the level of opposition journals now zealously supporting the criminality of Credit Mobilier and De Golyerism.

If the money lost to the United States Treasury under Republican party rule, through the medium of Army and Navy contract jobbery, De Golyer wooden pavement appropriations, Belknap trading post bargains, Credit Mobilier frauds, Whiskey Ring swindles, land grants, subsidies, and a myriad of other corrupt outlets, could be recovered back, the public debt might be reduced at once hundreds of millions.

The Republican Convention refused to appoint Mr. Lawson, colored delegate from Plainfield, a State Committeeman, but stuck him on the tail end of a [illegible] to notify Mr. [illegible] of his nomination for Governor, and the Republicans now boast of that as a conspicuous honor conferred upon the colored race, on the ground, we presume, that small favors should be thankfully received and no questions asked.

Campaign Lies

A true specimen of the manufactured enthusiasm (?) for Garfield and Arthur, which is daily furnished the Republican press of New York from other points, may be found in the New York Times of Thursday. The article is dated from Plainfield, and possibly its writer's name may be found in it. One clause states that "many Democrats have announced their intention of acting with the Republicans," in the face of the fact that this paper has repeatedly challenged any one to mention a single person in this city, who has always voted the Democratic ticket, that intends to support the Republican nominations. Again the writer says, "the local leaders of the Democratic party betray little interest in their cause," when all know that the prominent men of the party organized their association, adopted a Constitution and By-laws, and issued rooms weeks before the Plainfield Republicans had taken one step forward in the campaign. The article owns up to the fact that one Republican club, of the four that are claimed for this city, is composed of boys that are not yet voters; but fabricates an assertion that the "E. L. Morris Guard of 150 members are nearly all veterans." They may be veterans, inasmuch as they are old enough to read and know better, but it is simply ridiculous to intimate that there are that many soldiers of the late war, who will vote for Garfield in this city. There are three Democratic Clubs in Plainfield, whose member amount to over 500 names. If the writer of the article in the Times wishes to learn the exact number, let him inspect the rolls of the different organizations. They will be placed at his disposal.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The unfavorable weather prevented a great many from going to the Democratic meeting at the Hotel Hall on Monday night. A Hancock and English Campaign Club was started with the following temporary officers: C. W. Harden, President; J. M. C. Marsh, Sec.; S. S. Mapes, Treas. A roll was started and most all present in the Hall signed it. S. S. Mapes, R. M. Fairbairn and A. J. Miller were the three delegates elected for the State Convention.

M. O. Ferris is fixing up the old store opposite Central avenue on Broad street, and we will soon see it in first-class order with a good, large stock of stoves, tinware &c.

The many warnings given to the boys in the habit of getting rides on all the passing coal and freight trains, at last resulted in a serious accident to one of their number. Owen Fagan, aged 10 years. On Thursday morning he, with others, as usual, jumped on a coal train and fell, his left foot being badly crushed had to be amputated above the ankle. It is hoped that this will be a warning to other boys.

W. [illegible], is the name of the new Principal for District No. 10 school. Mr. [illegible] comes from Newark highly recommended where he has had 10 years experience.

The Republicans will have their banner raising next week on Thursday. They expect to have a grand time. They are ahead of the Democrats in this town so far.

Work is going on day and night at the school house, so that all the repairs may be done by next week. It's a great improvement.

J. L. [illegible] is going to take John Milligans' old stand on [illegible] avenue and vacate his present location.

Democratic State Convention!

IMMENSE GATHERING AND ENTHUSIASM.

HON. GEO. C. LUDLOW,

OF MIDDLESEX COUNTY,

NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

The Convention at Trenton which met on Wednesday of this week to nominate a candidate for Governor and Presidential electors, resulted in placing in the field probably as strong a ticket as the State has ever known. Although before and during the proceedings other names were brought into prominent position and developed more or less strength, Ex-Senator George C. Ludlow received the nomination on the fourth ballot. Of course at the moment of their defeat, many of those who had set their heart on another candidate felt a dissatisfaction; but this soon gave way to a unanimous feeling of gratification at the ultimate choice of a man, whom, even the New York Tribune described the next morning, as "of character and ability and an honest man."

The permanent chairmanship of the meeting was placed in the efficient hands of Hon. Leon Abbett, who with great judgment and tact controlled the proceedings of the delegates.

Hudson county nominated three distinguished gentlemen, Hon. A. A. Hardenburg, Hon. Orestes Cleveland, Judge W. E. Shippen, Hon. Leon Abbett and Attorney-General John P. Stockton.

Essex county nominated Hon. A. Albright, Senator Theo. Randolph and Judge Frederick Tims.

Middlesex and Monmouth nominated Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow.

The first ballot showed that Ludlow's friends had not been inactive. He had more votes on the first ballot than Cleveland, but it was thought that they represented his full strength, while it was known that Cleveland was the second choice of some delegations which had decided to cast complimentary votes for other candidates. Essex, for instance, which had gone for Albright at the first, was almost solid for Cleveland at the last. But Ludlow's strength had been under-estimated. On the second and third ballots, he showed gains as well as Cleveland. Every gain on either side was hailed with the noisiest manifestations of enthusiasm. At one moment a sweeping wave of excitement seemed to place the nomination within Cleveland's grasp. The next moment the "boom" subsided and was carried, amid a chorus of voices, over to the Ludlow quarters. So fortune played with the two candidates till in a moment of especial excitement change followed change, and even Hudson cast her 142 votes solidly as did also Union for George C. Ludlow, who was declared the choice of the convention.

One of the most notably features of the day's proceedings was the movement for Leon Abbett. Mr. Abbett seemed early in the canvass to be an invincible candidate. But when he found that his candidacy was breeding factions he concluded to withdraw. He stuck to that conclusion to-day under difficulties. The State Committee had selected him as the temporary chairman of the convention. The Committee on Organization made him the permanent Chairman. When the excitement over Cleveland and Ludlow was at its height, Allen McDermott, of Hudson, nominated Abbett for Governor. Immediately the whole convention arose and the hall shook with cheers. Mr. Abbett's face was pale with excitement. He advanced to the front of the platform and, folding his hands in front of him, faced the convention till their cheers had subsided and they were prepared to listen.

"You must listen to me," he said. "It is my right and my duty to speak. To say that I am for a moment insensible to the honor of your action and election would be to tell an untruth. But I cannot and will not be a candidate, because I cannot stand as Chairman of this convention and honorably be a candidate for the highest place within your gift. I mean that nothing shall be done here to-day that shall impugn the integrity of my motives in accepting the position of President of this convention. I believe that the nominee of this convention, whoever he may be, will be the next Governor of New Jersey, and my only duty in this campaign is to work night and day, as I shall, for his success. But I cannot, under the circumstances, be the candidate of this convention."

After the second unsuccessful ballot for Governor had been taken, Mr. McDermott moved that Mr Abbett be declared the nominee of the convention by acclamation, and the delegates were again on their feet, cheering and waving their hats and calling for Abbett. But Mr. Abbett said that the convention should elect only by ballot, and refused to put the question. Yet when Essex county was called on the third ballot, several of the delegates sprang to their feet and said Essex was for Abbett, and when Hudson's vote for Cleveland was announced, some of the delegates noisily declared that Hudson was for him too. Mr. McDermott wanted Hudson polled. Director-at-Large McDonald, who was the Chairman of the delegation, looked down from the gallery to say, in a voice that could be heard above all the din, that he had no Hudson votes to cast for Abbett, because he believed that Abbett meant what he said when he declared that he was not and could not be a candidate.

"And I do mean it," exclaimed the Senator. The convention took him at his word and made no further effort to force him into the canvass.

The first ballot was taken quietly enough. But each announcement of votes in the succeeding ballots aroused a noisy enthusiasm that retarded the voting very much. The first three ballots stood:

	First.	Second.	Third.
Ludlow	278	316	41[illegible]
Cleveland	250	228	297
Hardenbergh	72	63	—
Ward	122	117½	—
Shippen	26	26	—
Stockton	30½	21½	—
Cattier	60	15	—
Albright	154	171	17
Abbett	3	4	—
Tims	1	—	—
Randolph	1	—	—

On the next ballot changes to Ludlow gave him the nomination. George Grey, the Secretary, announced that he had 519 votes and Cleveland 344. On motion of Mr. McDonald of Hudson, the nomination was made unanimous.

The following are the electors chosen:

Electors at Large—Gottfried Kreuger of Essex and John H. Dialogue of Camden.

District Electors—1, George G. Green of Gloucester; 2, Timothy A. Byrnes of Atlantic; 3, W. H. Hendrickson of Monmouth; 4, Ryneer H. Veghte of Somerset; 5, C. A. Wortendyke of Bergen; 6, James F. McIntee of Essex; 7, E. M. C. Young of Hudson.

Vacancies, if any occur in the Electoral ticket, are to be filled by the State Committee which Senator Abbett is to appoint.

Mr. Ludlow, the candidate for Governor, is perhaps 50 years old, and a lawyer of wide reputation and popularity throughout the State. He was for three years State Senator from Middlesex and one year President of the Senate. The resolutions adopted by the convention are as follows:

Resolved, That the platform adopted by the National Democratic Convention at Cincinnati meets our hearty approval.

Resolved, That we cordially endorse and ratify the nominations for President and Vice-President made by said Convention.

Resolved, That the Democratic party in this State is in favor of such a tariff as will best protect our home industries.

Resolved, That the Democratic party will, in the future, as in the past, so act as to protect the best interests of the laboring men.

Resolved, That we arraign and condemn successive Republican Legislatures, especially the last, for their inconsiderate passage of acts affecting the public treasury, by which, had they not been defeated by the wise action of the Democratic Executive, the continuance of an onerous State tax would have been a necessity, and we approve and commend Gov. McClellan for withholding his approval of such acts.

Resolved, That we emphatically condemn the Republican system of management of the State finances by which a loss of more than $[illegible] occurred by the defalcation of a Republican State Treasurer, covering a period of several years, and of a further loss of more than $[illegible] by the failure of two banks, in which a Republican Treasurer had, as his own [illegible], deposited the public funds.

A Fragrant Breath and Pearly Teeth

Are easily obtained by cleansing your teeth daily with that justly popular dentifrice, SOZODONT. Composed of rare antiseptic herbs, it imparts whiteness to the teeth, a delicious aroma to the breath, and preserves intact, from youth to old age, the teeth. Acidity of the stomach will destroy the strongest teeth unless its effects are counteracted with SOZODONT, and this pure tooth-wash protects the dental surfaces by removing every impurity that adheres to them. Ask your druggist for SOZODONT.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap2y1.

A CARD.

To avoid misapprehension and to set at rest certain false reports, I am obliged to make this public statement with regard to my private business. I have no intention whatever of relinquishing the practice of medicine or surgery in the city of Plainfield, and I do not intend to change my residence. But I have associated myself with Doctor James B. Green in the practice of a special branch of surgery and will open for that purpose an office in the city of New York at 200 West 38th St., on and after September 1st, at which place I will be found between the hours of 11:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. except on Saturdays and Sundays.

The partnership relations with my father, Dr. C. H. Stillman, remain unchanged, and he will attend to my practice during my hours of absence from the city.

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS!

"The Plainfield Democratic Association," hold their regular meetings the 1st TUESDAY evening in each month. The rooms at headquarters, Front St., opposite the Post-Office, are open every evening for all who favor the election of HANCOCK & ENGLISH, to visit.

JAS. E. MARTINE,
President.

Hancock Veteran Association.

The regular meetings of the Hancock Veteran Association of Plainfield, are held in the rooms of the Democratic Association every Wednesday evening. The rooms are open every evening for members and visitors.

Young Men's Hancock & English Club.

The regular meeting nights of the above club is Thursday evening of each week, at Democratic Headquarters.

W. L. [illegible], PRES.
LOUIS M. STOVER, Sec'y.

ON last Monday the Long Branch division of the C. R. R., carried to New York 299 car-loads of passengers and 1900 pieces of baggage.

A NEW office has been created by the Receiver of the C. R. R.—that of General Manager—and Mr. Joseph S. Harris appointed to fill it. He entered upon his duties on Wednesday morning.

THE nearest approach to a soldier club that the Plainfield Republicans can scare up is an organization of little boys in blue. And the little boy-blue blows their horn as effectively as they do themselves.

MR. Halstead Compton, among his many other successes as a fruit grower, has this year raised a new melon ("The Surprise") from French imported seed. Its exterior is smooth as a pumpkin; and its interior salmon colored, and resembles in flavor a banana.

ONE of those most greatly benefited by this prolific fruit-year is undoubtedly Mr. E. M. Thorn of this city. A branch from one of his grape vines, which he kindly laid on our desk last Monday morning, bore seven rich clusters of purple fruit weighing probably a pound each.

ONE of our Front street bakers has lately been the victim of the petty thieving of one of his employees. Officer Randolph took the case in hand and traced the deed to the perpetrator whom he arrested. The thief, a woman living back of the shop, confessed the crime but claimed "it was such a little one."

THE post office department now issue money orders payable to the party purchasing, thus enabling any one going on a journey to a strange city to avoid carrying surplus money, and to collect at the desired point without identification, other than the order itself furnishes. This is quite a convenience to the public.

IT is stated by the press of New Jersey that the Plainfield Bicycle Club has accepted an invitation to be present at the Easton Fair and compete for the prizes there offered. Its members, however, are awaiting further information regarding the races, which they expect in reply to their Secretary's communication.

A NEW member of the Lincoln Campaign Club claims that he was shot clear through at Fredericksburg, and intends to vote as he fought. As he fought for the cause that Hancock fought for and Garfield turned his back on, this particular veteran doesn't seem to appreciate the fact that he's on the wrong side of the fence.

THE entire staff of this paper is at present full of thanks and peaches. Mr. Edward Higgs persuaded us to accept a basket of White Malcatoons from his orchards near Washington Rock, and they proved a most luscious donation. Mr. Higgs feels sure that the fine fruit crops of the season are a prophecy of Hancock's success.

MRS. AUSTIN'S Craig Place School, North Plainfield, re-opens on next Monday the 6th inst. Since the establishment of this commendable institution for the instruction of the young, its success has been most remarkable. The number of its scholars increase with each term; and the proficiency which they attain bears flattering testimony as to the thorough system of tuition that is followed.

THE First Mortgage Bonds of the Toledo, Delphos & Burlington Railroad Co. are being taken rapidly for investment. The issue, a very small one upon a large and valuable property, is only $2,250,000 for 285 miles of road running through the most fertile parts of the States of Ohio and Indiana. These bonds are 30 years to run at 6 per cent. interest. Investors who desire a loan combining all the requisites of safety, may address Geo. Wm. Ballou & Co., bankers, Boston and New York.

THE high repute in which Mr. H. P. Reynolds is held as a gentleman and a merchant, will assure his statement in our advertising columns, carrying weight with its readers. He does not claim that, at the prices he quotes, he is making a profit; but is compelled to reduce his goods to cost in order to protect his business. These statements no one will doubt, nor that he will continue to buy and sell only the highest obtainable grade of goods, and that the same conscientious care will be observed in his prescription department as heretofore.

THE fact, perhaps, is not generally known that there is a law in New Jersey forbidding the hiring out of horses or carriages, or running stages, or taking out pleasure parties on Sunday. Such is the case, and Mr. Joseph Corwin, of Secaucus, brought five suits against Mr. J. N. Young, the keeper of the livery stable at that place for violation of the law. They were watched with considerable interest and a large number attended the trials. Two cases were tried, and the jury returned a verdict of no cause in either case. The law may be a good one but it will be hard to find a jury in this State that will convict a man for such an offence.

THE county fairs to be held in this State this season will commence and end as follows: State Fair, Waverly, Sep. 20th to 25th; Burlington, Mt. Holly, Oct. 12, 13, 14, 15; Cape May, at South Seaville, Sep. 16, 17; Cumberland, Bridgeton, Sep. 22; Delaware Valley, Lambertville, Sep 14, 15, 16, 17; Egg Harbor City, Sep. 13, 14; Hunterdon, Flemington, Sep. 28, 29, 30; Monmouth, Freehold, Sep. 14, 15, 16; Moorestown Fair, Sep. 14, 15; Somerset, Somerville, Oct. 5, 6, 7, 8; Union and Middlesex, Plainfield, Sep. 27, 28, 29, 30; Warren, Belvidere, Sep. 5, 6, 7, 8; West Jersey, Woodstown, Sep 15, 16. The time for holding the Sussex Fair has been fixed for October 12, 13, 14, and 15.

THE last statement of the Department of Agriculture in regard to the leading crops of the country is very favorable. The average condition of the cotton crop is 102. Timely rains are reported and the cotton crop is ten days earlier than usual. Worms and rust are mentioned in each State, but no material damage has been done. The general average of the corn crop is given at .98, as against 100 on the 1st of July. The returns show a condition of spring wheat of .88 against .81 last year. California and Oregon report the highest condition since several years. For tobacco the general average for the whole country is .88, while for three years previous it has averaged at this season .84. Minnesota is expected to harvest this year 30,000,000 bushels of wheat.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

OUR citizens are almost universally returning to their homes for the Fall and Winter.

THE Sunday School of the Church of the Holy Cross re-opens on the second Sunday in September.

THE Rev. Dr. J. C. Long of Crozer Theological Seminary, will preach in the Park Avenue Baptist church next Sunday.

DOES the monopolist, whom the Robeson & Pangborn coterie have put up to be knocked down, spell his name Frederic, or not?

NOW is the opportunity for those who are in need of handsome wall papers to inspect the stock of A. Swain, No. 6 North avenue. He advertises elsewhere reduced prices.

THE entire building occupied by the Children's Home Association has been furnished with new window shades from the establishment of G. F. & C. E. Brown & Co., of New York.

PLAINFIELDERS should stay at home. One of their number is reported as returning from Bound Brook "chock full of malaria." Some people don't seem to know when they are well off.

NEXT Monday school opens, and the scholars appear to be happy over the event. It will not be many weeks, however, before the bad boys will be writing each other's notes of excuse for absence on account of sickness.

THE regular meeting of the Fire Board took place last Wednesday evening. After the transaction of more or less unimportant business, and the passing of numerous bills, the meeting adjourned until next Wednesday.

THE always popular dancing classes of Prof. Dodworth will reopen at Seminary Hall on October 12th, and be continued each Tuesday afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30. An evening class will be formed as soon as a sufficient number of applicants have entered.

THE "War of the Druggists" at present raging in this city, is being taken advantage of by residents along the whole line of the C. R. R. and outlying towns. Customers for patent medicines and toilet luxuries from other places, are purchasing their wants in Plainfield every day.

MESSRS. Edsall & Price, having removed to their new store at No. 20 West Front street, announced their Fall opening for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September, 2d, 3d and 4th. Special attention is called to their new departments of muslin underwear for ladies, and furnishing goods for gentlemen.

OUR Hotels in former years, were telling the truth when they advertised "no mosquitoes." But not so this year. It is rumored that we have been inflicted with them on account of the nomination of Garfield and Arthur. But such report is undoubtedly another "Democratic falsehood circulated for campaign purposes."

THE improvements that are being carried out by the Trinity Reformed Church, are adding greatly to the beautification and attractiveness of its property. Handsome walks of mosaic work in red and yellow brick have been laid, and bright green sod placed wherever needed. The inside of the church has been thoroughly retouched, and new paint and varnish judiciously distributed on the outside where it would do the most good.

THE umbrella as a lightning-rod will not probably come into general use. But General Fay, of Elizabeth, was in Newark last week during the shower, and while passing in front of a church which was struck by lightning the fluid burned several holes in his umbrella and ran down the ribs, passing off without injuring him. He exhibited the umbrella to his friends, who found that its future usefulness is greatly impaired until it gets repaired.

P. A. C.

The entries for the Annual Games to be held on the 15th inst., will close on Wednesday, Sept. 8th. The list is now filling up rapidly, and there is no question but that the games will exceed any in point of interest that the Club have ever held. Many of the Athletes who have been successful on the P. A. C. track in the past and who have pleasant memories in connection with the entertainments of the Association, but who have now retired from the cinder-path, will be present and lend their valuable assistance in the management of the sports.

The prizes are without a doubt the handsomest the club have ever given, from new designs made expressly for the Club and this occasion, and equal to any medals given by any Association this season.

Union County Caucus.

The delegates of Union County met in caucus at the Trenton House, Trenton, N. J., on Wednesday morning at 9:30, and organized by electing Mayor Bonnel, of Elizabeth, Chairman, and Wm. L. Force, of Plainfield, Secretary.

The committee on Credentials reported them as correct, and the roll was subsequently called. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the Monmouth and Middlesex delegations in relation to district elector. Capt. Wm. H. Gill of Elizabeth declined the position, and Col. Wm. H. Hoy was selected as the choice of the county for such office.

On motion an informal ballot for preference as Governor was taken with the following result: Ludlow, 23; Cleveland, 10; Albright, 9; Bird, 8; Parker, 2; Blank, 1.

A formal ballot stood: Ludlow, 28; Cleveland, 14; Albright, 6; Bird, 5; Abbett, 1.

The Chair on motion appointed the following to represent the County in the Convention.

Committee on Conference—John T. Dunn, and J. A. Fay, of Elizabeth; E. G. Blour, of Rahway.

Vice President—W. H. Williams, of Linden.

Secretary—Wm. L. Force, of Plainfield.

On Rules—Jas. H. Ritchie, of Fanwood.

On Credentials—T. B. Kingsland, of Elizabeth.

On Organization—R. M. Stover, of Plainfield.

On Resolutions—Capt. Wm. H. Gill, of Elizabeth.

After the selection of Captain Gill to represent the County in the State Central Committee, on the subject of an enlargement of such Committee, the caucus adjourned.

How to Become Naturalized.

An applicant for naturalization, if he arrived in this country after he was eighteen years of age, must make a declaration before the Clerk of any Court of Record having common law jurisdiction and a seal, of his intention to become a citizen, two years at least before his admission as such. At the end of five years from the time of his arrival in the country, such declaration having been made two years before, he is entitled to his papers upon application to the Court. In case the applicant arrived in the United States before he was eighteen years of age, and has attained the age of twenty-one years and has been in the country five years, he is entitled to become a citizen without the declaration two years in advance; he will then make the declaration of the time of his admission that for two years it has been his intention to become a citizen. The applicant must declare on oath that he will support the Constitution of the United States and renounce all allegiance to foreign powers. Furthermore, the court must be satisfied by one or more witnesses that the applicant has lived in the country at least five years, and in the State in which the court is held at least one year, and that he has been a man of good moral character. A man who has served in either the regular or volunteer army of the United States and has been honorably discharged, can be admitted upon his petition without previous declaration. The oath of the applicant is in no case allowed to prove the fact of residence.

Hotel Netherwood.

The success that has been experienced by the Hotel Netherwood this season under the management of Mr. Chas. King, has impelled its proprietors to advertise their intention to keep the house open until the first of November.

Elizabeth Athletics.

So popular have become contests of speed, strength and endurance among amateur athletes, that it is the duty of newspapers of the day to chronicle the approach of such events. The sports of the Elizabeth Athletic Club are too thoroughly appreciated to need more than a mention of the date, Tuesday, 21st inst., the regular Fall meeting of the club will take place at its grounds, near Prince street, Elizabeth, whereat many champions are expected to appear, and competitions of exciting interest are assured.

A Peculiar Casualty.

A distressing, though not serious accident, happened to Mr. Gotlieb Fritz on the afternoon of Thursday of last week, that was caused by a most unusual contingency. While the gentleman was engaged at his slaughter house, killing sheep, and had just run his knife through the neck of one of the animals that had been swung from the hoist, it suddenly made a convulsive movement that whirled it around, and the blade of the knife where it protruded from the throat struck against Mr. Fritz' leg and opened a deep gash. The unfortunate gentleman immediately bound up the wound and subsequent attention has almost entirely healed it.

Bonnat's Portrait of John Taylor Johnston.

The correspondent of the Hartford Courant in Paris, writes as follows in criticism of the portrait of John Taylor Johnston, Esq., which has just been completed for the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York:

"One does not notice the beard, the hair, the drapery, but his attention is instantly riveted to the portrait, and even if he has never seen Mr. Johnston he feels that there is such an air of truthfulness about it that it must be a faithful likeness, as well as the portrait of a refined and cultivated gentleman. While sufficient attention has been given to the details, it is apparent that every stroke of the brush was to give effect to the portrait, and not to the work as a mere picture. Mr. Johnston is seated in a chair with one leg thrown over the other, and is in a velvet coat or jacket. If I was to criticise a little I should say that the artist had seated him rather heavily on the cushion of the chair, and that the attitude is too much as if sitting for a photograph."

Rain.

It is a noticeable fact that almost every shower that has visited Plainfield during the past few months, has eventually settled into an uncomfortable storm and remained for some time. That of last Sunday intended to spare us altogether, and had passed on its way, when it noticed the poster of the Crescent avenue excursion and returned out of pure contrariness. The fall of water was not so great but the lightning and thunder was unusually vivid, and loud. So thickly was the atmosphere of the city charged with electricity, that any quantity of people will bear witness as to the "balls of fire" they saw (?) descending. Near the residences of Mr. James M. Dunn on Sycamore street and Mr. James Taylor on Madison avenue, the lightning in its freaks of playfulness was especially familiar and sociable.

Wm. H. Neal Deceased.

Early on Saturday morning of last week, all that was mortal of Mr. Wm. H. Neal, passed away. One of the oldest of Plainfield's citizens and merchants, his life has endeared him to all whose acquaintance he made. For six years past consumption has been slowly but surely sapping his life and energy, and unfitting him for the cares of business. At the time of his death he was nearing the completion of his 57th year, and leaves a wife, son and two daughters to mourn his loss. The following account of his business ventures is from the Central New Jersey Times.

Mr. Neal learned the printer's trade in the Union office of this place when under the management of Mr. Milton F. Cushing. He followed the business for several years, and then went into the grocery business as a partner of Mr. Reune Runyon. Being in poor health, he found it necessary to make a change in his vocation, and upon being recommended to try the butcher business, he entered it and found it beneficial, and for twenty years he followed that business, being a partner at different times with Charles Johnson, Wm. Smalley, and W. W. Coriell, and of late years with his son.

A Narrow Escape.

Mr. H. Lowitz's residence in North Plainfield, is the latest house that has been entered by burglars in our neighborhood. About two weeks ago it was discovered that some one had forced his way into the cellar and helped himself from Mr. Lowitz's refrigerator; and during the next night, although additional fastenings were placed on the windows, the same programme was carried out. A few days afterwards, however, the burglar arose higher in his aspirations and succeeded in opening a way into the kitchen. Mr. Lowitz had not retired yet, and hearing the noise waited until he supposed the man had entered, then arming himself and a friend with revolver and rifle, started to make a capture. Leaving the house by the front door the two gentlemen softly stole their way around to the back, expecting to catch their game in a trap. Just as they turned a corner of the house a man was observed endeavoring to hide himself behind some tall corn growing near. Mr. Lowitz took careful aim and fired, but his target turned and fled unharmed. All evil disposed parties will probably shun this house and its occupant in the future.

A. O. H. Picnic.

The first annual picnic of the Ancient Order of Hibernians No. 4, took place at Stelle's Grove on Thursday afternoon and evening of last week. The sale of tickets for some time past had been very great, so every preparation was made for the large number who were in attendance. As early as two o'clock many had gathered in the pleasant woods that had been selected, and from that time until midnight the hours and minutes were spent in continuous enjoyment. Refreshment counters were erected and afforded everything desired in the way of eatables and drinkables, excepting (very properly) intoxicating liquors. The latter protective measure worked admirably, and none of the visitors in consequence became too hilarious, nor full of overflowing spirits. The committee in charge of the arrangements, Messrs. Charles McCann, John Rafferty, Hugh O'Donnell and James Muldowney, left nothing undone that would add to the pleasure of all; and during the afternoon Father Morris, also, watched carefully after the interest of his flock. Two large dancing platforms were built under the shady trees, and as moonlight drew on they were extensively patronized by devotees of the waltz. Prof. Frazee's music was, as usual, perfect; and floor managers Wm. J. Tobin and Charles Clohosy engineered an order of twenty-eight various dances to a successful completion. One platform was entirely reserved for the enjoyment of Erin's national jigs and break-downs, and many a graceful "stepper" "shook her toe" in memory of young days in the "old sod." At eight o'clock in the evening the grove was filling rapidly, and before another hour had passed the financial success of the affair was assured by the crowd that had assembled. It is a flattering tribute to the good repute in which the association is held, that its first picnic should have yielded such satisfactory results.

The Firemen's Parade.

Politics is at present claiming so much attention, that nothing new is to be expected in relation to the coming firemen's parade. The boom is steadily growing, however, and everything is favorable for the entire success of the proposed event. Judging from the intentions of the different companies, a fine display of the department will take place and many visiting organizations will add to the general attractiveness of the procession.

Union Missionary Meeting.

There will be a Union Missionary Meeting in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, on Friday evening of this week, at 8 o'clock. Miss Dascomb, who has been for seven years a missionary in Brazil, is expected to address the audience. The occasion will be one of interest, as Miss Dascomb is considered by the ladies of the two Presbyterian churches as especially their missionary, and she expects in a few days to return to Brazil. All interested in the cause of missions are invited to be present.

Democratic Primary.

The Democratic primary for the election of delegates to the Gubernatorial Convention at Trenton, was held at headquarters on last Monday evening. Jas. E. Martine, Esq., called the meeting to order and stated its object. Mr. Lewis F. Wadsworth was elected Secretary. After nominations had been made, a recess of fifteen minutes was taken; at the close of which Messrs. McCaney and Stevens were appointed tellers to collect the ballots, and the following were chosen as delegates: James S. Vosseller, James E. Martine, Rowland M. Stover, William L. Force, Edward C. Morse and Joseph G. Miller. On motion it was voted that delegates unable to go should choose their alternates. After an eloquent speech by the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson, the meeting adjourned.

Dedicatorial Ceremonies at St. Mary's Church.

Next Wednesday, Sept. 8th, the day upon which the Catholic Church commemorates the birth of the mother of our Redeemer, has been selected for the dedication of the new church of St. Mary in this city. The ceremonies will commence at 10:30 a. m., and tickets have been issued at one dollar each, which can be procured at the residence of Father Morris any time until Monday evening, 6th inst. A large number of Catholic clergymen from this and neighboring dioceses are expected to be present and take part. Rt. Rev. M. A. Corrigan, D. D., will perform the ceremony of the dedication, and immediately after there will be a Solemn High Mass sung with Rev. Wm. McNulty, of Paterson, as celebrant, Rev. P. Hennessy, of Jersey City, as deacon, and Rev. Pierce McCarthy, of East Newark, as sub-deacon. Rev. John Vassallo, of Summit, will act as Master of Ceremonies. The music on the occasion will be furnished by the choir of St. Anne's Church, New York City, under the direction of Prof. E. G. Lanning, who will preside at the organ, which is now being placed in the church, and was made at the manufactory of the celebrated organ builders, Henry Erben & Co., of New York. Rt. Rev. Bishop Corrigan will preach the dedicatory sermon. In the evening there will be grand Vespers sung by St. Anne's choir and a lecture by Rev. Edward McGlynn, D. D., the distinguished pastor of St. Stephens' church, New York; admission to which will also be by ticket. For both the morning and evening exercises only a limited number of tickets will be issued, as it is not desirable on account of the room required for the ceremonies, to have more present than can be seated.

Pole Raising at Alton.

The announcement of a hickory-pole raising at Alton in Fanwood township on Friday afternoon last, was received with unbounded enthusiasm throughout the vicinity. For many days before the date set for the event, preparations were made to accommodate the gathering and speakers; and upon an arrival on the ground it was found that everything had been arranged tending to make the event long remembered for its success. A large delegation was present from the Democratic organizations of this city, and the Veterans association kindly contributed the presence and services of its drum corps and battery. From 1 o'clock until 3, wagons, carriages and all sorts and kinds of vehicles from adjacent towns and the surrounding country, arrived in large numbers, loaded with farmers, mechanics and citizens of all classes who had left their crops, their work benches and other cares and duties, to show by their presence their sympathy with the cause of Hancock and Democratic principles. Manager Benjamin Connett and assistants had their hands full in the entertainment of man and beast, but satisfactorily appeased all demands. Soon after the arrival of the crowd, a handsome pole seventy-five feet in heighth was erected without a mishap; from the top of which was unfurled the stars and stripes under which the Democratic nominee for President had so many times marched to victory and the destruction of his opponents. Cheer after cheer rang through the air as the flag waved in the breeze, and the names of Hancock and English rose to the sky and were caught up by the surrounding hills and echoed back and forth through the trees. The ten-pound rifled Parrot gun, under command of Captain Garrett Smith and his company of uniformed men, belched forth salute after salute in honor of the occasion, and added its loud tones to the universal expression of feeling. Under sheltering trees was placed a commodious platform, and around this was gathered an assemblage of almost the entire voting population of the town and a large number of visitors. Mr. Rowland M. Stover of Plainfield called the meeting to order and C. W. L. Martine, Esq., of Fanwood was elected chairman. After thanking his friends for the honor, he introduced the first speaker of the day, Hon. John T. Dunn of Elizabeth. This gentleman had only intended to be present as a visitor, and did not expect to be called upon for a speech, but kindly consented to accede to the manifest desire of those present. During his discourse the speaker portrayed in a most fluent manner the principles of the two parties, and held his hearers' interest by the eloquence of his words. At the close of cheering which followed, the justly popular Captain Jas. T. Brady was introduced, and the listeners were favored with one of that gentleman's inimitable speeches. The secret of Captain Brady's success as a speaker seems to lie in his remarkable powers as an oral caricaturist. Ready wit and a vivid appreciation of the ridiculous united with stinging criticism seemed to search out the weak spots in the armor of the opposing party and pierce its very vitals. The speaker was continually interrupted by the applause and laughter with which his salient points were received. Mr. James E. Martine was then earnestly called upon and replied with one of his telling speeches, at the close of which the gathering was dismissed. On the return of the Plainfielders, a procession was formed, headed by the battery and company of gunners. Other prominent places in the line of march were occupied by the drummers and fifers, and carriages containing the speakers and prominent citizens and politicians. Through Broadway and Crescent avenue, to Park avenue, and headquarters, the parade was made and greeted with cheers as it moved along. Halts were made near the residences of Messrs. R. M. Stover, James Martin, James E. Martine and other leading Democrats, and an ovation of cheers delivered.

Rifle Range.

The National Guard of New Jersey are at present practicing daily, under Gen'l Wm. H. [illegible], Inspector of rifle practice, for the inter-state and international matches at Creedmoor on Friday the 10th inst. The names of the team selected will be published in our next issue.

Our Brave Police.

The suspicious actions of several men who were driving through our streets last Sunday morning at an hour when all honest people should be abed, led officer Hapenny to ask them to stop for an interview. Without reply the horse they were driving was whipped into a faster gait, and the suspected ones showed only a desire to get away from the stern guardian of the law. Such action was positive proof that they were escaping thieves if not murderers, and the officer in consequence fired at them with his revolver in spite of the fact that he "had no warrant to arrest them." Officer Randolph afterwards met the fleeing parties on Seventh street and introduced Mr. Hapenny to them. They expressed pleasure at making the latter's acquaintance and mutual explanations followed. They took our gallant policeman for a tramp.

It is understood that our Plainfield police are intending to petition the Council to allow them to wear locomotive head-lights, in order that young men from Evona, who travel our streets at midnight, may know them.

A Bad Man.

The search that was at once entered upon by Chief Dodd, to discover the pedigree and early life of the Netherwood burglar, has been successful. The Newark police recognized Mr. Langhorne's photograph of Rosevain, whose history wherein it had come under their knowledge, is as follows:

Charles Wolf, alias Keg Wolf, alias George Rosevain, was formerly a resident of Newark; living with his mother at No. 124 Eighth avenue. On Dec. 31st, 1875, he was arrested for grand larceny and sent to the State's Prison for 2 years. One month after his time had expired, (Jan. 31st, 1877) he was arrested for atrocious assault and battery, and sent to the Caldwell penitentiary for six months. Four days after he was released, (Aug. 4th, 1877) he was arrested for knocking down a woman and stealing her pocket book containing $17. He subsequently escaped from his captors by jumping from a second story window, but was retaken, convicted and sentenced to the State's Prison for two years. On June 4th, 1879, he is believed to have been concerned in the robbery of a Newark store, but sufficient evidence could not be obtained. The day after, he was arrested on suspicion of another robbery, but on his way to the station house eluded the officers and gained his liberty. Since which time all efforts to find him had been unsuccessful.

During Rosevain's present confinement he had persuaded Warden Marsh's son of Elizabeth to undertake the defence of his case. This gentleman was furnished by the prisoner with "references" to look up which Rosevain claimed would fully and satisfactorily establish the purity of his character. When Mr. Marsh, however, learned of the Newark biography he refused to further consider the case. Detectives from Newark visited the prisoner in his cell on Friday last and readily identified him, but the accused denied any previous acquaintance with the gentlemen. After their departure he confessed that it was no use carrying on the plea of being an innocent victim of circumstances, as he was too well known.

On Wednesday the prisoner was brought before the County court and plead guilty. At the request of Chief Dodd Rosevain's sentence was postponed for a week, in order that officers might prepare other charges that are to be brought against him.

Washington Rock News.

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable and even brilliant hops of the season, at the above place, came off on Saturday evening last at the Washington Rock Mountain House. Some of the guests who had been together all the season were about to separate and it was thought to be a graceful thing to celebrate the "farewell" with more than the usual weekly festivities. The guests through their committee, Messrs. Kenneth and Krause, sent invitations to some of their fellow guests at the different houses in Dunellen, where boarders are received for the summer, who promptly responded, and at an early hour the ball room was filled with dancers. Among many others were Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Lines, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cross, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. J. Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Randall, all of New York, and stopping at present at Mr. Childs' well kept house at Dunellen. There were also present Mr. and Mrs. George H. Krause and Master George Krause, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey and Miss Bailey of Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Friedman and Mr. Joseph Friedman, Miss Clara and Miss Esther Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth and Miss Florie Kenneth, Mrs. Marsh, Miss Jennie Vaughan, Mr. William Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Schieren and Miss May and Miss Lulu Schieren, Miss Smith, Miss Hattie Bramm, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rauh and the Misses Linda and Maud Rauh, Mrs. Dunn and others. Prof. Frazee of this city furnished the music. Refreshments were served in time to avoid any encroachment upon Sunday morning, after which Mr. George H. Krause proposed the health of "our absent friends" which was drank appropriately in silence. This was followed by a toast to "Our Dunellen guests" and Mr. J. H. Staats was asked to present the compliments of the guests of the Washington Rock House to the friends from Dunellen. He arose and said "Well, ladies and gentlemen this is just horrible! to be summoned without a moment's warning to present to so much grace and beauty of the valley an appropriate address from a corresponding number of cultured and charming guests of the mountain. He would be a courageous man who would claim to be equal to it, and I promptly disclaim any such grace or power. I may say however on behalf of the guests of this house that you are indeed most welcome here. The mountain is most happy to shake hands with the valley!" He concluded by saying, that the scene about him at the supper table, amid so many "fair women and brave men" reminded him of the following verse to be found in the novel of "Mr. Verdant Green," not inappropriate to the occasion.

"Pass we in the gay procession brighter forms are borne along,
Fairer [illegible] pleasure [illegible] float amid the classic throng,
[illegible] laughter's ringing music fills the bounds [illegible]
And the [illegible] priests of knowledge [illegible]
Maidens [illegible]
[illegible]
And the [illegible] ladies' [illegible]"

Mr. C. B. Gregory and Mr. J. H. Wood responded on behalf of the invited guests in a happy and appropriate manner. Toasts to the committee of arrangements, Messrs. Kenneth and Krause, were then proposed and were drank and replied to felicitously. The party broke up precisely at midnight, the guests from Dunellen singing as a parting farewell the popular air—"Good night ladies, we're going to leave you now."

This hotel we understand will continue open until late in the Fall, as it has a large number of visitors during the Autumn season.

Grove Meeting.

Owing to the appearance of rain last Sunday the Grove Temperance Meeting was postponed. The meetings will be continued next Sunday afternoon, weather permitting, at the usual hour, and interesting discourses may be expected.

Personalia.

Sheriff Ryder was in town on business, Tuesday!

Fire Commissioner R. H. Depew, is at home again from Long Branch.

Mr. Thad. Doane is seeking a little recreation and rest by a trip to Wilmington, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howell have finished their enjoyable wedding trip, and are at home again.

Cashier Cannon Parse is looking remarkably young again since his trip to the Adirondacks.

Mr. George Vincent is in town again. The entire Club unite in saying that his new bicycle is "just boss."

The Hon. Wm. B. Maxson is living over again in his dreams the past weeks he spent at Fisher's Island and Chautauqua Lake.

We extend our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Van Arsdale, they are spending their honeymoon in the Adirondacks.

Superintendent Newhall of the Crescent Avenue Sunday School, is enthusiastically welcomed home again by teachers and scholars.

Mr. David Lennox, who sailed some days since for a visit to his sister in New Jersey, returned recently much pleased with the voyage.

Mr. L. V. F. Randolph is the latest campaign poet in our midst. His verses are admirable, but his sentiments "very condemnable."

The season of rest from his medical duties, which Dr. Charles A. Hart allowed himself at Montauk, L. I., has expired much to his regret.

Messrs. J. Moore, P. Varian and Frank Pope are at present making a tour of the wilds of Pennsylvania and New Jersey on their bicycles.

The family of Mr. R. H. Davies of North Plainfield, have returned from Manhattan Beach where they have been seeking bathing facilities.

Ex-Councilman Stover has been entertaining at his residence, for the past week, his sister and her husband, Baron Stratton, of Troy, N. Y.

Superintendent of meters, Morse, will spend a two week's vacation in New England. His faithfulness deserves as a reward, an enjoyable time.

The permanent Executive Committee of the World's Fair Commission will be honored by the appointment of Gen'l. Wm. H. Sterling as one of its members.

On Sunday, Aug. 29th Mr. E. K. Donaldson, (a young college student) filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church, delivering a very able and eloquent sermon.

Duxbury Mass., mourns the loss of Messrs H. M Gilligan, C. C. Moore and a little Moore. Their visit was extended just long enough to make their absence regretted.

Miss Lizzie Paff of Scotch Plains, who has lately been entertaining her cousin, Miss Lizzie Hazell, left with the latter last week for a visit to her home at Montreal, Canada.

Mr. W. Alex Bass Jr., is back from his summer residence at Red Bank. A continuous spell of high living among the swell families of that resort has had no worse effect than to sprain his ankle.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn has returned from the Catskills, and is once more superintending the receipt of Convention ballotings, as well as attending to other duties in his usual courteous and efficient manner.

Photographer Thorn has his hands full of business. Lately completing a fine picture of the Chautauqua building and CONSTITUTIONALIST office, he is now called upon to go to Peapack and take likenesses of the whole Smith family.

Mr. John Van Arsdale has lately purchased a fine piece of ground at Grove and Duer streets, where he will immediately begin the erection of a fine residence. The improvements intended will greatly add to the attractiveness of the neighborhood.

We cordially unite with the numerous friends that Miss Emma Gordon drew around her, during her residence here, by her unselfishness of character and loveliness of disposition, in congratulating Mr. F. C. Anderson, who is undoubtedly full of pride in the wife he has gained.

The many friends of Mr. Wm. McNabb, are overwhelming that gentleman during his present visit here, with congratulations upon his healthful looks and business success. Mr. McNabb is engaged with a telephone company in Paris, France, to which country he returns in a short time.

Messrs. Vanderbeek, Thorn, Rockfellow and Stelle returned from a day's fish on Wednesday with the usual mollified account of their catch. "Just exactly 300." Uncle Dan took them down, but had other business to attend to over the side of the boat, and had no time to add another 100 to the total.

Mr. E. W. Rarick gave us a call last evening. He has just returned from a two months tour in the State of Maine. He came back to the Middle States looking hale and hearty, and says his throat trouble has been very much benefitted by the trip. We hope to hear his ringing voice many times during the Fall and Winter.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

HANCOCK MASS MEETING.

The largest political meeting ever known in North Plainfield and one of the largest in Somerset county, was held at the hotel of Mr. Joseph Blatz on Friday evening of last week. The ball-room on the lower floor was packed with an interested gathering, zealous for the cause of Democracy and its Presidential nominees. The drum corps of the Veteran association of this city were in attendance, as well as Captain Smith's gunners and their piece of artillery. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Winfield Scott Chase, who stated in a few well chosen words, its object. An election resulted in the unanimous choice of the following permanent officers: President—John Bodine; Vice President—John Thickstun; Secretary—John Vetterlein, and Treasurer—A. L. Force. During the evening, as provided by motion, Messrs. Eugene Allison, S. O. Horton and A. Fritz were appointed by the President as a Finance Committee; also Messrs. W. S. Chase, David Carey and J. Blimm a Committee on Constitution and By-Laws. An Executive Committee of eight—one from each road district—is to be announced at the next meeting. The Hon. John T. Dunn, Captain James T. Brady, Jas. E. Martine, Esq., and Counsellor L. M. Trimmer of Jersey City, who were present, addressed the assemblage. Owing to the lateness of the hour, the latter gentleman made but brief remarks and accepted an invitation to be present at the next meeting and speak at greater length. The most unbounded interest in the cause of the association was expressed by all, and never was a campaign club organized with more sincere workers in its ranks.

Another evidence of the productiveness of this season's crops may be seen at the residence of "Uncle" Freeman Shotwell. On his premises is growing and blooming an enormous sun-flower, with a stalk 11 feet high and bearing 27 flowers.

On last Saturday afternoon at Dunellen's Hotel was held the Democratic primary for the selection of delegates from that district to the Gubernatorial and Congressional Conventions. Mr. John Vetterlein was chosen Chairman, and Mr. David S. Campbell Secretary, of the meeting. Those elected to attend the Convention at Trenton were Messrs. Albert L. Force and Winfield S. Chase. Alternates, J. Woodliff and H. Olsen. Those to attend at Belvidere, Messrs. John Bodine, John Billups. Alternates, A. Vielbig and D. Carney.

A hungry Hungarian was discovered in the woods along Grove street on Sunday and cared for by the landlady of the Somerset house. The Overseer of the Poor subsequently exported him to New York.

The petit jurors for the September term are Stephen O. Horton, Samuel S. Smalley, Charles Vermeule, John Spencer, L. B. Bolce and Wm. Wilde.

Collector Van Norstrand is so far recovered as to be able to attend to his business again.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Patent Medicines LESS THAN COST!
At REYNOLDS' PHARMACY.
Cor. PARK & NORTH AVES., [Near R. R. Station.]

In order to repel certain recent misrepresentations directed against the reputable and established Druggists of Plainfield, I am reluctantly led to adopt a business policy justifiable, in my opinion, for honorable dealers, under peculiar circumstances only. Acting on this policy I announce to the public a

Genuine Reduction

Along the whole line of Patent Medicines, Toilet Goods and Prescriptions, and I offer the following popular articles at the prices annexed, which I do not falsely pretend yield a profit, but which are

Less than Cost!

THE HEROISM OF A CANAL BOY.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

"Jim can manage him."

These words were spoken by a dark-featured and full-bearded man to his companion, a swarthy fellow whose every look betokened the fierce nature within, as the two ascended from the cabin of the Mary Ann of Bitter Creek, and stepped quietly on the quarter deck. The older of the two took a few turns of the somewhat confined space between the binnacle and a partly used chew of tobacco which the second mate had left on the port rail, and then went below to consult his charts.

The situation was indeed a critical one for the beautiful vessel, which rested like a swan on the heaving surface of the Miami Canal. For three hours she had been becalmed by a balky mule. Freighted with a cargo of golden-hued pumpkins, it was important that there should be no delay in reaching the port to which they were consigned. Hence the skipper's anxiety was but natural. The black clouds that were scurrying across the Southern sky told too plainly that a storm was approaching, and woe to the vessel it found unprepared. The Captain knew that in the present situation of his stately ship a wreck was inevitable should the storm strike her. It was an anxious moment, but his cheek never blanched. It couldn't, unless washed, and of this none who knew our hero had any fear. Glancing hastily at the compass, he saw that the vessel's proper course was East by South, and that the lead mule was at least two points away and on his beam ends. The storm was rapidly approaching, and the ominous mutterings of heaven's artillery was evidence enough that ere long the now placid surface of the canal would be lashed into white-capped billows, any one of which would engulf the Mary Ann. To think was to act with the Captain. Hastily seizing a glittering fog horn from its place in the ratlines, he placed it quickly to his mouth and shouted:

"Tie up the cook."

It was a wise move. The cook was liable to have hysterics when anything went wrong, and frequently tipped over the supper.

"The Cap'ns all right," said Coshocton Joe to the ship's carpenter, a tall, athletic fellow from Berea, whose brawny arm had often directed the fatal fishline in pickerel season.

"Aye, aye, messmate," was the response; "and though I'm sore afeard we'll ne'er see wife and children again or steal grapes in the Sandusky Valley, it's not I that will shrink back or step ashore at a time like this."

"Well said, my hearty," came in a gruff voice from the ship's waist. "Our binnacle lights may go out this night forever, but let us die like Ohioans."

By this time the first puffs of the approaching tempest were plainly to be felt, and the shrill notes of the boss hens on the neighboring farms showed that even they had scented the danger and were seeking shelter.

It was a terrific moment.

The mule was apparently the only animate thing that did not comprehend the danger. He lay obliquely across the towpath, occasionally whisking a fly from his ear with one of his hind feet, but gave no other evidence of life.

Unless he could be gotten on his feet the ship would be lost. What could be done?

While all were standing in speechless amaze at the phenomenal cussedness of the beast, a slouch hat was seen to emerge from the forecastle, quickly followed by a small boy. One glance at the angry sky and another at the mule was enough. Quickly leaping upon the slop bucket, he sprang lightly from the larboard rail to the towpath, and advanced toward the apparently sleeping mule.

The crew looked on with astonishment.

With stealthy tread he crept alongside of the animal, and with one bound alighted on his back. Like a flash he grabbed its tail and gave that member a violent twist. In an instant the mule was on his feet and kicking in seventeen directions at once. But he was left. The boy was on his back, holding the lines with a grasp of iron. With a terrible yaw-haw of rage the now thoroughly infuriated animal dashed madly forward. The strain on the cable was immense, and the good ship's timbers groaned as if in agony. In a moment, however, she felt the breeze created by the mule going ahead, and her cutwater cleft the blue waters like a knife as she keeled to starboard and stood away on her course.

The boy on the mule had saved her, and when the Captain saw him twist the animal's tail he said, loud enough for all to hear:

"That was the act of a statesman and a diplomat."

Who was the boy? James A. Garfield.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

The vitality of seeds may be tested by placing a sample of almost any of the larger kind of seeds or grains upon a hot pan or griddle. When the seeds are good and the vitality is perfect the specimen will crack or pop open with more or less noise; on the other hand, if the seed is not good or the vitality is defective, it will remain still and burn. This is a much quicker and surer plan of testing seed than to plant in earth or warm water. To test them in this way it is not necessary that the seed be perfectly dry, although they should not be kept too dry; an airy but moderately dry quarter garret is the best place to keep them.

A box 20 inches square and 16½ inches deep will hold one barrel (3 bushels).

A box 15 inches square and 14¼ inches deep will hold half a barrel (1½ bushels).

A box 17 inches by 7 inches and 9 inches deep will hold one-third of a barrel (1 bushel).

A box 10 inches by 12 inches and 9 inches deep will hold one-sixth of a barrel (½ bushel).

A box 8 inches by 8 inches and 8 inches deep will hold one peck.

A box 8 inches by 8 inches and 4 3-16 inches deep will hold one gallon dry measure.

The quantity of seed per acre required for different crops is as follows:

Wheat, per acre, broadcast, 1¾ to 2 bushels; wheat per acre, drilled, 1½ bushels.

Rye, broadcast, 1¾ bushels; rye, drilled, 1½ bushels.

Barley, broadcast, 2 to 2½ bushels; barley drilled, 1½ to 2 bushels.

Oats, broadcast, 2 to 3 bushels; oats drilled, 2 bushels.

Timothy, 1½ to 2 gallons.

Red clover, when sown with timothy, 2½ to 3 gallons; red clover, when sown without timothy, 3 to 4 gallons.

Herds-grass, 15 to 20 pounds.

Blue grass, 21 to 28 pounds.

Lucern, (dried), 10 pounds.

Millet, ½ to 1 bushel.

Corn in hill, 1 to 1½ gallons.

Sorghum, 2 to 3 quarts.

Buckwheat, 1 bushel.

Beets, 4 to 6 pounds.

Carrots, 4 to 6 pounds.

Turnips, 1 to 1½ pounds.

Parsnips, 4 to 6 pounds.

Beans, 1 to 1½ bushels.

Potatoes, 12 to 15 bushels.

THE ROMANCE OF A TRAMP.

About four years ago, says the Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette, Miss Emma Roland, of Galveston, visited an aunt in Warren county, Kentucky. It was summer, the season was, and one evening the girl sat in the yard, half reading and half regarding the enormous bumble bees buzzing around. A footstep didn't arouse the young lady. It was a voice that said, "Can I get a drink of water?" Two arms and the chin of a tramp leaned on the fence. He was dressed in the tramps' garb, a wardrobe at once so describable and indescribable. "I say, can I get some water?"

"Yes," said the girl.

"Must I go around to the gate or climb over the fence?"

"Both, if you choose."

"That's the way I like to hear people talk," said the tramp, climbing over and approaching. "Now, where's the water?"

"I'll bring it."

"You'd better bring the well, for I'm dryer than a barrel of bromophyle."

The girl went to the house and returned with a bucket of water. When the man had finished drinking she did not think that he had exaggerated his thirst. In fact, she did not think that his comparison had been adequate.

"What book are you reading?"

"Mill on the Floss."

"Overrated. I never liked it. All depth or no depth. I don't know which. Strained characters, don't know which. The novelist has tried to write a story without a well-defined plot, and has failed. Goldsmith's success as a plotless and charming writer was a bad example."

"You shouldn't tear my favorite book to pieces. I like George Eliot and all her works."

"You don't like 'Mill on the Floss.' You have been nodding over it the last half hour. You only pretend to read it because you imagine that in doing so you develop literary taste."

"I think, sir, you are impudent."

"But truthful. Here's a book you should read," and the tramp took from his ragged coat a tattered copy of Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy." "Dr. Johnson said that this book was the only work that could induce him to get out of bed mornings, sooner than his regular time of rising."

"And that's why you like," remarked the girl, taking the book. "If Dr. Johnson hadn't made that remark you would not find the work so charming."

"That's all right. Give me some more water."

The conversation was pursued until the tramp accepted an invitation to supper. His idea of Burton and Johnson was soon covered up with batter cakes. The tramp, Mr. Preston, remained all night. Next morning, when he announced his intention of leaving, the girl accompanied him to the spot where she sat when he hailed her.

"Why do you tramp around? Have you no home?"

"Yes, as to the home. Don't know as to the tramping."

"Whiskey?"

"Whiskey."

"Why don't you quit?"

"I will."

"When?"

"Now, on one condition. That you will consent to be my wife. Meet me under this tree four years from to-day."

"I will."

"Good-bye," and he climbed the fence and was gone. No correspondence was carried on between them. The manly, handsome face of the tramp hung before the girl like a portrait. Deep, earnest eyes, a merry laugh, accompanied the tramp. Several weeks ago the young lady visited her aunt. One evening last week she sat under a tree in the yard where four years before she nodded over a book. Bees buzzed around; the same bees seemingly. On her lap lay "Mill on the Floss;" near her a tattered copy of "Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy." A buggy drove up. A man alighted and climbed the fence.

"Mr. Preston."

"Miss Roland."

There was no indication of the tramp in the handsomely dressed gentleman. The clear, earnest eyes showed no lurid light, kindled by Satan's breath. That evening the buggy went to Bowling Green. Next morning a happy couple left on a southern bound train. They are now in this city. To-morrow they will leave for Texas.

"I don't want to make any trouble, but there is one man in this city who ought to be gibbeted!" began a blunt spoken woman of forty-five as she stood before the officers of the Twentieth street station a day or two ago. When they inquired for particulars she handed out a letter and said: "Observe the envelope. You will see that the writer calls me his Jessamine, and he wants me to set an early day for the wedding." When the captain had finished the letter, she was ready with another, adding: "And this is addressed to my daughter Lucretia. You will see that he calls her his rosy angel, and he says he can't live if she doesn't marry him. It's the same man." So it was, and his letter was as tender as spring chicken. That finished, she handed out a third with the remark: "This is directed to my daughter Helen. It's the very same man and in it he calls her his pansy, and he says he dreams of her." "Why, he has seemed to love the whole family," remarked the captain. "That's just it. I'm a widow with two daughters, and he was courting us all at once, and engaged to the three of us at the same time. Oh! what wretches there are in this world!" "Yes, indeed. It's lucky you found him out." "Yes, it is. If I hadn't he might have married the whole caboodle of us. If Lucretia hadn't opened one of my letters, and if I hadn't searched the girl's pockets while they were asleep, we'd have thought him an innocent lamb." "And do you want him arrested?" "No, I guess not, but I want this matter to go into the papers as a warning to other women. Just think of his sitting up with me Sunday night, Lucretia on Wednesday night and Helen on Friday night, and calling each one of us his climbing rose! Oh, sir, the women ought to know what a deceiving animal man is!" "Yes, he's pretty tough!" "It has learned me a lesson," she said, as she was ready to go. "The next man that comes sparkling around my house has got to come right out and say which he's after. If it's the girls I want my blessing, and if it's me I'll [illegible] to sit [illegible] of good to [illegible] things around and rely [illegible] of [illegible] two husbands!"

Hancock's Louisiana Order.

WHAT JUDGE BLACK THOUGHT AND SAID OF IT AT THE TIME.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29, 1867.

MY DEAR GENERAL: This moment I read your admirable order. I am much engaged, but I cannot resist the temptation to steal time enough from my clients to tell how grateful you have made me by your patriotic and noble behavior. Yours is the first, most distinct and most emphatic recognition which the principles of American liberty has received at the hands of any high officer in a Southern command. It has the very ring of the Revolutionary metal. Washington never said a thing in better taste or better time. It will prove to all men that "Peace hath her victories not less renowned than those of war." I congratulate you not because it will make you the most popular man in America (for I dare say you care nothing about that), but because it will give you through all time the solid reputation of a true patriot and a sincere lover of your country, its laws and its government. This, added to your brilliant achievements as a soldier, will leave you without a rival in the affections of all whose good will is worth having, and give you a place in history which your children will be proud of.

This acknowledgment from me does not amount to much, but I am expressing only the feelings of millions, and expressing them feebly at that.

With profound respect, I am yours, &c.,

J. S. BLACK.

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

It was during present Summer,
When the sun to Northern tropic
Had advanced and was returning
To the South; south of equator;
That a party three in number
Packed their trunks with 'sorted wardrobe
Wardrobe suited for the occasion.
It was in the month of August,
When the sun shone fiercest, hottest,
Did they set their faces northward
For the heights of the Adirondacks.
They by water, rail and stage coach,
Soon arrived at destination.
Near the base of Panther Mountain,
Is a village or a hamlet
By the natives called Chester.
Now the people of this hamlet
Seem to live with ease and comfort,
Seem to forage, for each day only
Having no thought of the morrow;
No [illegible] lines are depicted
On the visages of the people.
When a stranger comes among them
They seem social, jovial, happy,
Thinking that perhaps some spoiler
That the pockets of the tourists
Are so apt to have in keeping,
May change owners, in the meantime
By whose favor they may proffer
As our tourists were now settled
In their quarters at the hotel;
They proceeded with their tackle
Horse and buckboard, bait and luncheon
Unto Friend's Lake, three miles distant;
Mann'd the boat, which soon was anchored
By a stone with rope or ratline,
Soon the hooks with minnow baited
Was the crystal water, thrown in
Then with expectation buoyant,
Rod of finest make and single
Lines well proven, even [illegible]
Hooks of most approved pattern,
Bought of Vanderbeek the vender;
Thus equipp'd, with hope expectant
Triumphantly sat our trio
Soon there came a sense of feeling
A disturbance in depths below
And the younger of the party
Struck a pose, a [illegible],
And by a spasmodic effort
Landed the first bass of season.
Then again and for the third time
Fortune smiled on youthful effort.
Followed then by interregnum
Others from then scored a number
Thus the contest waxed and waned
'Till the sun no longer shone on
The smooth surface of the water.
Thus the sport of this day ended
When the trio sought their quarters
At Hotel Chester on the hillside,
Their catch bearing as a trophy
And as ration for their breakfast.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

For "The Constitutionalist."

DEAR FRIEND:

In answer to your request, I will proceed to give you a short account of my recent trip to Richmond.

About half after two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, having eaten sufficient lunch to keep me alive during a day or two of sea sickness, I proceeded to the foot of Christopher street, N. Y., and ascended the gang plank of the Steamer Wyanoke. I received an excellent stateroom and the right hand seat at the purser's table.

Though advertised to sail at three, it was quite four o'clock before we pulled in the last hawser. The view of the changing scenery as we sailed out of New York Bay was very charming. I passed the night very pleasantly, though I must confess to having tried on my life preserver before leaving the bay.

Next day it was rather monotonous till evening, when, as we were nearing New York, I caught sight of the most beautiful sunset I think I have ever seen. But all of a sudden, while looking at the sunset, the loud report and sudden flash of the signal gun informed us that we had reached Portsmouth. We soon fastened to the dock, and all night long the negroes kept wheeling their trucks back and forth and singing and shouting, which, though it kept many of us from sleeping, was decidedly musical and pleasant to hear. Next morning we found ourselves sailing up the James. The scenery of this river is very beautiful and picturesque, especially after you pass through the Dutch Gap, a little cut of a hundred yards or so which saves a sail of seven miles. Before we reached the Gap we got a glimpse of the old church at Jamestown, at least what is left of it, which seems to be only a sort of vestibule built of brick and covered with ivy. At 12 o'clock we reached City Point, at which thriving town we got out, Mrs. H., her daughters and myself, and having purchased a watermelon we climbed a pair of very rickety stairs which brought us on the hill, upon which the main part of the town is built. We cut our melon and ate it in truly primitive style. We then inquired of some of the darkies who grow here in great abundance the way to the City Hall and parks and museums, but we could only get out of them "dunno" and bland stare of amazement. We at last turned into the residence of one of the colored citizens who allowed us to wash our hands, while they assembled in a row to watch us.

Just above City Point is Bermuda Hundred, where Gen. Butler at one time had his headquarters. From here on, the sail up the river is very pleasant. The river is at some points so narrow that we sometimes could almost touch the banks on either side, and so winding that we would sometimes find ourselves on the opposite side of some building we had just passed. Just as you enter Richmond Harbor there is a long channel enclosed on both sides by ridges of rocks entirely out of sight under the water. So narrow is this channel that if the vessel should turn even two feet to one side or the other she would hit on the rocks. But we had a pilot on board who knew every inch of the river, and we arrived at Richmond safely at half after five. I concluded that it was too late to call on my friends, so I prepared for a walk up to the Capitol before tea, but here Mrs. H. interfered and insisted on my taking a ride with them to Powhatan's grave, just outside the city. Our hackman started off not in the direction of Powhatan's grave, but on a circuit around the city. He assured us, however, that he was going there, so we enjoyed ourselves in seeing the points of interest which he pointed out to us, such as Jeff Davis' residence, Washington's old stone house, Libby prison, the Capitol and grounds and view of the source of the James, which we had from the summit of one of the seven hills on which Richmond is built. You would have enjoyed seeing the old fashioned square houses and the shady streets. The population seems to be half negroes and their watermelons. After quite a drive we came to the Hollywood cemetery, which is perfectly beautiful. We rode around, up and down hill, 'till we thought we would never get through it. In about the middle our coachman stopped and showed us President Monroe's grave and near it a grave without a headstone, which he informed us was Powhatan's, but we knew better, and we informed him where we had seen his grave as we came into the harbor, whereupon he informed us that that was Powhatan's summer residence. Mrs. H. and Miss N. got out, while Miss R. and I laid back in our seats and laughed until the tears came into our eyes. We at last came too and disembarked. Mrs. H. then asked a young rustic, who was working near, if he knew where Powhatan's grave was, struggling to keep back her laughter. He asked "Powhatan who?" We two went off again at this, but the others kept up the conversation and we learned that "no Indians were buried in this cemetery only civilized folks." Of course we were shown Dr. Shield's plot where his three dead wives are buried in a row—he has one living. But the great feature is the monument to the Confederate dead, a huge pyramid of rough stone, uncemented and just laid together in one mass. This monument cost $4,000. We now soon found ourselves back at the steamer and supper over. I, however, managed to have a supper fixed up for the ladies who were going west on the 10:30 train that night.

There was nothing worthy of note in my return trip except on the day I spent at Old Point. I heard several of the passengers speak of going there on the Northampton next morning, so I concluded I would try and go too. So next morning at six o'clock found me on this new steamer armed with a letter from the purser in case Captain Mo— should not remember me, but he did, so that there was no difficulty raised. I took breakfast on the boat, and I tell you it was delicious. I don't know when I have tasted such fried chicken as we had that morning. Arrived at Old Point, the first point of attack was the magnificent Hygeia Hotel where the people breakfast from about nine to ten, go in bathing at twelve, come out in afternoon, dress at two or three for dinner and spend the evening in dancing. I was most interested in Fortress Monroe which I reached in time to see the morning drill. In this the men remind me more of machines than anything. There was one officer, however, who reminded me more of a bantam rooster; this effect was probably produced by his having a rather large stomach. When an officer wheels around, he somehow curves one leg out and revolves it around the other. I don't think it a very graceful movement, in fact the whole drill was not graceful. I was quite surprised to find such a village as the garrison forms inside the fort; there are only 185 men in it, too. I was quite amused at seeing the little oxen that were hitched up to the many carts around the street. We left Norfolk at six o'clock and started on our homeward trip with a vessel so light that after we got out away we rocked and pitched considerably, but somehow no one was sick this trip. There was a young fellow on board who thought he hailed from this city, was excessively green, you could not have persuaded him so, but he was all the same; he had been visiting in the South and picked some Southern friends who had cleaned him out of $85 in cards. Our steward stuffed him so full that he even took the lower birth for fear that he would be pitched out. He saw some porpoises coming up the bay and asked what they were. I immediately sang out "porpoises," but the steward gravely inquired if they had a big fin sticking upon their backs. The fellow said yes. "Oh! they were sharks; see lots of 'em," the steward replied. "Were they?" And he went off to dream of his sharks.

We reached New York before 6 p. m.

A LESSON IN LIFE.

Betty sighed. Now why she should have sighed at this particular moment, no one on earth could tell. And it was all the more exasperating because John had just generously put into the little, shapely hand a bran new ten-dollar bill. And here began the trouble.

"What's the matter?" he said, his face falling at the faint sound, and his mouth clapping together in what those who knew him but little called an "obstinate pucker"—"now what's that?"

Betty, who had just begun to change the sigh into a merry little laugh rippling all over the corners of the red lips stopped suddenly, tossed her head, and with a small jerk, always conciliating, sent out the words, "You needn't insinuate that I'm always troublesome!"

"I didn't insinuate—who's talking of insinuating?" cried John, thoroughly incensed at the very idea, and backing away a few steps, he glared down from his tremendous height in extreme irritation. "It's you yourself that's forever insinuating, and all that, and then to put it on to me—it's abominable!"

The voice was harsh, and the eyes that looked down into hers were not pleasant to behold.

"And if you think, John Peabody, that I'll stand and have such things said to me, you miss your guess—that's all!" cried Betty, with two big red spots coming on her cheeks as she tried to draw her little, erect figure up to its utmost dimensions. "Forever insinuating! I guess you wouldn't have said that before I married you! Oh, now you can, of course!"

"Didn't you say it first, I'd like to know?" cried John in great excitement, drawing nearer to the small creature he called "wife," who was gazing at him with blazing eyes of indignation; "I can't endure everything."

"And if you bear more than I do," cried Betty, wholly beyond control now, "why then I'll give up," and she gave a bitter little laugh and tossed her head again.

And here they were in the midst of a quarrel! These two who but a year before had promised to love and protect and help each other through life.

"Now," said John, and he brought his hand down with such a bang on the table before him that Betty nearly skipped out of her little shoes, only she controlled the start, for she would have died before she had let John see it, "we'll have no more of this nonsense!" His face was very pale, and the lines around the mouth so drawn that it would have gone to any one's heart to have seen their expression.

"I don't know how you will change it or help it," said Betty, lightly, to conceal her dismay at the turn affairs had taken, "I'm sure," and she pushed back, with a saucy, indifferent gesture, the light waving hair from her forehead.

The hair that John always smoothed when he petted her when tired or disheartened, and called her "childie." Her gesture struck to his heart as he glanced at the sunny hair and the cool, indifferent face underneath, and before he knew it he was saying: "There is no help for it now I suppose."

"Oh, yes, there is," said Betty, still in the cool, calm way that ought not to have deceived him. But men know so little of women's hearts, although they may live with them for years in closest friendship. "You needn't try to endure it, John Peabody, if you don't want to. I'm sure I don't care!"

"What do you mean?" Her husband grasped her arms and compelled the merry brown eyes to look up to him.

"I can go back to mother's," said Betty provokingly. "She wants me any day, and then you can live quietly and live to suit yourself, and it will be better all around."

Instead of bringing out a violent protestation of fond affection and remorse which she fully expected, John drew himself up, looked at her for a long, long minute, then dropped her arm, and said through white lips, very slowly:

"Yes, it may be as you say—better all around. You know best," and was gone from the room before she could recover from her astonishment enough to utter a sound.

With a wild cry Betty rushed across the room, first tossing the ten-dollar bill savagely as far as she could throw it, and flinging herself on the comfortable old sofa, broke into a flood of bitter tears—the first she had shed during her married life.

"How could he have done it—oh, what have I said—oh John, John!"

The bird twittered in his little cage over in the window among the plants. Betty remembered like a flash how John and she filled the seed-cup that very morning, how he laughed when she tried to put it between the bars, and when she couldn't reach without getting upon a chair, he took her in his great arms, and held her up, just like a child, that she might fix it to suit herself. And the "bits" that he said in his tender way, why they had gone down to the depths of her foolish little heart, sending her about her work singing for very gladness of spirit. And now!

Betty stuffed her fingers hard into her rosy ears to shut out the birds chirping.

"If he knew why I sighed," she moaned. "Oh, my husband!" Birthdays—nothing will make any difference. Oh, why can't I die?"

How long she stayed there, crouched down on the old sofa, she never knew. Over and over the dreadful scene she went, realizing its worst features each time in despair, until a voice out in the kitchen said: "Betty!" and heavy footsteps proclaimed that some one was on the point of breaking in upon her uninvited.

Betty sprang up, choked back her sobs, and tried with all her might to compose herself and remove all traces of her trouble.

The visitor was the worst possible one she could have under the circumstances. Crowding herself on terms of the closest intimacy with the pretty bride, who with her husband had moved into the village a twelvemonth previous. Miss Elvira Simmons had made the very most of her opportunities, and by dint of making great parade over helping her in some domestic work, such as house-cleaning, dressmaking and the like, the maiden lady had managed to ply her other vocation, that of news gather, at one and the same time, pretty effectually.

She always called her by her first name, though Betty inwardly resented it; and she made a great handle of her friendship on every occasion, making John rage violently, and vow a thousand times the "old maid" should walk!

But she never had—and now, scenting dimly, like a carrion after its prey, that trouble might come to the pretty little white house, the make-mischief had come to do her work, if devastation had really commenced.

"Been crying?" she said, more plainly than politely, and sinking down into the pretty chintz-covered rocking-chair with an energy that showed she meant to stay, and made the chair creak fearfully. "Only folks do say that you and your husband don't live happy—but la! I wouldn't mind—I know 'taint your fault."

Betty's heart stood still. Had it come to this! John and she not to live happily! To be sure they didn't, as she remembered with a pang the dreadful scene of words and hot tempers; but had it gotten around so soon—a story in everybody's mouth!

With all her distress of mind she was saved from opening her mouth. So Miss Simmons, failing in that, was forced to go on.

"An' I tell folks so," she said, rocking herself back and forth to witness the effect of her words, "when they git to talkin' so you can't blame me, if things don't go easy for you, I'm sure!"

"You tell folks so?" repeated Betty vaguely, and standing quite still. "What? I don't understand."

"Why, that the blame is all his'n," cried the old maid," exasperated at her strange mood and her dullness. "I say, says I, why there couldn't no one live with him, let alone that pretty wife he's got. That's what I say, Betty. And then I tell 'em what a queer man he is, how cross, an'—"

"And you dare to tell people such things of my husband!" cried Betty, drawing herself up to her extremest height, and towering so over the old woman in the chair, that as she jumped in confusion at the storm she had raised, and stared blindly into the blazing eyes and face rosy with righteous indignation, her only thought was how to get away from storm she had raised, but could not stop. But she was forced to stay, for Betty stood just in front of the chair, and blocked up the way, so she slunk back into the smallest corner of it, and took it as best she could. "My husband!" cried Betty, dwelling with pride on the pronoun—at least, if they were to part, she would say it over lovingly as much as she could till the last moment; and then, when the time did come, why people should know that it wasn't John's fault—"the best, the kindest, the noblest husband that was ever given to a woman. I've made him more trouble than you can guess; my hot temper has vexed him, I've been cross, impatient, and——"

"Hold!" cried a voice; "you're talking against my wife!" and in a moment big John Peabody rushed through the door, grasped the little woman in his arms, and folded her to his heart, right before old maid and all!

"Oh!" said Miss Simmons, sitting up straight, and setting her spectacles more firmly.

"And, now that you've learned all that you can," said John, turning round to her, still holding Betty, "why—you may go!"

The chair was vacant. A dissolving view through the door was all that was to be seen of the gossip, who started up the road hurriedly, leaving peace behind.

"Betty," said John, some half hour afterward, "What was the sigh for? I don't care now, but I did think, dear, and it cut me to the heart, how you might have married richer. I longed to put ten times too into your hand, Betty, and it galled me because I couldn't."

Betty smiled, and twisted away from his grasp. Running into the bedroom, she presently returned still smiling, with a bundle rolled up in a clean towel.

This she put on her husband's knee, who stared at her wonderingly.

"I didn't mean," she said, unpinning the bundle, "to let it out now, but I shall have to. Why, John, day after to-morrow is your birthday?"

"So 'tis!" said John. "Gracious! has it come around so soon?"

"And you, dear boy," said Betty, shaking out before his eyes a pretty brown affair, all edged with silk of the bluest shade, that presently assumed the proportions of a dressing-gown—"this is to be your present. But you must be dreadfully surprised, John, when you get it, for oh! I didn't want you to know!"

John made the answer he thought best. When he spoke again, he said, perplexedly, while a small pucker of bewilderment settled between his eyes: "But I don't see, Betty, what this thing," laying one finger on the gown, "had to do with the sigh."

"That," said Betty, and then she broke into a merry laugh, that got so mixed up with the dimples, and the dancing brown eyes, that for a moment she couldn't finish. "Oh, John, I was worrying so over those buttons; they weren't good enough, but they were the best I could do then. And I'd only bought 'em yesterday—two whole dozen. And when you put that ten-dollar bill in my hand, I didn't hardly know it, but I suppose I did give one little bit of a sigh, for I was so provoked that I hadn't waited buying them till to-day."

John caught up the little woman, dressing-gown and all! I don't think they have ever quarreled again—at least I have never heard of it.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

The Democrats of the City of Plainfield are requested to assemble at their rooms, on Front st., opposite the Post Office, the evening of

Friday, Sept. 17, 1880,

at 8 o'clock, to elect delegates to attend the Congressional Convention, to be held at New Brunswick, Sept. 21st, 1880.

JAS. E. MARTINE,
President.

1876.

The legally cast and returned vote for President in Louisiana was

Tilden	83,685
Hayes	77,280
Democratic majority	6,405

Yet, in the face of such truthfully ascertained result, a Returning Board, organized exclusively partisan, and therefore in defiance of law, which provided for a fair representation of each party, but with the sanction of John Sherman and James A. Garfield, "visiting statesmen," defrauded the popular will by giving the electoral vote of the State to Mr. Hayes.

There never was a more flagrant outrage committed against free government than that, and now, one of the chief instigators of it, with a record badly smirched in other particulars, has the effrontery to ask the people to elect him President.

CIVIL SERVICE.

With a grand flourish of civil service reform trumpets Mr. Hayes once issued the following order:

"No assessments for political purposes on officers or subordinates should be allowed. This rule is applicable to every department of the civil service."

Now, every poor clerk is compelled, under pain of dismissal, to pay a large per centage of his salary for Garfield electioneering purposes, while members of the Cabinet, and even Foreign Ministers, are neglecting official duties and roaming the land in the service of party.

Vive humbug!

END FOR END.

That distinguished visiting statesman, John Sherman, to whom the people pay a large salary to attend to the public finances at Washington, has been making speeches for Mr. Sherman and Mr. Garfield out West.

The chief substance of his remarks consisted of an eulogium on specie resumption, which glory he credited to three sources in the following order:

John Sherman,
The Republican party,
Divine Providence.

If the gentleman had turned things around, end for end, he would have evidenced more regard for truth. Whatever specie payments we now enjoy came solely from the blessings of a kind Providence in the shape of successive and abundant crops. That alone made the result possible, Mr. Sherman to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Massachusetts Democrats, in their State Convention last week, forcibly expressed the truth by resolving—"That the Republican party is sectional and not national, that its persistent fanning of the embers of sectional strife weakens the sentiment of union and retards the prosperity of the country."

COMMERCE.

Under Republican rule the important and enriching interest of ocean commerce has been allowed to dwindle nigh into extinction.

The American flag once ranked next to England as the ensign of world wide traffic. It proudly fluttered in every port and over every sea. Now it is disgracefully furled.

From carefully prepared data the fact appears, that on the 16th of June last, there were bound to and from the United States, together with those in our ports, 6,28[illegible] sailing vessels, and all of them, with the exception of 1,346, or about twenty per cent., were under foreign flags, and that of the American, nearly one-half were brigs and schooners in the West India and Southern trade.

And at the same time, there were bound to and from and in ports of the United States 592 ocean steamers, all but 61 of them being foreigners.

Belgium, with only one sea port, owned more commercial steamers than the United States, and Austria, with a single port of consequence, Trieste, had no less than 179 sailing vessels in the American carrying trade.

What a humiliating record that is, and inexcusable, because with proper care it might have been prevented.

To prosperously reestablish ocean commerce, and secure enlarged markets for the products of American industry, are among the many national blessings that will result from the election of

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

SHERMAN—ARTHUR.

It was John Sherman who, as Secretary of the Treasury, wrote to Collector Arthur of the New York Custom-House as follows:

"Gross abuses of Administration have continued and increased during your incumbency.

Persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no services.

The expenses of your office have increased, while its receipts have diminished.

BRIBES, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in several branches of the Custom House, and you have in no case supported the efforts to correct these abuses."

That is an official indictment strong enough to incapacitate the guilty party from ever holding another public office.

And yet, the Republican National Convention placed that self same condemned official in nomination for Vice President, and that identical John Sherman is going about the country, at a salary of $7,000 per annum, making speeches in favor of his election.

No wonder the people are crying loudly—"LET US HAVE A CHANGE!"

THE CANDIDATES.

The Garfield Republicans, unable to defend their candidate from the serious imperfections which his own record has created, give up the task as hopeless, and now assert that the campaign should be conducted on party, not personal grounds.

That dodge won't save them.

They thoughtlessly put up Mr. Garfield at Chicago, and now must carry him, the dead weight he is.

Public sentiment is daily growing stronger in favor of the personal worth of candidates for office, and it is a wise and needed requirement.

A very large number of partisans now look carefully into the character and qualifications of each candidate, and do not swallow everything wire-pullers dangle before them, and besides, there exists a vast and increasing body of independent voters who will only support the best men, regardless of party name.

That is the political standard of the present day and it blocks the aspiring pathway of Mr Garfield.

His public actions as a Congressman, not invented by partisan foes, but taken from the record as made by himself, and severely denounced by his own party friends when so made, stamp him beyond question a venal politician, and therefore unfitted to be Chief Magistrate of the United States.

On the other hand, the most searching scrutiny into the private and public life of General Hancock has failed to cast a shadow upon his uniform career of integrity, patriotism and intelligence.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

DESPERATION.

The Garfielders, driven to desperation because they cannot find a single truthful charge against General Hancock have exhausted themselves in the silly attempt to prejudice the high standing of Mr. English on account of certain tax sales in Indiana. The following card from two Republican gentlemen disposes of that slander:

TO THE PUBLIC.

In reference to the publication recently made in the Cincinnati Commercial in relation to purchases of property at tax sales in Marion county, Ind., in the name of Wm. H. English, we know that said publication is unjust to Mr. English. We were the agents that made all these purchases, and they are all cases where Mr. English owned or had an interest in the property, and bought solely for the purpose of saving himself from penalty, and not for purposes of speculation. We had express instructions from Mr. English not to bid off any property on speculation. We are both Republicans, and make this statement purely as a matter of justice.

WALTER RIVERS,
D. M. GREENE.

Indianapolis, Aug. 16, 1880.

Nothing can injure the spotless reputations of the Democratic candidates for President and Vice President. Every partisan gun touched off by their enemies kicks back and hurts the assailers.

A COMPARISON.

When Mr. Dawes, of Massachusetts, was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in a Republican House of Congress, the aggregate amount passed for Naval expenses during the four years commencing in 1869 was $82,461,825.

During the succeeding four years, with Mr. Garfield, of Ohio, at the head of the Appropriation Committee, such expenses were swollen to the enormous aggregate of $94,919,780.

Being in excess of Mr. Dawes fifteen per cent.

The following four years Democrats had control of the Committee and Naval expenses fell to $60,987,248.

Being a reduction on Mr. Garfield of thirty-five per cent.

The foregoing figures are significant, proving as they do why Treasury cormorants are so zealous for the election of Mr. Garfield President. Such an event would be honey for them, but bitter herbs for the Tax-payers.

What Wade Hampton didn't say fills half a column in the average Republican sheets.

PARTY MORE THAN UNION.

It was the Graphic, a Garfield journal, that recently avowed this sentiment:

"If it was put to a vote to-morrow, and Republicans were confined to the choice of Hancock, the Union General, who is now a Democrat, and Longstreet, the Rebel General of fifteen years ago, who for years past has been a Republican, the rebel general would poll the immense majority of their ballots."

Think of that, Soldiers of the Union and Independent Republicans!

VERMONT.

The Republicans are jubilant because they did not lose Vermont last Tuesday. Judging from their loud crowing they must have felt scared even about that stronghold of Federalism. By the use of an immense amount of money, the importation of a regiment of speakers, the frenzied waving of the bloody shirt, and the bulldozing system of threatening men with loss of employment unless they voted to suit bosses, the Republican majority for Governor shows a very slight increase, but on Congressmen a falling off. A free expression of political sentiment at the polls would have cut down the anti-Democratic majority in Vermont many thousands.

THE "SHOE BILL."

The Republican press, true to its natural instincts, began "slinging mud" at the Democratic candidate for Governor, Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow, in a few hours after his nomination. Their first volley was—"he voted against the shoe bill," and then they paused to note the effect, and they are terribly chagrined to find that they had their yell and exhausted their breath for nothing. The subject of their charge is such a nonsensical one that it is hardly necessary to notice it, but for the benefit of those of our readers who have never heard of this terrible charge against Governor Ludlow we print from the columns of the True American the following in relation thereto:

Neither the Democracy nor Mr. LUDLOW need to make an apology for, or defence of, Mr. LUDLOW's vote upon the so-called "shoe bill." It needs only that the circumstances under which that vote was cast should be known, to demonstrate the fact that in so voting he complied with his oath of office and performed his duty to the State.

The circumstances are these:

At the legislative session of 1878, a bill was presented from the county of Essex, so amending the State Prison Act as to forbid the contracting of the labor of the prisoners in the manufacture of felt and silk hats. As there was no probability of any such occurrence, and as there was some local sentiment aroused in Essex, the bill was passed as a sort of concession to the members from that county.

In 1879 another bill was introduced, providing, in the same way, that the labor of the prisoners should not be contracted for in the manufacture of boots and shoes.

With that bill arose the broad question whether the State should employ its convicts or not.

The bill was introduced in the House on the first day of the session, and, having passed that body, was received in the Senate on the 10th of February, and was referred to the Committee on State Prison, consisting of Senators BODINE (Rep.) of Gloucester; CRAMER (Rep.) of Warren, and MARSH (Dem.) of Mercer.

On the 26th of February the Committee unanimously reported the bill, "with a recommendation that it do not pass."

Accompanying this recommendation was a report, in which the committee presented the reasons for the conclusion at which they had arrived.

Briefly stated they are as follows:

(1.) That the employment of the convicts was necessary:

1st. For the preservation of their health.

2d. For the maintenance of discipline.

3d. For $76,000 which they earned each year, and which would otherwise have to be provided by taxation.

(2.) That their employment being necessary, the exemption of the shoe trade was merely arbitrary, and must result in the selection of some other trade or business in which the competition with free labor might be serious. The men could not be employed without coming into competition with somebody; and

(3.) That the immensity of the shoe trade amounting to a product of $200,000,000 annually in the United States, made the employment of the 270 convicts in New Jersey, a question of no moment, because the product of their labor was but a drop in the bucket to the gross amount manufactured and consumed.

When the bill was taken up on its final passage, on the 12th of March, the question presented to the Senate was: Whether, in an attempt to prevent a competition which it could not control, and scarcely affect, the State should force its convicts into idleness, sickness, insubordination and insanity, at a cost of nearly eighty thousand dollars a year, to be taken out of the hard earned taxes of the people, or whether it should not.

On this question Mr. LUDLOW voted in the negative, and the following Senators voted with him: BEEKMAN, BODINE, COOPER, CRAMER, EMSON, HOBART, KEASBEY, LEAMING, MARSH, PIDCOCK, SCHENCK, SEWELL, VAIL, WARD and WHITICAR.

At the same session the Legislature passed a joint resolution (Mr. LUDLOW voting in the affirmative) providing for the appointment of a commission, to consist of five persons, "who shall make a careful inquiry into the subject of prison labor, and whether it comes into competition with free labor, and if so, in what manner and to what extent, and what in their opinion is the best means of preventing such competition, and at the same time providing proper maintenance for the prisoners."

The gentlemen composing that Commission were EDWARD BETTLE, formerly Senator from Camden and President of the Senate; WILLIAM R. MURPHY, then Supervisor of the State Prison; A. S. MEYRICK, a prominent farmer of Somerset county; SAMUEL ALLINSON, one of the managers of the State Reform School for Boys, and Dr. SANFORD B. HUNT, editor of the Newark Advertiser. They worked as few commissions work; they went thoroughly and earnestly into their subject, examined it in all its bearings and details, took the testimony of all persons interested in the question who came before them or who could be reached by correspondence, and came to the same conclusion that the Senate Committee had reached, with the additional recommendation that the authorities should diversify the employment of the men, as much as possible, so as not to bear more than was necessary upon any one branch of labor. That recommendation has already been complied with, and no real cause for complaint remains.

General Grant held on to his commission in the army until inaugurated President March 4, 1869.

The Democratic nomination for Governor sought Mr. Ludlow because of his eminent fitness for the position.

The election of a Democratic President and Congress will be an annual saving to the taxpayers of millions of dollars.

Mr. Ludlow was elected Democratic Senator from the County of Middlesex over the strongest man the Republicans could nominate.

A Democratic colored man was shot dead in Mississippi the other day. The Republican papers at the North take no notice of the dastardly outrage.

The Republicans, after the lapse of fifteen long years, having failed to re-establish friendly relations between the North and South, the people think it time to elect a Democratic President.

It is stated that the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher intends taking the stump for Mr. Garfield. That will settle the question. No man can politically survive the advocacy of Beecher and Ingersoll.

Mr. Garfield has presented a handsome Bible to a Campbellite Church in Virginia. It is a good thing to donate a Bible, but better, even for a Representative in Congress, to practically follow its moral teachings.

The Northern object of the war was to restore the Union and vindicate the Constitution. To that the South surrendered, and the welfare of the whole country demands that sectional hostility shall be forever terminated.

Our national prosperity depends upon a people fraternally united for the glory and development of a common country. That the Republican party cannot accomplish, because its leaders persist in making sectional hate their political capital.

The road from a canal tow-path towards the White House is open for any American to try the tedious journey, but, if he turns from the right into treacherous Credit Mobilier and DeGolyer swamps, his feet will surely stick fast in the mire.

Mr. Garfield, now the doctrine of hate candidate for President, not many months ago uttered this sentiment—"The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support." Very true, Mr. G.!

The committee of the two sections of the Democratic party in Virginia—the Readjusters and the Funders—have agreed to hold a joint conference on the 15th of September for the purpose of putting one electoral ticket in nomination and thus securing the State for Hancock and English.

Mr. Kasson, Minister to Austria, at a salary of twelve thousand dollars a year, comes home to make speeches for Garfield. Taking $1,000 a month out of the public treasury, ostensibly for diplomatic services abroad, but in reality to pay for partisan harangues at home, is one of the ways the money of the people is now wasted.

Henry S. Harris, of Belvidere, Warren County, was nominated for Congress in the Fourth Democratic Congressional District on Wednesday last at Belvidere. Mr. Harris was Prosecutor at the time the Warren County Ring thieves were punished by imprisonment a year or two since. His election is a surety.

The next Governor of this State will have more than the usual amount of patronage, and will make the following appointments: A Secretary of State, Clerk in Chancery, Clerk of the Supreme Court, Attorney-General, State Prison Keeper, two Supreme Court Judges—all very lucrative offices—and several County Judges and District Attorneys.

As an example of how public money is squandered for the purpose of rewarding political corruptionists, every member of the infamous Returning Board of Louisiana, with the possible exception of one, and all their agents and attendants, have been provided with fat offices by Mr. Hayes and at a cost to the Treasury of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A paper devoted especially to the interests of colored men and edited by a colored man, is published at Montgomery, Ala. It thus disposes of the Republican cry about intimidation and fraud:

Fraud is the cry of the Republican papers of the North about the Democratic party of Alabama. Sing on, as much and as long as you please, we colored men aided the Democracy in rolling up the large majority; and, don't you forget it, we are satisfied.

[From the New York Star.]

The Coal Conspiracy.

Last spring the leading coal companies of Pennsylvania drew up a compact to limit the production of coal in order to create an artificial scarcity in the market and thus advance prices to a scale agreed upon.

The immediate consequences of this compact were to put the ill-paid miners on half-time, paralyze the retail trade and throw out of employment altogether many thousands of laborers and drivers usually employed by these retailers. Consumers naturally revolted against the arbitrary action of the companies, and hosts of householders, who had been in the habit of purchasing their year's supply of coal during the summer months, omitted to do so this year.

According to the Philadelphia North American, the net outcome on the monopolistic compact has not been wholly satisfactory to the projectors, who have now combined to advance prices again "by the singular reason that they have difficulty in selling at current rates."

Commonly the operators believe that with the approach of cold weather, people must buy at any cost, and that an upward tendency in prices will lead to rapid sales.

This selfish and infamous conspiracy has been the means of putting thousands for which the Republican leaders in this State sold the nomination for Governor in the pocket of the Republican candidate.

The excuse is that F. A. POTTS has merely been the "agent" of the extortioners. A leading Republican paper pleads that he has been "an agent," but admits that he has been an influential one. He has been more than an agent—he has been a party to this conspiracy that has periodically brought workingmen to want, and has regularly robbed the public. When was he ever known to use the "influence" he is admitted to have possessed against this combination? It has been the means of enriching him, and that is all he was concerned for.

The movement to put up the price of coal again, just as the fall is setting in, bodes no good to consumers or to the workingmen. The former are to be made to pay more for their winter supply, while the latter will—notwithstanding the great love professed for the workingmen by Mr. POTTS and his party, because they want their votes—be deprived of their work, in order that these combinationists may keep down the supply and continue their extortion.

These Republican politicians bubble over with love for workingmen just about election time, but when election is over they will let workingmen starve for their own gain.—True American.

THE Newark Register nails one of the lies which the Republican papers are publishing about Mr. Ludlow, like a rap to the counter. The Newark Advertiser having stated that he voted against the hatters' bill—the statement being made to deceive persons engaged in that trade in Newark, and catch their votes—the Register says: "The 'hatters' bill' was introduced by Mayor Fielder in 1878 and was known as Assembly bill 108. The Senate journal has the following record of the final vote on its passage: In the affirmative—Messrs. Canfield, Emson, Gardner, Hendrickson, Hobart, Kirk, Leaming, Ludlow (President), Marsh, Mathers, Rabe, Ringwag, Sewell, Silverthorn, Whiticar—15. Nays—Cooper, Magie, Moore, Pidcock, Plumer, Ward—6. Republicans in roman; Democrats in italics. By the above it will be seen that Mr. Ludlow voted for the passage of the hatters' bill and that seven other Democratic Senators voted with him. If the workingmen of the State are as wise and intelligent as we believe them to be, they will pay no heed to the outcries and pretended interviews that are being published by the Republican papers who only seek power that they may use it in the future, as they always have in the past, to injure and oppress the working classes. The Republican party is the natural enemy of the workingman.—True American.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

At the election in Vermont, Tuesday, a vote of about 70,000 was cast. The Republicans, making gains in the cities and towns, carry the State by about 23,500 over the Democrats and Greenbackers. The total vote will not be far from 70,000, as against 67,000 four years ago, and the Republican majority over the Democrats will be about 26,500, as against 23,600 then. The Greenbacker vote will not be much over 2,500, or about the same as it was two years ago.

Senator Bayard addressed a large Democratic ratification meeting at Columbia, S. C., on Tuesday.

The Navy Department has declined to send a vessel to bring North the remains of Gen. Torbert, who was lost in the Vera Cruz.

It is currently reported and believed in Washington that General Miles, now at Fort Keogh, is to succeed the late Gen. Myer as Chief of the Signal Service.

The New Hampshire Republicans held a State Convention Tuesday and nominated Charles H. Bell, for Governor, three Railroad Commissioners and three Presidential electors.

Several more wrecks on the Florida coast are reported.

Incoming steamers bring further reports of the havoc done by the hurricane of the last days of August; much damage was done on the Bermuda Islands.

Mayor Cooper, of New York, has vetoed Bergh's cat exterminating ordinance.

The loss of the American merchantman Eric the Red, off Cape Otway, Australia, has been confirmed. She had on board 150 cases of exhibits for the Melbourne International Exposition, which were lost.

The obelisk has been successfully removed from the hold of the Dessoug, and is being encased in wood preparatory to removal to its site in Central Park.

The State election in Arkansas last Monday resulted in a grand Democratic victory of nearly 50,000 majority.

The municipal election of Wilmington, Delaware, on Tuesday, resulted in a draw battle. The Republicans carried the city by 128 maj. The Democrats secured the City Council by five majority. The Democrats, owing to over-confidence, polled a light vote, while the Republicans brought out a large vote. The total city vote is only 5,700 on a full vote of 7,500.

The steamship Vera Cruz was wrecked off the coast of Florida last week. Over seventy person were lost, including Gen. A. T. A. Torbert.

Arkansas, being a Democratic State, has not followed the infamous example of Minnesota, which is a Republican State, in engrafting upon its State constitution an amendment which expressly authorizes repudiation of its own State bonds. Minnesota clings to her shame. Arkansas has repudiated Repudiation.

GEORGE C. LUDLOW.

WHAT IS SAID OF HIM.

[Somerset Gazette—Rep.]

Mr. Ludlow is an able lawyer of New Brunswick, of good private life, with a strictly Democratic record in the Senate. He is a gentleman, educated and honorable.

[Phila. Record.]

Mr. George C. Ludlow, whom the Democrats of New Jersey have nominated for Governor, is a man of ability and high character. He is a resident of New Brunswick, a prominent lawyer and ex-President of the State Senate. He is a man of great popularity, and the Democracy of our sister State have done themselves much credit in their selection of a candidate.

[New York Sun.]

The Democrats of New Jersey have jumped the pitfalls and made a nomination suitable to the year.

[New York Star.]

The people of the State of New Jersey have reason to congratulate themselves that Gov. McClellan will surrender his executive trust to a successor in every way so worthy as Senator Ludlow.

[New York Tribune.]

He is a man of good character and ability, a fair lawyer and an honest man.

[Phila. Times' Correspondent.]

His integrity has never been questioned, and among the long list of honorable names upon New Jersey's Gubernatorial roll there is no one which will stand above his.

[Editorial Comment Phila. Times.]

In New Jersey the Democrats have acted with the coolest judgment. They have put aside all possibility of faction troubles in the nomination of Ex-Senator Ludlow. He is without an enemy in his party, and his popularity is attested by the fact that when a candidate for the Senate in Middlesex county he led Tilden's vote considerably. New Jersey Democrats are doing nothing to endanger their steadfast majority, and it is not likely that even the Republicans sincerely regard it as a doubtful State.

The Greenbackers in the First Congressional District are again without an organ, the Vineland Advocate in its last issue declaring that it will not hereafter be a partisan organ, and gives as the reason because "there is not enough Greenback party in South Jersey to support a local paper, or if there is they have invariably failed to do it."

We Can't Talk

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them, let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS!

"The Plainfield Democratic Association," hold their regular meetings the 1st TUESDAY evening in each month. The rooms at headquarters, Front St., opposite the Post Office, are open every evening for all who favor the election of HANCOCK & ENGLISH, to visit.

JAS. E. MARTINE,
President.

Hancock Veteran Association.

The regular meetings of the Hancock Veteran Association of Plainfield, are held in the rooms of the Democratic Association every Wednesday evening. The rooms are open every evening for members and visitors.

Young Men's Hancock & English Club.

The regular meeting nights of the above-club is Thursday evening of each week, at Democratic Headquarters.

W. L. HETFIELD, Pres.
LOUIS M. STOVER, Sec'y.

IT is expected in a few weeks that there will be one bachelor-druggist the less in this vicinity.

THE excursion to Mauch Chunk from North Branch, has been postponed to Saturday, Sep. 18th.

THE college students are again at their studies and Plainfield's young ladies haunt the post office, disconsolate.

THERE will be an interesting address at the Temperance Grove Meeting next Sunday afternoon. Exercises commence at 4:15 o'clock.

THE Council will receive the thanks of the public for their action in relation to the laying of Park Avenue's dust during the Fair time.

THE Rev. Henry V. Voorhees, D. D., of North Branch, N. J., preached two eloquent sermons in the Trinity Reformed Church on Sunday last.

A FAMILY row on Cottage Place, Saturday evening, culminated in slaps and curses, and was terminated by Officer Hapenny who arrested the "whole business."

MR. HALSTEAD COMPTON'S melons are to be found during the season ornamenting the tables and appeasing the delicate appetites of all our prominent resident families.

JEROME Pack, Esq., has materially improved the looks of his popular saloon on Park avenue, by boarding over the ceiling and making other improvements. Jerome makes a fine oyster stew.

LAST Sunday's heat impressed the teachers and scholars of the Crescent ave., Sunday School, with the fact that the hour of meeting had been changed from morning to afternoon, at least a week "too quick."

THE Young Peoples' Association of the Park avenue Baptist church, held a most instructive and interesting meeting on Tuesday evening. The Revs. Vincent, Ketcham and Hurlbut spoke, and Dr. Lowry, Jr., presided.

ANYONE desiring a magnificent property and handsome residence, will find one advertised in our columns of this issue. The place is beautifully and conveniently situated, and is an opportunity seldom given to secure an attractive residence.

AN old subscriber gives us the following remedy for rheumatism: Take an eel skin and bind it over the afflicted part. Our informant says he was effectually cured of the disease after months of pain, by this simple remedy, which is not a new one by any means, as we oftentimes before have heard of the same.

MR. W. E. MATTISON, M. D., a physician of many years experience and reputation, is the latest addition to the medical profession of our city. Having opened an office at No. 25 West Second Street, with hours from 8, A. M. to 9, P. M., he respectfully solicits a share of the patronage of those in need of advice.

SLAVIN'S Company performed at Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday evening of last week, giving for the first time their new play entitled Hezikiah Perkins. The parts were all commendably taken, and the piece deserving of a large audience. It is to be hoped they will again favor us later, when we are all at home for the winter.

MESSRS. Melbourn & Manning, contractors and builders, have commenced the erection of another handsome residence on the corner of Second Place and Broadway for Job Male, Esq., and have three other buildings in course of construction. The popularity of this firm for good work at low figures is rapidly on the increase.

NOT only have the Trinity Reformed church just cause to be proud of the handsome improvements recently made on their property, as noticed last week, but the fact that it all has been done without the contracting of the slightest debt, is greatly to their credit. The society now starts out with no drawbacks in the way of unsettled claims, and have only to meet the usual running expenses of their weekly services.

A COAL train on the Central R. R. of N. J., broke a coupling when coming down the mountain near Bray's Hill, between White House and Lebanon, on Friday morning last. Forty cars or more were scattered over the two tracks. Many were badly broken, delaying through freight trains for four hours. A brakeman, whose name was not ascertained, was severely injured. The wreck was cleared away in time to prevent any delay to passenger trains.

THE finest watches in the market are the A. Saltzman watch, which has been awarded medals at international exhibitions for their excellence. Factory, Chaux-de-Fonds, Switzerland. Office, No. 15 Maiden Lane, N. Y. city. We speak from personal experience when we assert we believe they have no rival in the market for durability, beauty or correctness as time-keepers. Ask your jeweller for the A. Saltzman watch before making a purchase of any other.

WE hear every week of some new convert to Republicanism from the ranks of Democratic business men residing here—Central Times.

So you do hear of them, but unfortunately for Messrs. Garfield and Potts the hearing does not establish the fact. We do not blame our Republican contemporary for circulating such a report, for something of a like nature must undoubtedly be done to overcome the effect caused by such prominent conversions as have been made in the cases of Messrs. Forney, Jerome, Palmer and the scores of others whose entrance into the Democratic party we have noticed in these columns from time to time.

OUR esteemed contemporary, the Times has fallen into the ruts made by insignificant and unscrupulous journals which advocate the election of Garfield, and is telling "stories." In its last issue the following funny one appeared:

> "A wealthy Democrat who intends to vote for Garfield was asked by one of our Republican citizens the reason for the change. The Democrat's reply was brief and to the point. 'I own too many [illegible] bonds,' said he, 'to risk the [illegible] change to Democratic rule.'"

We presume the writer means the same Democratic gentleman of this city who was so indignant at the idea of such a story being circulated about him, that when approached on the subject by a friend, he said—"I am over 70 years of age and have been a voter nearly 50 years, and it is too late now for me to take my vote from an honest man and give it to a thief."

Tell us some more stories, Mr. Times, and mention names.

THE petit jurors drawn for the next term of court at Elizabeth, from this city, are Wm. C. Butler, Philip Boem, Gabriel Bachman, Jacob J. Laing, Randolph Dunham and Charles Hodges.

MR. D. D. Vermeule announces in another column that he is now prepared to insure parties in reliable companies at the old office of the late E. F. Webster. Those wishing insurance should give him a call.

WHILE we hear of but one Democrat (?) in Plainfield joining the Garfield ranks, every day brings forth the name of some Republican in favor of an Honest Government, who announces his intention of voting for Hancock & English.

BEFORE the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth, last week, Bob Snyder, who was convicted of setting fire to a Cranford residence, was sentenced to two years in the State Prison. Mrs Bremner an accessory goes to the County Jail for four months.

MR. JOHN W. Morris, the well-known horse dealer of New Brunswick, advertises in this issue that he has on sale a special lot of Vermont, Kentucky and Western horses, consisting of fine drivers, matched teams and family roadsters. All customers may feel assured of fair dealing and entire satisfaction.

Our County Fair.

The time of holding the Second Annual Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association is drawing nigh. It will occur on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th of Sept. Exhibitors should bear this in mind. Entries for trotting closes on Saturday evening next. This will be the finest Fair in the State.

Well Done.

Judge McCormick's action at Elizabeth on Wednesday last, in sentencing Rosevain the Netherwood burglar to ten years at hard labor, will meet with the approval of all. The Court courteously awaited the moves of those engaged in prosecuting the matter, and upon their discoveries imposed the full penalty the low allowed.

"The Largest!"

The Crescent ave., Sunday School is to be congratulated on the entire success of its excursion despite the unpropitiousness of the weather. All the cars possible to secure without the expense of an additional engine, were filled to the entire capacity of seat, aisle and platform. At the Grove, and Park, and Branch, pleasure and enjoyment were readily found, and an uninterrupted day of the utmost satisfaction was experienced.

Masonic.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., resumed work, after a season of rest, on Tuesday evening last. Regular Communications the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month. Lodge Room, Van Deventer's building.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M. will resume work, after a season of rest, on Monday evening, Sept. 12th, in their Lodge Rooms, over City National Bank. The fraternity will always receive a cordial welcome.

Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M. meets in Van Deventer building the first and third Thursdays of each month.

According to the report of the M. W. Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New Jersey, there are 149 lodges in this State which have a total membership of 11,968. The gain of the past year was—affiliated, 143; restored, 92; raised, 384. Total gain, 619. The loss was—dimitted, 185; suspended, N. P. D., 361; suspended, U. M. C., 1; expelled, 11; deceased, 146. Total loss, 704.

During the year A. L. 5879 there was raised $6,529.85, which, with the amount in treasury at the previous report, $2,575.21, made a total of $9,105.06. Disbursed, $5,627.46, leaving a balance of $3,477.60, which, with $9,000 invested in bond and mortgage, makes the total resources of the Grand Lodge $12,477.60.

The Lodges throughout the State are generally reported to be in good condition. Since the meeting of the Grand Lodge in January last, but one dispensation for a new Lodge was granted by the Grand Master. It is for Mariners' Lodge, of Barnegat, and was issued on May 29. This Lodge, when it receives its charter next January, will be the one hundred and fiftieth Lodge in the State.

$20 for Treading on a Man's Corn.

P. (short for Patrick) Cuskley, Esq., is a gentleman engaged in the milk business on Park avenue, just within the city's limits. Besides such profits as accrue from his extensive sale of the lacteal fluid, Mr. P. C. seeks additional income by the raising of vegetables and other agricultural products. A portion of his farm (about 15 acres) was in May of the present year, sown with corn; and in spite of the universal backwardness of crops and the generosity with which the seed was scattered, on the last Sunday of June, 1880, the stalks flourished in all their bucolical loveliness about four and a half feet above the ground—according to the estimate of Mr. P. Cuskley himself. The fences that surrounded these acres of valuable growth, however, failed to protect them from the ravages of cattle pastured in the neighborhood. At different times the wandering disposition of Mr. Mellick's, Mr. Webster King's and Mr. Carpenter's unruly steers and heifers, prompted these beef-steak furnishing cattle to visit the spot and regale themselves upon the juicy leaves of the young plants. Not satisfied with filling their seven stomachs, out of innate destructiveness the cattle would trample the plants under foot and cast them and all their natural beauty to the earth. The owners of the cows naturally and justly objected, and sought to collect damages from both Messrs. Mellick and King; but those gentlemen emphatically declined to give any satisfaction whatever. Failing in such direction, Mr. P. Cuskley brought suit against Mr. Alexander Carpenter for $20 damages, and the case was tried before 'Squire Louis F. Wadsworth and a jury of six, on last Saturday morning. For the Plaintiff appeared Messrs. Suydam and Hetfield; the defendant was represented by Mr. Craig A. Marsh. The case for the complainant rested after it had been conclusively proven that Mr. Carpenter's "four cows and a calf" were frequently in the habit of visiting the corn-field in question. The defense sought to establish the fact that the "four cows and a calf" never entered the field on the date mentioned; and even if they did Mr. King was to blame, as he pastured the "four cows and a calf," and exercised control of them for $2 a month; and lastly, the "four cows and a calf" didn't belong to Mr. Alexander Carpenter, anyway. Regarding the damage done, Mr. Kane ("if it was his corn") wouldn't have had it happen for $50; Messrs. Darby and Terry thought $20 was a fair estimate of the loss if the weather improved and they should have rain—not too much rain, but just rain enough; Mr. King thought the loss was very slight, and Mr. Emmons considered that a thinning out was just what the crop needed. Lawyer Marsh had carefully prepared himself for the case and fortified his summing up with many legal decisions—all of which faithful interest in his client's welfare resulted in a powerful argument that was as ineffective on the jury, as it was undeserving of being. Corporation Counsel Suydam was much briefer in his summing up, cited no cases and talked the jury into his view of the matter in less than fifteen minutes. A verdict was consequently given in favor of the plaintiff for damages amounting to $20; and the defense announced its intention to appeal the case.

At Last.

Partial justice has been done Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., by the payment of his bill for services rendered in the City Park legal contest; Common Council last Monday evening ordering paid his bill of $540 for such services. Mr. Maxson faithfully battled for the city in the prosecution of the claim to the beautiful piece of ground known as the "City Park," and his bill should have long ago been paid as originally presented.

Homeward Bound.

By the following postal from our fellow citizen ex-Judge Good, it will be seen that his steps are now homeward turned, and we anticipate having the pleasure, during the coming month, of greeting his well known countenance in the City of Plainfield.

HOTEL GRANDE BRETAGNE,
Lake Como, Bellagio, Italy,
August 23d, 1880.

My last letter was from Rome. Since then we have visited Pisa, Genoa, Turin, Milan, Como, and are now at this place among the Alps. We will be in these mountainous regions for the next fourteen days and will go over seven of the most important passes. We expect to reach Paris on the 7th of September and remain there a week. This is a magnificent spot. I wish you were here to see the grandeur of nature. Our party is reduced to twenty. We are all well and happy.

A Tragedy Recalled.

Announcement has publicly been made that the personal property of the late Hugo Fischer will be sold on his premises between New Market and Bound Brook, by R. H. Becker, the administrator. Fischer is the man who shot and killed his farm-hand and companion, George Lunges, and then committed suicide on the very morning that Olga, the sister of young Lunges arrived in Hoboken on the steamship Wieland. The sister emigrated to wed Fischer and the nuptials were to have taken place on the day of the double tragedy. Fischer believed that the marriage was a conspiracy entered into by Lunges and his sister to rob him of his property. This idea did not enter his diseased mind until a day or two before he decided to defeat the project by murdering his companion. There are no claimants for Fischer's property, and it is believed he has no living relatives.

A Useless Boom.

The presence in our city on Thursday evening of last week, of a number of uniformed Elizabethans and Westfielders, served greatly to convince the public that there was a torch-light procession going on, in spite of the fact that only thirty-two voters (by actual count) and a squad of little boys in blue were turned out by the united efforts of Plainfield's Republican associations. The evening had been selected for the opening of a "wigwam" (vulgarly called a cattle-shed) on Peace street; and the wives and children of our Republican citizens united with a number of curiosity-inspired Democrats in occupying the hemlock sofas, from whence they could gaze on their husbands and fathers who, with a would-be governor and an orator, occupied a raised platform, opposite. The first speaker was a fine looking gray-haired gentleman by name Frederic (k ?) A. Potts, looking extremely disconsolate over the fact that "the Tribune has published my speech and I have nothing fresh." For a few moments upon his introduction there was great excitement among the audience. The women made strenuous efforts to elevate their babies above the heads of those in front, by standing them on the rapidly wilting piccadillies of the male adults before them. The male adults objected—which proceeding the women seemed to consider as most reprehensible in view of their desire that their babies should see "the man that's up for Governor." Mr. Potts recited an essay on tariff, and resumption, and protection, and a number of other tions; which essay he had neglected to commit thoroughly to memory, and consequently some time was lost by a frequency of repetition necessary in order that the speaker might "find his place" again. At the close of the discourse, the expectations of the audience arose at the appearance of what was intimated to be a glee club. Disappointment, however, followed. Declining to sing, the young men occupied a few moments very commendably in driving a number out of the building and thereby allowing others to enter. Major Zig-zag Pangborn was then introduced—a gentleman so well known in and out of the State as to satisfy all of the good judgment displayed in selecting him to white-wash the Republican party and its nominees. His speech was of the usual Pangborn style, held within certain bounds by the presence of women and children instead of men, as an audience. His oration was varied by numerous questions (squelchers, he considered them) asked his "Democratic friend present here to-night." "Are you not glad," he inquired, "that the Republicans were victorious in the late war?" Which question from a member of the same party as Longstreet and Mosby, to a member of the same party as Hancock, Sherman, McClellan, Custer and others, was—now we consider it—undoubtedly a squelcher. May we in return, present as interrogatories for Mr. Pangborn to answer the following which the Jersey City Argus has compiled?

Were you not a defaulter in the sum of $7,944.51 while acting as an additional Paymaster in the army on or about May 24th, 1862?

Did not the Government bring suit against you and your bondsmen for the amount of your defalcation, and obtain judgment against you and your bondsmen in the United States Court at Trenton?

Did not the United States Court issue an execution against your interest in the Evening Journal building and the Journal newspaper, and was not the same advertised to be sold to satisfy the judgment?

Did you not compromise the suit of the Government by the payment of $1,000 and costs?

Were you not one of the originators and a leading member of the Know Nothing Order, the object of which was to deny all forgeigners who landed on our shores the right of citizenship?

Are you not or have you not been a leading member and "Senator" of the "Order American Union," whose object is or was to proscribe Roman Catholics, whether native or foreign born, from holding office?

Did you not write the lectures of the notorious Edith O'Gorman, as alleged by the Newark Journal?

Did you not assist in the concoction and passage of the "Thieves' Charter," that infamous charter which deprived the people of Jersey City of the right to select their own rulers, and which fastened upon the city an irresponsible Legislative Commission system which, by plundering, corruption, extravagance and mismanagement generally, increased the city's debt from seven millions to nearly fifteen millions of dollars in three years?

Did you not a few years ago hold the office of Custom House Inspector, and swear monthly that you performed the duties attached to that office, while as a matter of fact you devoted your time to editing the Journal, and going about the country making Republican stump speeches, performing no Custom House duties whatever except the congenial one of drawing and pocketing your monthly stipend?

During a part of the Major's speech the drummers and band outside drowned the sound of his voice, much to the relief of the audience and the disgust of the orator. He kept on just the same, however, (and with just as much effect) not even neglecting to wave his hands in gesticulation towards the flags bearing the names of Democratic and other States, that decorated the walls. After Zig-zag had run himself down the women went home and put their babies to bed—excepting the little boys in blue who had permission to sit up late in honor of the event.

P. S. We neglected to mention that there were some resolutions passed. Here's one of them, which is rather hard on Hayes.

Resolved, That whilst we point with pride to the skillful, pure and upright administration of President Hayes, who has nobly stemmed the tide of dangerous and anarchic legislation attempted by rebel politicians, we will strive in the future for the election of such representatives as shall save the interests of our country from a like jeopardy.

The Church of St. Mary.

During its erection and since its completion, the new church of St. Mary has attracted the curious and admiring. The beauty of its exterior outlines and graceful architecture, and the tasteful combination of colored brick used in the construction of the outer walls, were subjects of the universal approbation of all. The surrounding grounds were laid out in sod-bordered paths and prospective lawns, as soon as the builders had finished their labors; and already give—even in their newness—an idea of the natural beauty they will present in another year. All these and many other attractive features of the cathedral's exterior, have been always available to the curious public, but the interior as it appears in a finished state was not thrown open for inspection until the dedication of the structure, on the day that is solemnized by the Catholic Church as commemorating the birth of the mother of our Redeemer. In consequence, on Wednesday last, almost the entire gathering who had assembled in attendance at the dedication ceremonies, were for the first time able to form any idea of the appearance of the new church.

At the principal entrance, massive doors of stained wood swing back on hinges of bronze to admit the attendant into a spacious and high-ceilinged vestibule. On the left, an easy-rising stairway with gothic balustrade of oak surmounted by a heavy walnut rail, ascends to the organ loft and choir gallery; while on the right an open door leads from an adjacent entrance. As the visitor crosses this ante-room to enter the church at the opposite passage, a life-size angel in white with graceful gold-tipped wings, holds forth the basin of holy-water for acceptance. To describe the feelings which cannot fail to pass over the senses of all as they step into the interior of the sanctuary, is well nigh impossible. At first they are struck with an impressive perception of the solemnity that pervades the entire place; and as their gaze becomes riveted upon the grand altar facing them, and the many adjuncts of sacred worship surrounding it, the presence of holiness is recognized. Then a sentiment of mild repose pervades the mind, as the soft hues that float through the many colored windows sparkle in scintillations of tender light upon the surrounding walls and arches, and a gentle tranquility possesses the spirit of taste. In their desire to satisfy the æsthetic longings of all, the decorators have been remarkably successful, and the judgment displayed in the selection and combination of the many tints, decidedly praiseworthy. The side walls and ceiling are laid with a ground work of maize, azure and fawn, while friezes and borders of drab, cream and olive embellish the whole and relieve the harshness of angular beams and niches. Bright scarlet carpet of yielding velvet hushes the falling foot-steps; while pews, whose rich cabinet work of highly polished woods is carved in trefoils and artistic curves, embody convenience and comfort. From each column that supports the gothic roof, branch forth slender brackets of deep blue, and gold terminating in crystal globes of engraved glass through which jets of gas flash their golden rays. The windows that pierce the walls are marvels of exquisite color. Inserted in sashes of flowing tracery are stained panes of diverse variegation which add to the sun-beams an intensity of beauty. These windows are the donations of many generous hearted friends and members of the church. The principal one over the altar was presented by the Ancient Order of Hibernians; that in the right transept representing St. John the Baptist, by J. S. Harberger, Esq. The one in the left transept is divided into three parts; the centre—St. John the Evangelist—by Father Morris, the pastor; the two sides—St. Cecilia and St. Elizabeth—by Messrs. Jeremiah O'Rourke and P. J. Sheridan, the architect and contractor of the edifice. The window above St. Joseph's altar at the right, is the gift of the St. Aloysius Cadets; facing the same altar is one to St. Patrick, presented by two young girls, members of the congregation. Others represent the kind contributions of Bridget Wolthman, Margaret Dwyer, Julia Bannam, Mary Cook, Patrick Kelly, John Owens, P. Muldoon, P. Day, Diego, Marie and Flora De Castro, besides other donors whose names we were not fortunate enough to obtain. The handsome gallery opposite the main altar; besides its accomodations for choir and chorus, contains a magnificent organ from the celebrated factory of Henry Erben & Co., as well as an "upright grand" built by the well known piano makers Chickering, and presented by Mr. J. S. Harberger. The tone of these instruments is all that can be desired, and compare most favorably with any others of the kind in the city. Besides all these attractions and comforts which are visible to the eyes of the visitor, other conveniences are arranged for the pastor and his assistants. Confessional altars of natural wood rich in its own beauty, despite the absence of decoration; an elaborate baptismal font and gold cup; velvet upholstered kneeling desks; highly illuminated prayer-cards, framed in burnished gilt; elegant candelabras and beautiful crucifixes of polished metal; and an endless number of other articles, both useful and ornamental, are discoverable only upon a tour of inspection. Opening from the centre altar are the sacristy and vestry, containing the sacred utensils and vestments used during the forms of worship. From the hall connecting these apartments, the rectory may be reached without—so to speak—leaving the building. This handsome residence, which has been built in connection with the church, for the use of Father Morris, shows the same commendability in its exterior and interior construction. Although not yet occupied, a reception room which has been furnished shows by the exquisite taste and regard for comfort displayed, what a perfect home it is destined to be. Nor do we hesitate to express our assurance that no one will say that the labors of St. Mary's pastor, for the past ten years, are undeserving the rest and comfort that now falls to his lot.

THE CEREMONIES OF DEDICATION DAY.

Although it is traditionary with many Romanists that the weather is always clear on "Saints' days," Wednesday was, nevertheless, exceedingly unpleasant. In spite of such fact, and although a time of day when the cares of business claim the attention of the majority of our residents, a large number assembled in the church on the morning of its dedication. It was expected that the assisting clergy would arrive in time to begin the ceremonies by 10:30 a. m., but a delay in their presence caused a slight postponement. The time, however, was spent most pleasantly by the gathering in admiring the exquisite beauty of the decorations, and the quiet grandeur of the whole. In a semi-circle above the altar was suspended in letters of flame, "SAINT MARY PRAY FOR US!" while scores of candle jets and the blaze of gas, lit the gilding of the whole into waves of flashing yellow. The dedicatory rites were commenced by the sprinkling of the stone steps to the front entrance with holy water by Bishop Corrigan, while attendant priests chanted selections from the psalms; which was followed by a like consecration of the entire outer walls of the building. Upon entering the church and proceeding to the altar, the Litany of the Saints was chanted by the clergymen, after which a procession was formed that made a circle of the interior, still singing in harmonious unison. At the head marched altar boys bearing a massive crucifix and lighted candles, behind whom came the Master of Ceremonies, Rev. John Vassallo of Summit. Following was a double line of twenty clergymen and behind them the Bishop with the bearer of the holy water. As the tour of the interior was made the floor and walls were sprinkled with the liquid. At the close of the dedication, Solemn High Mass was sung, with the Rev. Wm. McNulty of Paterson as celebrant, Rev. P. Hennessy of Jersey City as deacon and Rev. Pierce McCarthy of East Newark as sub-deacon. This service was most impressive as well as beautiful. The organ accompaniments played by Prof. E. G. Lansing, combined with the tones of the piano under the hands of Madame Rachet, in a melody that was wonderfully musical; while the mention of such well known vocalists as Madames Gomien and Corradi, and Messrs. Remmerts and Fritsch, from the Cathedral and St. Anne's church of N. Y. city, who sang DeGranival's Mass, with Rossini's Gloria, is sufficient to convey an adequate idea of that portion of the service. The dedicatory sermon by the Bishop on "The Nativity of the Blessed Lady," was a master piece of eloquence, following which were the collection and concluding ceremonies. Among the priests present we noticed such well known clergymen as Fathers Nardelli, asst. Master of Ceremonies, of Bloomfield; Farley, Secretary to Cardinal McCloskey, of N. Y. city; Zimmer, of Raritan; Dowes and Whalen, of New Brunswick; Brady, of High Bridge; Brennan, Hampton Junction; Killeen, of Bergen Point; O'Neil, of Guttenberg; V. D. Boogard, of Bound Brook; Harry MacDowell and H. Fratz, of St. Agnes, N. Y. City; Bartnell, McGinley, Colton and Rathke, C. S. C. R., of N. Y. city; O'Connor of Phila.; McCoskrey of Rahway; Wiseman of Westfield; Smith of Paterson; and the Rev. Jas. H. Corrigan, President of Seton Hall College.

Among the laity, were the Messrs. Michael Morris of Paterson, father of St. Mary's pastor; Michael Morris, Jr., brother of the same, and family; Harold, of Paterson; John McMorley, of N. Y. city; Jeremiah O'Rourke, of Newark; P. J. Sheridan and family, of Elizabeth; and many other gentlemen of prominence from all parts the State.

EVENING VESPERS.

The services of the evening called together a much larger attendance than the morning's ceremonies. The entire body of the church was filled with an audience of taste and education—representatives of many of our leading protestant families being present. The same unexcelled quartette sang Mercadente's Vespers in a manner that held the attention and claimed the approval of all. Father McCarthy of Newark was the celebrant, and the Right Rev. M. A. Corrigan D. D., gave the episcopal benediction. The Rev. Edward McGlynn D. D. of St. Stephen's Church, New York, delivered a powerful and interesting lecture, affording many their first opportunity of hearing one of the most distinguished and highly educated men of the day. This pastor has eight assistants under him, and has in charge a parish of twenty-five thousand people. Owing to the necessity of the visiting clergy leaving on certain trains, the concluding music was contracted to some extent. A most beautiful feature of this part of the service was a violincello solo accompanied by the organ. After the dismissal of the audience, Mr. Fritsch and the quartette favored a few with operatic and other selections.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EV'G. Sept. 6, 1880.

Council met in regular meeting.

Present—Coriell, Darling, Dunlap, Flanders, Finch, Potts, Rushmore, Whiton. Absent—Lithgow, Redfield, Ryder.

Pres. Potts in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Flanders presented a com'n from F. Hand, relative to the return to him of the sum of $3, juror's fees, in the late dog trial. Ref'd to Law & Ord. Com.

Mr. Darling presented four claims of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., of $109.86 each—$439.40, gas, etc., for the months of May, June, July and August. Ref'd to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps.

Mr. Flanders presented claim of Leonard & Runyon, printing, etc., $34.40. Ref'd to Printing Com.

Mr. Coriell presented claim of Street Com'r Geo. M. Angleman, $168. Ref'd to Street Com.

Mr. Coriell presented the following claims: Plainfield Relief Ass'n, $64.13; Alex. M. Runyon, $23. Ref'd to Alms Com.

Mr. Whiton, from Finance Com., reported the city's finances to be to September 1st, balance to the credit of the General Fund, $2,720,92; to the Poor Fund, $1,026.98. Rec'd and filed.

Mr. Whiton moved that a warrant be drawn for $540 in favor of Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., for legal services in the city Park suit. All aye with the exception of Mr. Coriell, who voted in the negative.

Mr. Darling, from Fire, Water & Lamp Com., as correct the four claims of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., $439.40. Ref'd to Alms Com.

By the same—Reported favorably upon the petition of Netherwood property owners for the erection of eight gasoline lamps on Belvidere ave., between Netherwood station and Rahway road.

Mr. Darling, by way of explanation, stated that lamps were very much needed at the location mentioned in the petition, especially at the depot, as it is very dark at that particular place, and dangerous to the travelling public. He said that considerable improvements had been made at Netherwood, and there were some very large taxpayers there, too, and that improvements were still being made, and he thought that the Council had ought to grant the petition for the erection of these lamps.

Mr. Whiton moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted.

Messrs. Coriell and Flanders were of the opinion that lamps should be located at Netherwood, but they did not see how it could be done owing to the slimness of this city's finances. Mr. Coriell said that it was hard work to get money appropriated to put the streets in repair; the people of Evona, he said, would like to have lamps located from this city to their village, but did not like to ask the Council for lights, owing to the lowness of the city's finances. Other remarks were made by Messrs. Whiton, Finch and Rushmore in the premises. After some further discussion Mr. Darling reduced the number of lamps to six, and the motion of Mr. Whiton prevailed, Mr. Coriell voting in the negative.

On motion, the rules were suspended to allow Mr. Coriell to present the police claims, he having, through oversight, failed to present them at the proper time. Mr. Coriell then presented the following police claims for month of August:

Geo. W. Grant, $2.50; R. Hapenny and Robert Randolph, each $41.67; Edward Verity, $2.50; Chas. W. Dodd, $58.35. Ref'd to Police Com.

Mr. Coriell, from Street Com., reported as correct claim of Street Com'r Geo. M. Angleman, $168. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Finch, from Police Com., reported as correct the police claims presented this evening, with the exception of Dodd's claim, which had no affidavit attached. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Whiton moved that the claims of the Poor Fund found correct, and lying upon the table, be taken up in their order and have warrants drawn for the several amounts. Agreed to.

The following are the claims: L. A. Rheaume, $90.95; H. S. Ayres, $26; P. P. Dumont, $24; Wm. Garbs, $4; R. J. Shaw, $4.70; A. M. Runyon, 3 bills of $7 each, $21; H. H. Lowrie, $62.50; T. J. Gillies, $52.85; J. Ross, $4; Relief Ass'n, $40.59; Children's Home, $25; Westfield Township, $8.50.

Mr. Darling offered a res. that a sum be appropriated, not to exceed $50, to have Park avenue sprinkled and kept in repair to the city line on the occasion of the Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, Sept. 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th. Adopted. All aye.

Mr. Finch called from the table the res. for crosswalks over Park Ave. at 7th and 8th streets, presented by Mr. Whiton some time since.

Mr. Coriell stated that the Com. on Streets at that time were of the opinion that crosswalks were not needed at those points, but the Com. thought that a crosswalk was far more needed over Park ave. at 5th street, and thereupon reported favorably upon the petition of Messrs. Baker, Burlingham and others for a crosswalk at the latter place, 5th street.

Mr. Whiton thought that it was time that these matters were attended to; if the chairmen of the several Committees could not attend to the affairs of the Council, then he thought other measures should be resorted to. He had all due respect for the chairman of the Street Com., etc., etc.

At the conclusion of Mr. Whiton's remarks, Mr. Coriell arose and said that he would take the remarks from whence they came; he had always tried to do his duty as a Councilman; he would just as leave, however, stay at home as to come to the meetings of Council; he would resign his position as chairman of the Street Com., and let Mr. Whiton take charge, as also the rest of the Committees. Both gentlemen were certainly in earnest, and a little "unpleasantness" was noticeable.

At this juncture the Pres. called for a report from the Aud. Com., when Mr. Dunlap reported the following claims as correct: Leonard & Runyon, $34.40; St. Com'r Geo. M. Angleman, $168, and the police claims presented this evening, (excepting Dodd's.) On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

On motion, the Rules were suspended, and the petition for a crosswalk over Park Ave., from 5th St., reported favorably upon by Mr. Coriell, was presented. On motion, report rec'd and recommendation adopted. All aye.

Council then adjourned.

"School's In."

On last Monday morning, in common with other public schools throughout the country, the P. H. S. held its first session of the coming term. The attendance was unusually large for a first day; almost the entire seating capacity of the assembling room being in demand for the accommodation of the scholars, necessitating the packing of visitors into rather contracted quarters at the back of the room and on the platform. Interest in the welfare of the school had impelled a large number of parents and friends to be present; while an interest in the members of the next graduating class seemed to demand the attendance of the young men of the city. School Commissioners Harper and Stewart addressed the scholars briefly with kind words of advice and encouragement. They were followed by Prof. Gross, whose always appropriate words of admonition were especially fitting to the occasion. The heartiness with which the voices of all united in the morning services, spoke well for their future interest in the duties of the class-room.

After the return of the scholars to their studies, an impromptu sort of a reception was held in the hall. Past-graduates and old school-mates clasped hands in renewed friendship, and talked over pleasures they had experienced and the conquests they had made during a summer spent on mountain, plain and shore. Prof. Gross had seemingly gained in robustness and spirits during his vacation, and plainly had lost none of his congenial disposition of sincere goodwill. He had a kind smile and hearty hand-shake for all, as they pressed forward to express their welcome.

P. A. C.

On Wednesday last the entries to the Plainfield Athletic Club games of the 15th inst., closed with a large number of contestants. Never before upon the occasion of this Club's enjoyable meetings, have the prospect of an interesting and exciting occasion been as favorable. The track is in an exceedingly fine condition, extra conveniences will be furnished for spectators and we feel justified in asserting that the event will be the most successful of the kind.

Personals.

Miss Clara Dunn returned from Asbury Park the early part of last week.

The Rev. Dr. Lowry is expected to sail for home on the 21st or 24th inst.

The Rev. Dr. Bliss has returned from the coast of Maine, greatly benefited by his season of rest.

Ex-Chief Doane is as brown as a nut since his trip to Wilmington. He returned on Wednesday.

Mr. George F. Brown and wife returned during last week from a most enjoyable trip through our State.

County Clerk Vosseller, and family have our sympathies in the loss of a young daughter by death.

Councilman Lithgow's absence from the city is due to his presence in Santo Domingo. He returns about Nov. 1st.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy is once more at his post of duty. His stay at Ocean Grove, he describes as most pleasant.

Messrs. Anastatis and Frank Azoy have reached New Jersey's shore after an extended trip to Spain and adjacent countries.

The Rev's. Thomas Stockton, D. J. Yerkes and K. P. Ketcham, are back in their respective pulpits of our Front street churches.

Chancellor Runyon returned from Europe on the Bothnia, Wednesday, and is with his family who have been residing in this city during the past summer.

The leader of the German at the Hotel Netherwood on Thursday evening of last week, was Mr. Louis Harberger of West Front street. So popular is this gentleman in society, that upon a recent similar occasion he received twenty-one favors.

Senator Potts, while attending the opening in this city on Thursday of last week was the guest of E. L. Morris, Esq. The visitor remained over night at Mr. Morris' residence on Third place, which was decorated handsomely in honor of his presence.

Messrs. Pope, Varian and Moore, with their bicycles, have returned with glowing accounts of their trip. Although the scenes they describe and hair-breadth escapes they relate are swallowed with a large quantity of salt, yet they are a relief after the fish stories of the past.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Fire Board met on last Wednesday evening, pursuant to adjournment. All the members were present. After some discussion as to quantity, 2,000 feet of American Jacket hose was ordered to be purchased. Twenty-five dollars was appropriated to Engines No. 1 and 2 each, for the purpose of repainting their wheels. Twenty-four feet of new suction was granted for Gazelle No. 1., and the ladders of Zephyr H. & L. Co., ordered to be repaired. It was also voted that the Department's buildings be put in thorough repair. A number of bills were passed and several exemption certificates given out. The meeting then adjourned.

The approaching parade of the Plainfield Fire Department, Thursday, Oct. 14th, is the all-observing topic among the firemen and extensive preparations are being made to make the occasion a grand one. Alert Hose Co., No. 1, have extended an invitation to Resolute H. & L. Co., No. 1 and officers of the Morristown Fire Department, also to Chief Hendricks and Assistants of the New Haven, Conn., Fire Department, which have been accepted. The "Alerts" have been the guests of both the above mentioned representatives and have been handsomely entertained. Chief Hendricks visited Plainfield last winter, and the "Alerts" made him happy. They now propose to outdo all former efforts and give their guests such a welcome as they have never before been the recipients of. The "Alerts," and their popular foreman, A. Saltzman, know just how to do such things.

Other Companies of the Department will invite companies from abroad. We will give particulars when arrangements are settled.

A special meeting of "Gazelle" Eng. Co. No. 1, will be held at their parlors on Wednesday evening next, September 15th, 1880, at 7:30 o'clock, sharp, to take into consideration the approaching parade of the Department. A full attendance is requested.

By order of
DAVID LEESON,
Foreman.
T. A. SOFIELD,
Secretary.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Messrs. Coddington caused their Green Valley pond to be drained out and cleaned on Friday last, in preparation for the ice-making weather that is coming.—A large number of fish and eels were taken out, one of the latter weighing 5 pounds.

Mrs. Austin's Craig Place school, opened on last Monday morning under most flattering auspices. An increased number of scholars were in attendance, and the presence of many visitors testified to the esteem and appreciation in which this institution of mental training is held.

The next term of the Somerset Courts will convene in Somerville on Tuesday, September the 21st inst. The following gentlemen were drawn at the Court House on Monday, in the presence of Judge Magie, to serve as jurors in the case of the Board of Freeholders of Somerset County vs. Daniel Cory:

Bridgewater—Wm. S. Opie, Geo. V. Tunison, John Maxwell, John H. Lord.
Branchburgh—Abraham A. Cortelyou, Daniel Polhemus.
Bernards—Dan'l D. Craig, Oscar Conklin.
Bedminister—James Brown, Jr.
Franklin—Lewis R. Labaw, Frederick V. L. Nevius.
Hillsborough—John Groendyke, Jos. H. Van Cleef, Wm. L. Oakey, Peter Q. Hoagland, Henry F. Cortelyou, Gilbert Lane, John Corle.
Montgomery—Peter D. Staats, Jacob S. Hoagland, David S. Labaw, Wm. Opie.
North Plainfield—Isaac Brokaw.

The name of Major Eugene A. Gross of North Plainfield is prominently mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Assembly the coming election. His nomination would be an excellent one.

Mr. Hiliar O'Blitz will raise a Hancock and English pole at his residence on Somerset street, during next Saturday.

LOCAL POLITICS.

The Hancock Veteran Association have leased the large room on the third floor of the building formerly occupied by Wm. Beiter and owned by W. Heideloff, on Somerset Street, and will hereafter hold their meetings there and practice in drill. The Association now numbers over 125 members, and in a few days they expect to receive their handsome uniforms.

The Democratic Association held their regular monthly meeting at Headquarters last Tuesday evening. The rooms were crowded and much enthusiasm existed over the flattering prospects for the election of Hancock and English, Ludlow and the whole State ticket. The nomination of Hon. George C. Ludlow for Governor, was hailed as a glorious one and the best that could have been made by the Convention. Much regular and special business was transacted, and it was resolved to hold a ratification meeting at an early date, probably the latter part of next week, and to make arrangements for a public meeting every week following until the campaign closes. As soon as proper arrangements can be made announcement of the date of the Ratification Meeting will be made by posters.

The North Plainfield Hancock and English Club held a regular meeting at Blair's Hotel, Wednesday evening last.—A large number were present and signed the roll. This Club is in a most prosperous condition and is daily making new converts. Next Wednesday evening they will meet again at same place, at which time eloquent speakers will be present to address those present. The Hancock and English Drum Corps of this city will be present. The Club will raise a handsome banner across Somerset Street shortly.

Our Irish fellow-citizens have organized a campaign club in the 1st District of this city, and have taken the name of the "Hancock and English First Ward Club." They now number over 100 members, and will shortly be uniformed and participate in parades.

The "Boulevard Hancock Club" is the title of a club of about 100 boys, between the ages of 12 and 20 years, which has been formed in the lower part of the city. They will turn out in uniform shortly.— Their officers are: President—Thomas Harding; Vice President—Michael Flynn; Secretary—John Collins.

Three more Hancock and English Banners to be flung to the breeze in Plainfield and North Plainfield in a few days, and yet some people think the Democracy of this city are asleep. Oh! we'll get you, Messrs. Garfield and Potts.

The name of New Jersey's next Governor will be placed in position on the Hancock and English banner, opposite the Post Office, in a few days, as soon as the work of painting the name is completed.

An Irish Republican Club has been formed in Plainfield after repeated urging and inducements (!) by the advocates of Garfield. The Club now numbers one person, who is President, Secretary and Treasurer of the concern. It was intended to swing out a Garfield banner in front of his residence in the Boulevard, but inasmuch as only about $13 could be raised by the faithful for its purchase, and the minister of the colored church opposite objected to have a pole planted in front of the church edifice to fasten the banner to, the project has been abandoned. The hole dug for its reception will be filled in and the pole used for a better purpose.

State Agricultural Society.

The twenty-second annual exhibition of the State Agricultural Society will be held at Waverly Park, the Society's own ground, on the 20th inst., and be continued for five days. This Society has labored effectually for a quarter of a century in the interests of our agricultural industries.

On Thursday the 23d inst., many distinguished citizens will be on the grounds. Among them the Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow and the Hon. Frederic A. Potts, and United States Senator, the Hon. James G. Blaine, will positively be on the grounds the same day. We advise our citizens, one and all, to visit the coming State Fair, and they will be amply paid for the time and expense incurred.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

Metal shoe tips have been used for years, on account of their saving, even when objected to on account of their looks. The A. S. T. Co's Black Tip will wear as long, and at the same time adds to the beauty of the shoe.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors, and falling-out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hall's Hair Renewer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world. MISCELLANEOUS READING.

PEDESTRIANIC PECULIARITIES.

No two of us walk alike. The hinges of our gaits turn the same way, but with different results.

The baby strikes a toddle because it hasn't strength enough to walk, but it has the underlying principle of a natural walk, because it "toes in." "Toeing out" is a military article, invented for the express purpose of showing how much more man knew than the Lord did.

The hippity hoppity skip and jump is peculiarly the little girl's gait. Uneasy and restless the flutter-budget seems determined to wear the sole of her shoe and the soul of her mother out at the same time; but she is the prettiest picture of animation humanity can show.

The dead run all out of breath is the small boy's gait. You can set down the boy who so far forgets himself as to walk as already in his dotage. Very old.

The square heel and toe is the gait affected by professional peds on the sawdust track, but it is growing obsolete, thank our lucky stars.

The bound to have it gait is a rapid straight forward stride, never turning to the right or left. The man who has it knocks over children, barks his shins against market baskets, and stubs his toes against everything on the walk, but he "gets there," and his coat tail arrives about two minutes later.

There is the slow measured gait, tread, tread, tread, all day long. The man who carries the hod has this peculiarity down fine. He would run to a fire in the same step, and get there—possibly.

The long lope, thirty-four inches to the step, with a sag of the knee joint and a vigorous swing of the arms, is that of the young man from Ruraldom. He gets the walk from going over rough ground and anybody that gets the best of him has got rough ground to go over.

The quick, sharp and spiteful gait with the little metallic heels ringing on the pavement is the gait of the smart young miss with bright eyes and lots of vivacity. The young man who intends to keep company with her for life must make up his mind to train to her step. She never will train to his.

The everyday business gait. Going right along with your feet, and your thoughts in the office, store, shop, or wherever it is. You never know how far the walk is, nor how long it takes you to cover it. It is indefinite and frequently the only aid to good digestion.

Take it easy, don't care a cent sort of a gait with cane twirling over his finger is typical of the man of the world. He leads a life of leisure and wouldn't hurry himself. As a consequence he grows fat, rheumatic and gouty and in later years walks with two canes and tremulous limbs. It doesn't pay to launch your pleasure.

The dinner gait, before and after, is mentioned merely as affording a remarkable contrast. It would hardly seem possible that one pair of legs could perform so entirely in opposition.

The slow gait. For further particulars send a boy on an errand.

The tumbling, hesitating gait braced up by a good hickory cane is what we are all coming to, if we live but our three score years and ten. It will be pleasant to "slow up," just before reaching the grave.

The stroll. Just at twilight, conscious that the day's work is over, and that a season of rest is before you, to leisurely meander along in pleasant paths, beneath the deepening shade of stately trees, to listen to the hum of the busy world as it gradually dies away, to watch for the twinkle of the first star of evening, or may be catch a glimpse of the moon over the left shoulder; ah—this is the acme of pedestrianism. If you don't believe it, offer her your arm to-night and try it.

HANDIWORK.

The grasp of the human race is in the hand.

The hand of the baby with its chubbiness, all dimples but the fingers, which wiggle aimlessly in forty-seven directions, isn't it innocent and pretty? And how nicely its wondrous-eyed owner can spread butter with it.

The hand of the small boy, on a three weeks' vacation from the wash basin, begrimed knuckles, mourning fingernails and rag wound round its sore thumb. This is the hand that steals cookies, jam and other goodies one minute and pats the crust of a mud pie in innocent mirth the next. We were all small boys once—with perhaps a few feminine exceptions.

The hand of the young woman of the day, sparkling with diamonds and other jewels, mostly others. How its shapely fingers run up and down the piano key-board, and how daintily does it show its deftness in embroidery, fancy work, etc., and how seldom is it found in the bread tray or the wash-tub.

The hand of a mother, lovingly leading us along the pathway of our childhood. How gratefully we remember its administration, even when they were heavy and placed where they would do the most good.

The hand of the farmer, hard and knotty, with knuckles like door knobs, fingers all thumbs, unused and unfit for the dainty occupations of life, it grasps the prosperity of the country right by the crop.

The hand of the speculator, in every one's pocket but his own.

The hand of the intelligent compositor swinging over his case with rapid regularity, raising the complete "printer's devil" with editorial brain work and holding the editor up to the uppity-lug gaze of the world as a consummate fool. It is the worst hand played.

The hand of the marriageable young lady, always stretched forth, and just as you think you have got it for life, it vanishes. 'Tis well. Only a few of this species are worth having.

The hand of an old friend, as it settles into yours with one long, grateful clasp. Nothing in this world ever starts the tremors of the nerves from the brain center, and causes a thrill so permeating to the soul as its grasp.

The real pretty hand symmetrical in every finger joint, makes the owner just vain enough to gracefully rest her face upon it as often as anybody would be likely to look at it.

The hand of the dear old grandmother. Wrinkled with goodness, by age that has tempered its old-time severity, it now is up to the wrist in beneficent and kindly deeds for the young. Ah, lucky is the young scamp who can depend on the interference of a grandmother's hand.

The hand of Providence—but it will take an eternity to "size that up."

GARFIELD'S WARFARE ON HANCOCK BAFFLED.

Winfield Scott Hancock will be the next President of the United States. It is written in the book of fate, and there will be no Electoral tribunal to reverse the returns. Hancock was born both handsome and lucky. He is a man of destiny. Why, just look at the record. In 1868 Garfield brought a bill into Congress to drop the junior Major-General. That was Hancock. It passed both houses of Congress and was signed by the President. But before it could be carried into effect George H. Thomas, the senior Major-General, died, and Hancock, going up one grade, was no longer the junior Major-General, and so the law could not reach him. Then the Republicans, still led by Garfield, passed an act reducing the Major-Generals to three. This was signed by the President, but before it could be carried into effect Meade died, and the Major-Generals were then reduced to three by God Almighty. Finally, a law was passed authorizing the President to drop one of the Major-Generals. Before it could be carried out and Hancock could be dropped, Halleck died, and Hancock becoming the senior Major-General he could not be dropped. The man who survived all these attempts to retire him cannot be retired. The man who led them—Garfield—will, as a fitting consummation of his act, fall a victim to his intended victim. Hancock will be elected President. Garfield will be retired—at least from the Presidential field.—Louisville Courier Journal.

SOME SENSIBLE ADMONITIONS.

It has been easy enough for our Republican contemporaries to find long lists of property which had been mortgaged to Mr. English as security for loans of money, and which, when the money was not paid, he caused to be foreclosed and sold. It has been equally easy to find debtors who scold Mr. English because he thus took some of their property from them. But what is a mortgage for unless it is to secure the payment of debt, and of what use would one be unless the penalty of it, if forfeited, were not enforced? The cause of the Republican party is not at all promoted by the abuse which is showered upon Mr. English in consequence of his care in collecting his own debts and those due to others for whom he was the judiciary. This abuse is not argument, it is simply abuse. We suggest to our contemporaries that they stop it and give their powerful minds to the discussion of the real live issues which are before the country. Mr. English may not be an amiable, sympathetic and soft-hearted man; grant it. But a man may make a good Vice-President of the United States without being amiable, sympathetic and soft-hearted. History records that George Washington looked sharply after his debtors and made them pay up. Mr. English appears to have done the same, and it will not do the Republican party any good to abuse him for it.—Graphic.

The Republican press cannot see any virtue in General Hancock's renowned "Order No. 40." Of course not, because that production of his pen nobly upheld the supremacy of Civil Government, the great Democratic principle, and for its patriotic utterance, Congressman Garfield, now the Republican candidate for President, with partisan madness unexampled sought to legislate the gallant Union General Hancock out of the army.

The Republicans cannot find language sufficiently denunciatory of Southern Democrats, but when a Confederate Brigadier, for the sake of office, falls down and worships the idol of centralization, they pat him on the back as a loyal good fellow and set before him a copious supply of the richest government pap. The bestowal of high official position upon such unmitigated rebels as Longstreet and Mosby is a practical illustration.

The Garfield managers boastingly parade the large amount of money collected as Internal Revenue and paid into the Treasury without loss. There is a pilfering coon up that tree and President Hancock will bring the varmint down. The figures returned on paper may have been generally realized, but, the lack of honest returns is where the plunder hides. Millions of dollars having been fraudulently held back by official collusion with corrupt Whiskey Rings alone.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

F. A. Potts and the Coal Combination.

The Trenton True American says of this combination: Of all the heartless and selfish monopolies and combinations by which the public have been imposed upon and workingmen have been half starved, the coal combination has been one of the most selfish and most heartless. It has had for its object the enriching of the comparatively few engaged in it, and it has pursued that object by a system in which extortion has been practiced upon the people, and workingmen have been left for months periodically without labor.

The direct purpose has been to put up and keep up the price of coal, and, to do this, the means have been to stop work at the mines at stated intervals and keep down the supply. Taking advantage of an import duty which practically prevents its importation, these coal combinationists, having control of the mines, formed a conspiracy of extortion against the consumer. They agree upon a price among themselves, thus preventing competition and depriving the public of the advantages of competition. The consequence has been that for years the public has been compelled to pay a high price for this necessary of life. The hut of many a poor man has been kept colder than it would have been by this combination, which has extorted money from the people's pockets to enrich F. A. Potts, the Republican candidate for Governor, and his combinationists.

But this has not been its only effect. It has kept the wolf at the door of many a miner—many a hard working man whom it has periodically thrown out of employment. For it is a part of the scheme of these combinationists to stop work at the mines to keep down the supply, so that they may have an excuse for putting up the price. Every time they do this, thousands of men, who barely earn a pittance when at their perilous work, are thrown out of employment, and left to exist as they may, while these combinationists are reaping the fruits of their extortion.

The Republican party of New Jersey, so full of hypocritical professions of love for the workingman, adds the nomination for the Governorship to one of these combinationists—one of the parties to this scheme which leaves workingmen to starve one-half the year.

They will hear from the people in November.

Show the Books.

[The Olean Democrat, Aug. 13, 1880.]

The confession of ex-Revenue Supervisor McDonald that $1,200,000 were stolen in the Southwestern Revenue District alone, will increase the public desire to get a look at the Treasury books. The books can be seen only by a change of administration. That is why the people desire to have a change. One other item of fraudulent book-keeping will exhibit another reason for a change. Between Boutwell's and Sherman's statements of the payments of the National debt are $300,000,000 difference. That is just the sum realized by the sale of military stores at the close of the war. Instead of being put in the Treasury, it was literally stolen.

It is greatly to be feared that but little reliable information is to be obtained from the books. The Senate Committee which undertook to examine them, found them, not only full of erasures and alterations, but mutilated. Whole pages are missing. Whatever evidence the books might afford after a careful scrutiny, in their present shape they present unmistakable evidence of some terrible frauds which the authors have sought to conceal by erasing whole entries and tearing out whole leaves.

But while a change may not lead to detection of all the frauds and the fraud-doers who have mutilated the public accounts, it will take the accounts out of the hands of the plunderers and ensure a system of book-keeping which will prove something more than that the Treasury is in the hands of official thieves.—True American.

A DENIAL!

SIMPSON & CO.,

(Late Wilson & Simpson,) respectfully announce to the public of Plainfield that they have not cut ICE of SYLVAN LAKE or RANDOLPH'S POND, in this city, for the PAST FOUR YEARS; therefore the report in circulation now that they are supplying their patrons with the ICE of said lake or pond is INCORRECT; or in broader terms, FALSE, as the depth of water at best of times is insufficient to allow of any being cut, independent of filthy state of the pond which is gradually filling up. All the ice harvested by them is cut off their own pond in WASHINGTON VALLEY, and made from Pure Spring Water.

They are sorry to be obliged to take this means of correcting the false report, but do it in self-defence.

SIMPSON & CO.

A CARD.

Being compelled by the increase of business to have an assistant, I have taken in my employ Mr. A. J. Mills, a mechanical specialist, his first preceptor for five years being the celebrated Norman W. Kingsley, M. D. S. D. D. S., of New York city, and for six years with Dr. Kingsley of Elizabeth. I feel confident I can recommend him to my patients and the public as a competent, mechanical operator in every particular. I will therefore take this method of proving to those that wish to take advantage of the lowest cost price that a first-class set of teeth can be made for, viz: for 3 months, commencing June 1st, I will make whole sets of teeth on celluloid for $10, and guarantee them to be made of the best material that can be produced. Satisfaction guaranteed in every respect. We would strive to do only first-class work, and hope by so doing at the end of 3 months to secure favor and patronage by perfection in operations, rather than by cheap competition.

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit over a million pair now being in daily use.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring,) That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least two newspapers in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said entries to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS, Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS O. COOPER, Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year," after the word "November," insert the words "of the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and every second year thereafter."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year; of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be in two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the words "biennially."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 7. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the words "biennially."

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Mary E. Bolton, complainant, and William B. Stewart, et al., defendants. Fi. fa. etc.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-SECOND DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D. 1880,

at two o'clock, p. m., viz: all that tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth street, a corner of David Jones' lot (now or formerly); thence running along his line a northwesterly course one hundred and fifty-three and nineteen-tenths feet to a stake in his line, and in the rear of Fifth street lots; thence running a southwesterly course, along the northwesterly boundary line of said mortgaged premises sixty-three and two-tenths feet to a stake for a corner; thence south-easterly along line of other lands of said Stewart one hundred and fifty-three and nineteen-tenths feet more or less to a point in the centre of Sixth street distant fifty feet southwesterly from the place of beginning; thence northeasterly along the middle of Sixth street fifty feet to the place of beginning. And if the sale thereof shall not realize a sufficient sum to satisfy the amount of complainant's mortgage debt, then I shall sell secondly, the remainder of the mortgaged premises, described as follows:

The first tract—Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth and Peace streets, in said city, as now laid out; thence running along the middle of Peace street north, sixty-eight degrees and seventeen minutes west, one hundred and eleven and four-tenths feet to a point in the middle of said street; thence still in the middle of said street north, fifty degrees and twenty-seven minutes west, seventy-one and nine-tenths feet to a stone and corner of Preston Bolton's land; thence running along his line north, forty-two degrees east, two hundred and six feet to a stake and corner of other lands of said Stewart; thence running along his line a southeasterly course two hundred and sixty-four and five-tenths feet to a stone in the middle of Sixth street; thence south, thirty-eight degrees west, one hundred and seventy-one and nine-tenths feet to the place of beginning.

The second tract—Beginning at a point in the middle of Sixth street, and corner of other lands lately conveyed to Randolph Stewart; thence running along the middle of said street, a northeasterly course seventy feet to a point and corner of said Stewart's other land; thence running along his line a northwesterly course one hundred and fifty-three feet and nine-tenths of a foot to a point and corner in his line and in the rear of the Fifth street lots; thence running a south-westerly course seventy feet to a corner of said Stewart's other lands; thence running a south-easterly course along his line west one hundred and sixty-four and five-tenths feet to the middle of Sixth street and the place of beginning.

POETRY.

WHAT MAKES THE MAN.

Not numerous years, nor lengthened life,
Nor pretty children and a wife;
Nor pins and chains and fancy rings,
Nor any such-like trumpery things;
Nor pipe, cigar, nor bottled wine,
Nor liberty with kings to dine;
Nor coat nor boots, nor yet a hat,
A dandy vest or trim cravat;
Nor houses and lands, nor gold galore,
Nor all the world's wealth laid in store;
Nor Mister, Knighthood, Sir, nor Squire,
With titles that the memory tire;
Nor ancestry traced back to Will,
Who went from Normandy to kill;
Nor Latin, Greek, nor Hebrew lore,
Nor thousand volumes rambled o'er;
Nor judge's robe, nor mayor's mace,
Nor crowns that deck the royal race;—
These all united, never can
Avail to make a single man.

A truthful soul, a loving mind,
Full of affection for its kind;
A helper of the human race,
A soul of beauty and of grace;
A spirit firm, erect and free,
That never basely bends the knee;
That will not bear a feather's weight
Of slavery's chain for small or great;
That truly speaks of God within,
And never makes a league with sin;
That snaps the fetters despots make,
That loves the truth for its own sake;
That trembles at no tyrant's nod;
A soul that fears no one but God,
And calmly smiles at cares and ban—
That is the soul that makes the man!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

LOANING A LOVER.

My sister Patricia was an heiress. Strange enough, for we had always been terribly poor down at Lowbridge, my widowed mother bringing up her four daughters with the greatest difficulty but when brought up were worth looking at, I believe. Healthy habits and frugal living are apt to make good constitutions, and bright and handsome girls as are often seen.

Bess and Amy were twins, with eyes as blue as the sea near which they were born, rosy cheeks and long, light-brown curls; Patricia was a sparkling brunette, while I was a perfect blonde, with crinkled hair like molten gold. Great had been our excitement when Aunt Betty wrote from Fairhaven:

"DEAREST SISTER-IN-LAW:—I am going to do myself the pleasure of visiting you this summer. I hear that brother Abel left four girls, and I want to see them. I am getting on in years, and will make of them an heiress."

Aunt Betty of Fairhaven was worth a hundred thousand, if she was worth a cent.

Well, in due time she came. She put up at the hotel, for our cottage at Lowbridge wasn't big enough to hold her, with her maid, coachman and carriage, but, fortunately, that was close by, and she spent the largest half of three days with us.

We all thought Bess would be her choice, for father had named her Elizabeth for Aunt Betty, though she had always been "Bess" with us. But it was neither of the twins, and it was [illegible]. It was Patricia.

"Where did that girl get her black hair?" Aunt Betty asked, as soon as she saw her.

"I think she looks like my brother Luke don't you?" asked my mother, with a wistful look.

"The very image of him," answered Aunt Betty, turning pale.

I divined then, as I learned afterward that uncle Luke had been a love of Aunt Betty's when both were young, before their marriage, and the fact seemed to have a power over her.

She looked at Patricia until the girl blushed rosy red, and would have slipped out of the room, when she called to her and, drawing her down upon her knees on a foot-stool before her, she put a withered hand on each of the young cheeks and said warmly:

"My dear, you shall be my heiress!"

So it was Patricia she chose to leave her money to; but we were not in the cold, for she sent the twins, who were only sixteen, to school for two years, and invited me, with Patricia to the Hermitage.

It was her home—a stately old mansion of gray stone, gloomy looking on the outside, luxuriously comfortable within, without being in the least modern. We had each a maid and the free use of the horse and carriage. After making this provision for our comfort, Aunt Betty excused herself from making company of us, and we were free as air to enjoy ourselves as we chose, provided we did not interfere with her nap. We chose to make a great many pleasant acquaintances, guided consciously by Aunt Betty's wisdom, and the result was that I returned to Lowbridge in the summer engaged to Clyde Sherrington. He was wealthy, handsome, agreeable, well-connected. Everybody said "Gertrude has done well for herself."

That autumn Aunt Betty died. Patricia was to come in possession of $100,000.

It was arranged that we were all to come to the Hermitage to live. We did so, and lived there quietly as was becoming for nearly a year, when Patricia made the acquaintance of Gage Redmond.

She met him first at a funeral—of all places!—the occasion caused by the death of our next neighbor, General DeLacy, Gage Redmond being a neighbor of his. He was well connected, but poor as a church mouse, people said; "so of course he was after Patricia's fortune," mamma said.

"Patricia is rich and beautiful. Pray don't let her marry a fortune [illegible], mamma," said I, looking up from a letter I was writing to Mr. Sherrington.

"I would not if I could help it, but what authority have I, Gertrude?" said my mother. "In a few months Patricia will be in undivided possession of her fortune. We are here only by courtesy. The Hermitage is her home. I have no right to control her whatever."

"But your influence, mamma?"

"Will have very little effect if she sets her heart on this Gage Redmond. Pray stop staring vacantly out of that window, Gertrude, and attend to what I say. I want assistance in this matter."

"Please, excuse me; I am thinking of my own affairs, just now, mamma. They may be of no consequence to you, but my letter is a matter of some importance to me."

I did not mean to be saucy, only pettish; but mamma, having had long experience with four headstrong girls, bore with me patiently.

"Well, finish your letter, Gertrude, and then advise me."

But my train of thought was broken, and after a few moments I put my letter in the writing-desk.

"What can't be accomplished openly must be done by stratagem, mamma. It is probable this Gage Redmond is after Patricia's money. She is a great prize matrimonially. Well, you say I am prettier than Patty. Suppose I play decoy?"

"What!" cried mamma.

"Mr. Redmond is dark and reserved. I am fair and volatile. Don't you think he will appreciate my style of beauty if I take a little pains to make him do so?"

"But Mr. Sherrington?"

"I will tell him he will not object."

"I think he will."

"Oh, no; he will be interested in the good of the family. He comes next week. Fortunately, Patty is sick with a cold, and Mr. Redmond can see but little of her until then."

Quite pleased with my scheme, I ran up stairs to give Patricia her cough drops, sitting down at the window of her room, and bowing cordially to Mr. Redmond, whom I could see writing in his uncle's study, in the great mansion across the way. The larches hid all the house but that one window. He was there a good deal, and I reflected that Patty's blue silk curtains were more becoming to my style of beauty than hers.

"I'll bring my embroidery up and sit with you, Patty," I said.

"Do," she said. "I am tired of watching the evergreens swaying about the gray spring sky."

So I filled my lap with rose-colored worsted and framed myself in the blue window drapery for Mr. Redmond's benefit. Just the colors to set off the pink and show of my complexion. I had the satisfaction of meeting his eyes more than once when I glanced over the way.

"Seems to me you're wonderfully good spirited, Gert," remarked Patricia languidly.

The DeLandy dinner-bell rang, and Mr. Redmond disappeared.

"Well, I must take these to another direction now," I said, rising. "I can't give any more time to you, sis, for I want to finish my blue silk suit before Mr. Sherrington comes. You'd better take a nap."

Patricia settled herself obediently among her cushions. Suddenly she lifted her beautiful head.

"Has Mr. Redmond called to inquire for me to-day, Gerty?"

"No, I believe not," I replied indifferently.

She showed a moment's surprise, then seated herself on her couch again, and in five minutes was sleeping sweetly.

The blue silk suit was finished, and having laid aside my half mourning for Aunt Betty and donned it, the family pronounced the effect charming.

"Is Mr. Sherrington coming to-night, Gertrude?" asked mamma.

"Yes."

"I want to say to you, my dear, that on Mr. Sherrington's account I don't think you had better—" she whispered, but I interrupted her by my exit from the apartment.

The next train brought Clyde Sherrington.

"How delightful that the spring is at hand," said he. "the sunshine growing warm, and the grass springing! I passed a bit of wood coming up from the station that is full of arbutus. We will have some delightful walks Gerty. I am very tired of city life."

"Yes, Clyde, dear; but you see I have been obliged to make a little plan which will interfere somewhat with the arrangement," I replied quickly. "I want to lend you to Patricia."

"Lend me to Patricia?"

"Yes, while I take away [illegible] she has. Mamma and I conclude that it is the only way," I added. Patricia has a fortune of about $100,000 you know."

"Yes."

"Well, we think Gage Redmond is after her money. He is only a briefless lawyer. We can't afford to let Patty make such a match as that, and so, as I don't think I'm totally an uninteresting person—do you, Clyde?—I am going to try and flirt a little with Mr. Redmond. Now, you won't be a bear, and say no, will you, dear? And you'll try and help us by devoting yourself to Patricia won't you?"

At first my companion did not believe I was in earnest, but when convinced of my sincerity his astonishment was inexpressible. I remember that he stammered out some faint objections, but I would not listen, and before retiring that night I whispered to mamma that I had made it all right with Mr. Sherrington, and she had only to observe how nicely I would manage the whole affair.

I sent Patricia off in the morning to find arbutus with Mr. Sherrington, while I waited to receive Mr. Redmond.

When he came I was in the garden, and had ordered lunch an hour earlier than usual. My pale blue silk looked beautiful on the lawn grass.

"Pray come and see my tulips, Mr. Redmond," I called as he walked up the avenue.

He came, pleased enough, and as he was especially fond of flowers, I had no difficulty in detaining him more than half an hour.

Then, seeing him look at his watch, I observed:

"We won't wait lunch for Patricia for Mr. Sherrington is with her. They have gone roaming off after spring flowers, and may not be back these three hours. Come in and have a bite of salad, with a cup of chocolate Mr. Redmond I made the chocolate myself and can recommend it."

So I kept him for another half an hour, and he left pleased with his visit.

Patricia and Sherrington came back only fifteen minutes after the usual lunch hour, the former so delighted with the profusion of pink arbutus as hardly to heed when a servant informed her that Mr. Redmond had called to see her, and stayed with Miss Gertrude for lunch.

She had put the rosy clusters in her dark hair and on the bosom of her long redingote; I think I never saw her look so perfectly lovely.

"He has been here. Very nice of you to keep her out of the way so long," I whispered to Clyde.

He looked at me queerly, but said nothing. I did not want him to expostulate with me, as I believed he wished to do, and so kept apart from him during the evening, leaving him to sing and play with Patricia.

He was interesting, with his very natural manner of reserved modesty. I was glad Patricia found him. He had pale silken hair that fell in shadowy curls over a beautiful forehead, and softly modulated tones. He contrasted nicely with her dark, spirited beauty.

"Clyde has an elder brother—Raymond—just the one for Patricia. I wonder if it cannot be brought about."

But I soon had my hands full, for at all hours of the day and night Mr. Redmond came to the Hermitage. And it was not long before my success as decoy was patent to the most careless observer. He asked only for "Miss Gertrude."

In three weeks the crisis burst upon me. He proposed.

"I used to think Mr. Sherrington your lover," he said, standing before me, the light on his frank, handsome face, "but late observations have shown me that his visits here are for your sister. Since you are free, then, will you not marry me? I can support you well, Gertrude, or I would not ask you to [illegible] your fortune with mine. The death of my grandfather two years ago left me $50,000, beside some real estate. I have a pleasant home on the Hudson—retired but elegant—where I would like to take you. What do you think, Gertrude? Could you be contented to leave your friends and live at Hope Cottage with me?"

My amazement allowed me to stammer nothing intelligible. In some distant way I temporized the matter, and begged Mr. Redmond to give me some time for reflection.

He went away, making an appointment for the next evening.

So thunderstruck was I by the revelation of Mr. Redmond's wealth that I wandered about the house in a dazed way, not heeding how mamma was fretting about Patricia, who had gone to ride with Mr. Sherrington.

"What is the matter, mamma? Is it going to storm?" I said at last.

"To storm? Nonsense! Where are your eyes, Gertrude? It is nearly 9 o'clock. Patricia has been gone seven hours with Mr. Sherrington, and I know something is wrong."

"What?" I demanded, rousing myself.

"I don't know."

Nine, 10, 11 and 12 o'clock passed. No carriage—no news.

At noon the next day the buggy drove into the yard. Patricia cooly presented her husband. They had been married the evening before by our pastor at Lowbridge.

"So nice and quiet," said Patricia. "No fuss, no notoriety."

She took her place at the table.

"You needn't hesitate to take Gage now, Gertrude; he's dead in love with you, and as I like Clyde best, I thought I'd decide the matter without any complications."

I think I was doumbfounded. But I found my tongue when Mr. Redmond came that evening, and said "yes."

I give my experience for the benefit of others. It is dangerous loaning one's lover.

BLUFFING A CROWD.

Seven or eight politicians were smoking and chatting in Detroit, says the Free Press, when they were joined by a long-haired, mild-looking, long-waisted stranger who seemed just dead with consumption. He leaned against one of the stone columns and listened to the talk for a few minutes, and exhibited no great interest until one of the party asserted his belief that Garfield would carry Ohio.

"H-how m-uch d-d-do you want to b-bet that h-he will?" inquired the stranger, as he straightened up.

"Oh, I wouldn't mind a bet of ten dollars."

"I'll b-bet you one t-thousand d-dollars against two h-hundred!" continued the stranger as he went down into his coat-tail pocket and fished up an enormous wad of money.

The politician crawfished on the grounds that he never bet, and the stranger looked around and asked:

"Is there anybody h-here who wants t-to b-bet that Hancock will be 'l-lected; I'll b-bet him a t-thousand to five h-hundred!"

There were no takers. Then he waved his wad of bills on high and said: [illegible] fluid will be defeated!"

The crowd looked at each other and then across the street, each man as dumb as a clam. The silence lasted for a minute, and then one of the group remarked:

"Well, it will probably be a close struggle."

"W-will it? I'll b-bet you a t-thousand to five h-hundred that it won't b-be!" promptly replied the stranger.

No one spoke again for thirty seconds, and then the remark was made that "both parties were preparing for a great struggle!"

"Struggle b-be hanged! I'll b-bet you five h-hundred that there won't be any struggle."

One or two men shoved their hands into their pockets and jingled their keys, but it ended right there. When the silence had grown painful the consumptive asked:

"Do any of you g-gentlemen notice any im-impediment in my s-speech?"

"Yes," they all replied together.

"P-put up your m-money—one t-thousand to two h-hundred that I don't s-s-stutter any more than any of y-you!" exclaimed the man, as he began to untie the string around his roll of bills.

Not a hand moved, and after a minute the stranger waved his money and said:

"Or I'll b-bet you five h-hundred even up that I c-can s-s-stutter like b-blazes!"

One backed softly into the hall, followed by a second and a third, and in a minute the stranger was left alone. Then he untied the string, peeled two one dollar bills off the roll and put them in his pocket, and threw away the "core," which was simply a wad of blank paper. He had bluffed the crowd over and over again on exactly two-dollars.

"HOLLERIN' DOES THE BUSINESS."

They were holding an out door ward meeting the other night in Detroit, Michigan, and a speaker had just commenced to warm up to his work when a stranger with all his worldly "duds" in an old sheepskin on his back, boots gone, hat going and a dyed-in-the-wool tramp air about him, halted on the outskirts of the crowd. The speech soon caught his ear and he began to applaud. At the end of every sentence he clapped his hands and roared like a foghorn. No matter whether the speaker 'hit 'em' or not, the stranger never failed to come down with the applause, and he carried a good share of the crowd with him. After the speaker had finished, and while he was wiping his heated brow, the tramp approached him and said:

"That 'ere speech was one of the best I ever heard in my life."

"Ah! I'm glad it pleased you."

"Pleased me! Why it lifted me right off'n my feet! I tell you, you're a born orator, and I just wish I could stay in this town and hear you make a speech every night."

"Yes, I wish you could."

"But I can't, I'm on my way West. I shall, however, think of your speech a hundred times a day. I can feel the electricity of it yet, and—say, can't you lend me a half a dollar to help me on?"

"Why, I don't know you. Why should I lend you half a dollar?"

"Oh, come now, don't try to ride any high horse over me; you know how loud I hollered, and you know as well as I do, that if I hadn't put in my best licks you'd have fallen as flat as a shingle! You are a great orator, sir, and that was a great speech, but if you don't know that hollering is what does the business, you'd better hang right up."

The orator pondered over the matter for a few seconds, and then probably concluded that the reasoning was sound, as he passed over the money.

Many a woman dusts billiard cloth off her husband's coat and a big tear stands in her eye, as she thinks how late he works nights at his desk by the white-washed wall.

Scene.—A summer hotel piazza. Door C. leading to hotel parlor. Steps R., rising from hotel garden. Rustic rocking chair, L. C. Sunset effect toward end of scene.

She (entering door C. from parlor.) Is this not Edwin? Or do I mistake?

He (entering up steps R.) The Angelina! (crosses C. and shakes hands) whose life with mine shall blend—

She (interrupting impatiently). So said our parents! but the false, the fiend!

He (aside, joyfully). She is engaged! (Aloud, with affected grief.) Do you our troth forsake?

She (energetically). Better a promise than a heart to break!

He (with false pathos). And is our long engagement now to end?

She (with feminine candor). I always shall regard you as a friend.

He (hypocritically laying his hand on his heart). But how shall that be balm unto the ache?

She (with consoling wisdom). Wedlock, alas, is oft a state of strife!

He (changing tone.) To marry us was but our parents' plan.

She (with returning coquetry). You'll never be my husband, sir, I fear. (Sits in rocking-chair, L. C.)

He (anxiously). Pray tell me why you cannot be my wife?

She (with hesitating frankness). Well —I'm engaged—to—to another man!

He (greatly relieved and highly exultant). And I've been married now for nigh a year!

She starts up with ill-repressed and feminine dissatisfaction. He lights the masculine cigar of independence.

HIS MONEY'S WORTH.

A stranger with an aggressive hat and a genial flavor of hayseed drew up before Officer Dean on Broadway, New York, and put his arms around [illegible].

"Be you one o' ther perlice?" he inquired.

"I be," answered the blue coat sententiously.

"You're pooty well posted 'bout things in general, I 'spect?"

The officer admitted he did know a thing or two. The stranger looked all the more gratified.

"I've ben deown t' York," said he, "t' hev an all-fired, bustin' time. Wot I want's a little recreashun, see? I don't car' 'bout stumblin' 'gin a perfeshunal fisticuf, but I'd jest like t' buy a slice of a neat little row, whar' a fellow kin gouge and bite some and ain't tied down by [illegible] rules. Ther' ain't no [illegible]"

The officer told him that he had better get an almanac or indicator, but said that he thought that with four fingers more of the last whisky he had been drinking he might be easily accommodated. The stranger thanked him heartily and withdrew.

About four o'clock the following morning the same officer found a man tied up in a knot on the corner of Waverly place. He tried to undo him, and when he had pried the hat back from his face the stranger of the previous night emerged. He was quite drunk, there were bumps all over his head, and he looked as if he had been shaved with a buzz-saw.

"Thankee, ole fell'r" he said gratefully. "Thankee. Hed a bustin' time. Sassed over a barten'r and got chucked out by four on 'em. Yes, sir, it four times over, an' Seth Hines kin go hum t' Steuben a feelin' good neow."

He went to the Jefferson Market Police Court first, though.

"Ten dollars," His Honor said, when he heard the story.

"Ten dollars. That's yer figger, eh? Squar, I'm a-gittin' inter you, I 'spect. Why, I've had a free fight four times hand runnin', and got licked every shot. Reckon you didn't know that, eh? Squar, the rumpus is cheap at double the money," and he paid his fine with a chuckle of intense satisfaction.

President.

HANCOCK.

Vote for Winfield Scott Hancock because—

HE IS COMPETENT.

To prove that it is only necessary to read his letters and official communications. They portray literary ability of the highest order, quickness of discernment, deliberation of judgment and a thorough knowledge of the science of free government, so clear and perfect, as to challenge the admiration of men who have made statesmanship a special study.

HE IS DESERVING.

After unwavering devotion to country through years of military duty, under varied and trying circumstances, he saved her national existence at Gettysburg, serving her since illustriously in peace, and earning the greatest reward a people can bestow.

HE IS OF GOOD REPORT.

Not a word can be truthfully uttered against either the professional or private life of General Hancock. They stand without a blemish, pure as the newly fallen snow. The closer his record is examined brighter appears its excellence. The arrows of partisan animosity fall harmless at his feet, the poisonous fog of political falsehood melts away in his presence.

HE IS SOUND IN PRINCIPLES.

A strict follower of the political creed of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party, civil and religious liberty, the honor of country and the rights of all classes of citizens, are with him cardinal virtues and will be carried into practical effect.

HE IS PATRIOTIC.

One notable event in his distinguished career illustrates that. When the war of the rebellion was ended and peace proclaimed, General Hancock, as military commander in Louisiana and Texas, instead of playing the despot by assuming arbitrary authority over a prostrate people, sheathed his sword and bowed to the majesty of civil law. It was a grand tribute to the Constitution, worthy of Washington, and reflects lasting credit upon the gallant Union soldier.

HE IS FAITHFUL.

No assigned duty was ever shirked by him, but to the minutest detail discharged aright. Fidelity to imposed trusts, under all circumstances, has invariably characterized General Hancock and will to the end of his life.

HE IS HONEST.

No corrupt jobbery, no bargain and sale of official influence ever sullied his reputation, no bribe tenderer dare approach him. The public purse will be as effectually defended by his integrity as the national honor has been by his sword.

HE IS FEARLESS.

Fearless of danger on the field of battle and fearless of the combined power of the enemies of free institutions.

HE IS A STATESMAN.

Not a crafty, grabbing politician, but a man of honest purposes, one who thoroughly understands the system of government under which we live, how to protect it from injury, and how it should be administered for the good of all the people.

HE SOUGHT NOT THE NOMINATION.

And that, in these days of scheming ambition, when inferior men seek high places, speaks volumes in his favor. Popular sentiment made him a candidate for the Presidency and it omens the return of a more healthy political era.

HE DEFENDED THE UNION.

Aye, defended it valiantly and successfully. It was General Hancock who drove an invading army from the soil of Pennsylvania and broke the back of the Southern rebellion. He saw blood flow copiously and lost his own in the fierce encounter. He never flinched when duty called and never left his guns until victory was won.

HE SUPPORTS THE CONSTITUTION.

As President he will rigidly uphold the Constitution as it to-day stands amended, and which forever abolishes slavery, prohibits the payment of a dollar of rebel claims or debt, and confers suffrage regardless of condition or color. That is the platform of General Hancock, and quoting the language of Old Hickory "no human power can drive him from the position."

HE WILL RESTORE UNITY.

That is what our country needs more than any thing else. Permanent peace and prosperity calls for a restoration of the Union of the Fathers, a brotherhood of all the people, a wiping out of sectional lines, a repudiation of the doctrine of hate. We want a union of hearts as well as of lands, a union of effort to develope the vast riches of the American continent and to make it the abode of human happiness. That is the kind of Union the election of General Hancock will certainly establish.

We thus give thirteen fact founded reasons why WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK should be President of the United States. They answer in number to the original States over which presided in the Continental Congress another true blue patriot by the name of HANCOCK.

TURN OVER THE BOOKS.

[From the Albany Evening Times, Aug. 25, 1880.]

No one really knows the true state of the government's finances. Forced balances have been made amounting, according to the official records, to over $300,000,000.

The warrants for these amounts, the chief of the warrant division testifies, are not on file.

EXACTLY SO.

The Philadelphia Times (Independent) says—

"There is not an independent journal of any shade in the whole country that pretends to defend General Garfield's public record. The unanimous report of the Poland committee declared General Garfield's sworn testimony to be false, and he had not the courage to rise in his place and refute it. The party organs then with one accord denounced General Garfield as a corruptionist and demanded his dismissal from the House; and the difference between party organs and independent journals is that the organ can declare the man it pronounced a corruptionist in Congress a saint as a Presidential candidate, while the newspaper that aims to instruct intelligent readers believes that the truth of 1873 is the truth in 1880."

A LEAF FROM MR. POTTS' RECORD.

It will be seen by the following that Mr. Frederic A. Potts, the Republican nominee for the Governorship, not only combines against the poor man in putting up the price of his fuel, but that he voted against him when in the Senate:

[From the Sussex (N. J.) Herald.]

THE FIVE COUNTY ACT.

"On the 28th day of April, 1876, Senator Schultz, of Ocean County, introduced Senate Bill, No. 178, entitled "a further supplement to an act concerning taxes," which supplement repealed section twenty of the law approved March 24th, 1864, and under which farmers were allowed to deduct their mortgage indebtedness when making up their tax schedules for the Assessors. For this just section Senator Schultz's bill attempted to substitute the following:

"After making the valuation of personal estate for which any individual shall be assessed, it shall be lawful for the Assessor or for the Commissioners of Appeal in cases of taxation, to deduct from such valuation any debt or debts bona fide, due and owing from such individual to creditors residing within this State, NOT SECURED BY MORTGAGE ON REAL ESTATE," &c., &c.

Here was the very essence of the Five County principle, which would have prevented every real estate owner in the State of New Jersey from deducting his mortgage indebtedness, thus compelling farmers in addition to paying taxes on what they were really worth, to pay the taxes on the property of capitalists and rich corporations to whom they might be so unfortunate as to be indebted. This bill of injustice, under a suspension of the rules, came up on its final passage on the evening before the final adjournment of the Legislature and was voted for by ten Senators, just one short of the required number to secure its passage. Among those voting for it was Frederic A. Potts, then a Senator from Hunterdon county, and now the Republican candidate for Governor of New Jersey. For a record of the introduction of this bill, and for the vote thereon see Senate Journal of 1876; pages 699 and 728. A copy of the bill is now before us.

THE BEST MAN.

The Republican bureau at Washington has issued orders to party editors to cease defending Garfield and not to assail Hancock.

How magnanimous that would be, were they in a condition to do otherwise.

But they are not.

Garfield cannot be defended, because his political record is as porous as a sieve.

Hancock cannot be assailed, because his life, public and private, is as clear and solid as a crystal rock.

Not a word has truthfully be said against Hancock.

Pages of facts can be quoted to the damage of Garfield.

Public opinion is alive to the vital importance of electing honest men to office.

A man who accepted as a Representative in Congress a slice of the Credit Mobilier fraud, and sold his official influence to a gang of wooden pavement contractors, comes far short of the popular standard of honesty.

The people are going to vote for the best man for President and his name is WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

DEMOCRATIC SAVING.

Secretary Sherman as a public speaker for Mr. Garfield, claims for himself, modest man and visiting statesman, the credit of having reduced the national debt.

It was the economy of a Democratic House of Representatives that made such a feat possible.

Here follows the data for that assertion. Mark well the figures.

Appropriations for the ordinary expenditures of government:

By a Republican Congress—
1873	$156,235,130
1874	150,975,649
1875	142,073,032
1876	129,959,130
	$579,243,535
By a Democratic Congress—
1877	$113,591,745
1878	107,326,438
1879	126,498,453
1880	115,108,208
	$462,524,838

$116,718,697

saved to the Treasury by the economical firmness of the Democrats in Congress.

That shows from whence came the means to pay national indebtedness.

Democratic economy furnished them, and would have vastly enlarged the amount of savings had the President been a Democrat.

VICTORY!

Have you heard from Maine!
Maine! Maine!
The home of James Garfield Blaine,
Hark!
There's music in the air,
'Tis the dirge of Credit Mobilier.
Maine! Maine!
What do you hear from Maine!

The Republicans claimed a majority of many thousands in Maine, the Governor and a solid Congressional delegation.

We expected them to carry the State as they have done for years, but they are defeated, and the friends of peace, national brotherhood and honest government rejoice rightfully because thereof.

There was a lion in the path.

He will be met in many other Republican paths next November.

IT IS PUBLIC OPINION?

Garfieldism is defeated in Maine, notwithstanding

A thorough and determined canvass of every nook and corner of the State by Mr. Blaine in person.

The active services of a large crowd of selected speakers from abroad, including roaring Bob Ingersoll.

The unscrupulous expenditure of an immense corruption fund.

The bulldozing of mechanics and laboring men by Republican employers.

The issuing of free passes and half-priced tickets to Maine clerks in the Departments at Washington and sending them all home to vote

The furious waving of the bloody shirt at every street corner and country cross road.

The beating of party gongs in honor of the "great victory" in Vermont.

The favorable weather on election day and extraordinary hiring of teams for the transportation of every Republican voter to the polls, the aged and infirm, the blind and lame, the qualified and unqualified.

MAINE REPUDIATES BLAINE-GARFIELDISM AND THE DOCTRINE OF SECTIONAL HATE.

The 15,000 Republican majority of 1876 has vanished from sight.

The Congressional delegation stands as before, and the Republican members only get in by the skin of their teeth.

An anti-Garfield Governor is elected, unless counted out.

A thousand cheers for Maine!
and for Hancock and English!
and
National Peace and Prosperity!

THE SOUTH.

To judge from the tone of the Garfield orators and papers the war between the North and South is still raging, and the Union in imminent danger of being destroyed by the monster secession.

None know better than the authors of partisan defamation of the South that it is empty clap-trap, but, being all the political capital they have remaining, it must be used to inflame unthinking minds at the North.

A few weeks ago a distinguished gentleman made an address at Bloomington, in the State of Illinois, and therein uttered the following language:

"It may be appropriate on this occasion to refer to my trip through the Southern States and to what I have seen while traveling. I have been gratified at my reception in all the recently rebellious States. I passed from Philadelphia to Florida on my way to Havana, and on my return came via Texas from Mexico, thus passing through all the rebellious States, and it will be agreeable to all to know that hospitality was tendered me at every city through which I passed and accepted in nearly all of them by me. The Union flag floated over us everywhere, and the eyes of the people in those States are as familiar with its colors as yours, and look upon it as guaranteeing to them all the rights and privileges of a free people without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude. In most of the States upon the reception committees, side by side, were men that wore the blue and men that wore the gray, and reception addresses were made in part by those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray. We have no reason to doubt that those who wore the gray will fulfil all they have promised in loyalty to the flag and the nation."

It was not Wade Hampton who made that treasonable speech, but Ulysses S. Grant.

Two years ago, December, 1878, another distinguished gentleman wrote an official message which contained these remarks:

The recent Congressional elections have furnished a direct and trustworthy test of the advance thus far made in the practical establishment of the right of suffrage secured by the Constitution to the liberated race of the Southern States. All disturbing influences, real or imaginary, have been removed from all of these States.

It was not Robert Toombs that so emphatically endorsed good order and fidelity at the South, but Rutherford B. Hayes.

The waving of the tattered bloody shirt may keep simpletons within the lines of party, but thousands of intelligent and well governed Republicans, disgusted with the intolerable device, will go quietly to the polls and drop in a ballot for Winfield Scott Hancock.

Mr. Ludlow's Letter of Acceptance.

We print hereunder the correspondence between the committee appointed by the Democratic State Convention to wait upon Mr. LUDLOW and request his acceptance of the nomination for Governor, and that gentleman.

Nothing could be better timed or in better taste than Mr. LUDLOW'S letter of acceptance. It bespeaks a high and thorough appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of the office for which he has been nominated, and discusses with commendable clearness and candor every question involved in the pending election.

We commend the letter to careful attention, feeling sure it will be read with pleasure by every Democrat and the people of the State generally:

TRENTON, Sept. 11, 1880.

HON. GEORGE C. LUDLOW:

Dear Sir: The undersigned are a committee appointed by the Democratic State Convention, held at Trenton, Sept. 1, 1880, to inform you of your unanimous nomination by that Convention as the Democratic candidate for Governor of the State of New Jersey.

We take great pleasure in communicating to you the action of that convention, because of the very high appreciation we, in common with all citizens of the State, entertain of your character and ability. We feel sure that your nomination will be ratified by the people at the polls on the 2d of November, and that the State of New Jersey will secure a Governor whose integrity, firmness and knowledge of public affairs will be of incalculable benefit to every citizen of the State and secure not only a wise Democratic administration of public affairs, but an economical and pure government for our entire people.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully,

Your Obedient Servants,
ED. F. MCDONALD,
A. A. SMALLEY,
THOMAS M. FERRELL,
JAMES N. PIDCOCK,
JAMES PATTERSON.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to receive your communication of the 11th, informing me that at the Convention of the Democratic party of the State of New Jersey, held at Trenton on the 1st inst., I was nominated as their candidate for Governor.

Permit me to say that I am very grateful for the complimentary terms with which you have been pleased to convey to me the official notice of that nomination.

To be considered worthy of being Governor of this State is indeed an honor of great distinction—election to that position should gratify the highest ambition. In no other State has the standard of fitness been raised higher or more steadily maintained; in no other State has the right of every citizen to an equal voice in the control of Government been more freely extended or more fully protected; in no other State are the rights of labor or the benefits of free schools more zealously guarded; in no other State are the people more independent, intelligent or thrifty.

To be known as a Jerseyman is an honor everywhere.

I accept the nomination with a deep sense of gratitude for the honor conferred, and of the great responsibility involved in its acceptance.

I heartily approve of the nomination for President and Vice President made by the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati, and the platform adopted by that Convention; and I also approve of the resolutions adopted by our State Convention, especially that which declares in favor of such a tariff as will best protect our home industries. The interests and pursuits of our people are greatly diversified; agriculture, manufactures, commerce and finance, each holding conspicuous place. The tariff which shall produce the greatest amount of revenue at once protects the manufactures and relieves the taxpayer. The annual revenue from duties on imports is not now sufficient to meet the ordinary annual expenditures of government by nearly $130,000,000. The tariff question cannot be separated from the questions of public expenditure and public indebtedness.

Common honesty demands the payment of the national debt, and the current expenditures of the Government must be met, and this compels a large and never-ceasing revenue; and this in turn a tariff system which cannot be otherwise than protective. Protection to American manufactures, therefore, has a firmer anchorage than the pledges of political parties, themselves divided in opinion and by personal interests.

I accept the obligations imposed by the resolution of the convention "to so act as to protect the best interests of the laboring man," for therein lies the best interests of the State. Labor is entitled to just compensation and that compensation should always be paid in legal money. To enforce such payment by effective legislation is the duty of the State.

The care of our penal institutions is one of great responsibility. To so manage them as to prevent their being a greater burden upon our people than is absolutely necessary, requires careful judgment and consideration. To the formation of such a system as will do this, and at the same time prohibit an unjust competition with the honest free labor of our State, I will, should I be elected, give my assistance and approval.

I am in favor of an economical administration of all public affairs, so as to save the people of this State from the burden of State taxation. Our State is practically free from debt, and no State tax is now imposed upon our people save that for the maintenance of our public schools. This result has been reached through the sturdy economy of Democratic Legislatures and Democratic Governors, and every effort should be made to secure its continuance.

Character and capability should always be absolute pre-requisites of appointment to public office. It is but due to the people that those who represent them in an official capacity should always answer to the test of honesty and capability. Within these restrictions the policy of every party acknowledges the propriety and necessity of recognizing the services of those who support and maintain it.

Should I be chosen by the voice of the people to the high position of Governor, it will be my constant aim, guided by Divine Providence, to so administer the office as to preserve and extend the fair fame of the State and to promote the welfare of its people.

I am very respectfully yours,
G. C. LUDLOW.

New Brunswick, Sept. 13, 1880.

To the Honorable Edward F. McDonald and others of the Committee of the Democratic State Convention of New Jersey.

NOTE—Jefferson, in 1800, was elected on the [illegible] ballot. The popular vote is not given until 1824, because the electors were chosen by the State Legislatures up to that period. [illegible] In 1824 J. Q. Adams was elected by House of Representatives.

The Republican party clings to power with the energy of despair, because it cannot exist as an opposition.

It is time the enormous expenditures of the past twenty years at Washington were submitted to an impartial audit.

The election of General Hancock to the Presidency will restore friendly relations between all sections, and scatter prosperity over the entire land.

ELECTION IN MAINE.

The latest returns from Maine received as we go to press, show conclusively the endeavors being made by the Republicans of that State to so "doctor" the vote as to count in their candidate for Governor. Returns received from four hundred and nineteen towns, considered official by the Associated Press, give the following vote:

Davis, Rep.	70,936
Plaisted, Fusion	69,057
Nye, Prohib.	174
Scattering	255

Davis leads by 908 votes, but there are yet eighty-one towns and eight plantations to be heard from which last year gave the Fusionists over Davis 1,313. If they vote the same as last year and the counting is honest, Plaisted by above showing will have a majority of 405.

A Question.

George C. Ludlow voted for the bills reducing the rate of interest from 7 to 6 per cent.

Frederick A. Potts voted for the bills exempting mortgages from taxation, and thereby increasing the tax upon the real estate of small owners.

Which was the friend of the workingman?

"A large manufacturer, not a hundred miles from here, said to one of his foremen the other day, 'If Hancock is elected you may expect our business will fall off at least one half.' And yet he has some workmen in his employ whose Democratic eyes are so blind to their own interests that they will vote against the interest of their employer."—Central Times.

How blind to the interests of their employer! The workingmen are beginning to find out the lies told them by designing politicians and partisan newspapers in the interest of Garfield, and will not be blind enough on the second day of November next to cast their votes for a man who represents the party which keeps them poverty-stricken by reason of monopolies and close corporations.

LOCAL POLITICS.

At a regular meeting of the "Hancock Veteran Association," held in their rooms on Somerset Street, last Monday evening the following uniform was adopted: Blue shirt with red facing, letters H. & E. on front; white pants, red leggings, blue cap with red band, red belt with monogram on face, and telescope torch. This command will turn out 75 men in uniform on the occasion of the mass meeting next Monday evening.

The Hancock Veteran Association met at their headquarters last Wednesday evening and elected the following officers of the "Hancock Guards":—Captain, George Towsley; 1st Lieut., E. C. Morse; 2d Lieut., John Finley; Drum Major, Charles Davis. The Command will meet at headquarters, Friday evening, at 8:45 o'clock, to receive their uniforms.

Henry S. Harris.

At Belvidere on Wednesday of last week, the delegates to the 4th District Congressional Convention, united with a spirit of entire harmony in the nomination of Henry S. Harris, of Warren, by acclamation. This gentleman, whose name has been placed on the Democratic banner as its candidate for Congress, is one who will greatly strengthen the popular ticket in the district that has nominated him; and while an overwhelming victory is a certainty, it will be the endeavor of all to increase the majority as much as possible. The nominee was born in the town of Belvidere in 1851, where his parents still reside, his father being cashier of the Belvidere Bank. He graduated from Princeton in 1870, among the first in an unusually large class, and was admitted to the bar three years later. Mr. Harris at once showed attainments of a high order, and early gave great promise of the leading position in the legal profession which he was destined to attain. In March, 1877, he was appointed Prosecutor of Warren county, and during the "ring trials" of 1878 laid the foundation for his present political exaltation. While acting as Prosecutor during that time his efficiency, courage and zeal endeared him to all justice-desiring and honest-thinking people of every political complexion.

Coming State Appointments in New Jersey.

The next Governor of New Jersey has more important nominations to make than any Governor who has preceded him for many years. Nearly the whole State government will go out of office during the next gubernatorial term. The commissions of five of the nine Supreme Court Justices will expire during the term. The following lists embraces the general state officers and when their commissions will expire:

Justices of the Supreme Court—Manning M. Knapp, January 25, 1882; Jonathan Dixon and Alfred Reed, April 8, 1882; Bennet VanSyckle and Edward W. Scudder, in March, 1883.

Clerk of the Supreme Court—Benjamin F. Lee, November 21, 1882.

Clerk of the Court of Chancery—Henry S. Little, 1881.

Attorney-General—John P. Stockton, April 5, 1882.

Secretary of State—Henry C. Kelsey, February 2, 1881.

In the above list all the incumbents are Democrats with the exception of Jonathan Dixon.

The Supreme bench is now composed of nine members—six Democrats and three Republicans; of the six Democrats the commissions of four will expire.

Of the six Judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, two hold over—Judges Dodd and Green. Judge Lilly has died since the adjournment of the Legislature—a vacancy to be filled. Judge Wales goes out of office March 19, 1881. Judge Clements in 1882, and Judge Lathrop, March 9, 1883.—Newark Advertiser.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

James L. Brackel was formally excommunicated from the Catholic Church for grossly insulting a priest in Cahoka, Mo. Upon the priest ordering him from the church last Sunday, he refused to leave, whereupon the priest stopped the services and left. Most of the villagers side with the priest.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has during the past month furnished transportation to the seashore at Asbury Park and Ocean Grove for over 300,000 pleasure and health seekers.

A bold robbery by a little girl of twelve, at Elizabeth, is just recorded. It seems almost incredible that one so young could be so successful as to gain admittance to a store in broad daylight, rob the money-drawer while the clerks were in the store, and escape, and yet such seems to have been the case with little Mary Ann Saunders. She says she did it to get money enough to reach her home.

Here is a grand opportunity for Republican bull-dozers who have more money than brains, to invest their spare change. Here is a challenge from Geo. Wilkes, editor of "Wilkes's Spirit of the Times," and a Republican, but not of the Garfield stripe:

[Geo. Wilkes' Letter in N. Y. Sun.]

"I will bet my friend Thomas Murphy, or any other man, $10,000 that General Hancock will be elected next President of the United States. He (Thomas Murphy) or any one reading this offer may close with it instanter by depositing $10,000 with Drexel, Morgan & Co., of Wall and Broad Streets."

Ex-Senator W. H. Barnum has declined the nomination to Congress in the Fourth District of Connecticut.

The Workingmen of San Francisco have renominated Mayor Kalloch.

Governor McClellan on Tuesday last approved Engineer Morris' plans for the underground railroad and they were adopted.

The funeral of Marshall O. Roberts took place Tuesday morning from Calvary Church at Fourth avenue and 21st street.

The Oneida has been docked and was brought to New York on Wednesday morning.

Save Your 5 Cents.

Five cents spent for the "Tribune Extra No. 69" will give the investor a very complete life of Gen. Garfield. Every Republican and Democrat should ponder the investment.—Central New Jersey Times.

We publish the following from the Tribune, gratuitously:

Feb. 19, 1873—James A. Garfield of Ohio had ten shares; never paid a dollar; received $329, which, after the investigation began, he was anxious to have considered as a loan from Mr. Oakes Ames to himself.

Well, the wickedness of all of it is that those men betrayed the trust of the people, deceived their constituents, and by evasions and falsehoods confessed the transaction to be disgraceful.

Feb. 26, 1873—Mr. Ames establishes very clearly the point that he was not alone in this offence. If he is to be expelled for bribery, the men who were bribed should go with him.

We Can't Talk

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them, let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. sep2y1.

Democratic Rally!

There will be a grand Democratic Rally of the Democratic and Conservative voters of Plainfield, held at

VanDeventer Hall,

Monday Ev'g. Sept. 20,

At 8 o'clock, on which occasion there will be present to address the meeting,

Hon. Algernon Sullivan,

Of N. Y. City, and other Speakers.

Previous to the meeting, two

Hancock & English Banners

Will be raised in different parts of the city, under the auspices of the "Young Men's Hancock Club," and the "3d Ward Hancock Club." In the evening there will be a GRAND TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION of uniformed clubs of Plainfield, Elizabeth and other cities. Banners will be raised between 6 and 7 o'clock.

Now put in your coal.

DELIGHTFUL weather yesterday.

MAYBE we'll have autumn now.

THE girls are wearing men's hats again.

PEACHES are almost done with, except in cans.

Watermelons and cantaloupes are growing scarce.

B-o-o-m—It comes from Maine, where lives Jimmy Blaine.

Was last week's protracted storm our September "equinox"? Let us devoutly hope so.

In many places the second crop of hay is reported to be very heavy—much heavier than the first.

THE Bristol, Pa., Times, an independent newspaper, has raised the flag of Hancock and English.

REV. Mr. Hurlbut is expected to address the Temperance Grove Meeting next Sunday afternoon.

HORSE thieves are what they called us; and we don't propose to be hit unless we strike back. Mules or mule drivers don't count in this race.

Miss O. L. Rogers announces in this issue, the re-opening of her classes in piano instruction at her rooms, corner of Park ave. and 5th street, on Tuesday the 28th inst.

FOR the convenience of exhibitors, entries for the coming Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association may be made on and after Monday, Sept. 20th, at the office of M. M. Thorn, on North Avenue.

YOU mustn't joke with the Republicans just now, until Jimmy Blaine has got through counting in Maine. He is hunting for that 15,000 majority. You must be called a "horse thief" though, if you don't vote for Garfield or Potts, and—grin and bear it.

THE world-wide reputation of Mrs. G. C. Howard as Topsy, and the never-failing power to attract and interest possessed by the play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," makes it almost unnecessary for us to call attention to the entertainment at VanDeventer Hall this (Friday) evening. The entire company is unrivalled in all its parts.

MEASURES have been adopted looking to the construction of a driving or trotting park at Cape May. Subscriptions aggregating nearly $8,000 have already been pledged. At a recent meeting of those interested, committees were appointed to examine properties offered for lease or sale, and to draft laws to govern an association.

FROM present appearances the coming Fair of the Burlington County Agricultural Society will outdo itself. It is branching out in every direction. Its improvements are many and substantial, its schedule more varied and its premiums larger. It well merits the title already won among many, that of "The leading County Fair of the United States."

WE gladly call attention to the advertisement of Crane the hatter at No. 13 Park avenue. This merchant's long experience guarantees satisfaction to all who patronize him, and not only is his work all that can be desired but is delivered at the time promised. A specialty is the remodeling of ladies' hats and bonnets into the latest styles and shapes of the season.

THE first of the present month is generally taken as a notice, by migratory residents, to leave their summer quarters and seek winter habitation. Our clergy are back in their pulpits, Ocean Grove has lost all power to charm fair women and brave men, and the study of ichthyology among the Adirondacks has ceased —yet, we are compelled to realize the fact that Amos Keeto prolongs his sojourn in our midst, by a large majority.

ON Monday evening of this week, the Giles & Potter combination rendered the always enjoyable Uncle Tom's Cabin at VanDeventer Hall. In spite of the "inclemency of the weather" quite a respectably sized audience gathered, and were undeniably repaid for their attendance. The managers have succeeded in bringing together one of the most talented stock companies on the road, in all the separate parts, and the additional attraction of a genuine negro jubilee chorus cannot fail to secure for them a tour of continued success.

THE 1:30 train from this city, on Tuesday afternoon, ran into the rear end of a coal train between Broad and Jefferson streets, Elizabeth, wrecking a number of the coal cars. Mr. Charles Foster of North Plainfield, who was fireman of the locomotive, broke his ankle in jumping from the engine to avoid what he supposed would result more seriously. The carelessness of a switch-tender is given as the cause of the accident; that employee having switched the coal train on to a side track, and afterwards left the switch open. Travel was not delayed, the other tracks being clear.

THERE was a political disturbance at Harrison, Essex county, on Friday, in which several persons received cuts and other wounds. Three white republicans and one colored club went from Newark to attend a meeting at Harrison. The Advertiser's account makes it appear that the republicans were orderly and were attacked without cause. The Journal of Newark, has a very full account, in which it says that a disturbance occurred on the way to Harrison between the colored club and a white club as to which should go ahead. There were numbers of spectators in the street. Ex-Alderman William Tierney and several gentlemen, whom has had vouched for, say that as the colored men passed along Harrison ave. they acted in a very disgraceful manner, by pushing each other from one side of the street to the other, and shoving their burning torches in the faces of white females who were looking on. This greatly enraged the male attendants of the young women and they resolved upon giving the annoyers a warm reception if they repeated such actions on their return through Harrison avenue. On the way back, a man was rudely shoved by the "Sergeant" of one of the clubs. He retaliated by knocking the "Sergeant" down. A shower of stones was thrown, a melee ensued, a man named Boyce was cut with a razor, and others wounded. The clubs broke ranks and fled to Newark.

AT the reading room attached to the Democratic headquarters, voters will always find fresh reading matter instructive to the mind.

THE Republican banner at the corner of Front street and Park avenue, had never been thought until the boys from Westfield did it that honor on the 3d inst.

IT is asserted that if the President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Irish Republican Club of Plainfield should ever apply for a license to keep an inn, tavern, saloon, &c., of a Republican Council, he would get it.

A COUNTRYMAN and team came through Madison avenue, on Thursday morning, in such a hurry and so recklessly, as to destroy a lamp globe that they collided with on the corner of Second street. They had no time to stop, and Constable Moffett was sent after them. Returns are not yet in.

THE "Irish Republican Club" of Plainfield, consisting of Pat Flanagan, President, Secretary and Treasurer, succeeded, with the assistance of "friends of the party" yesterday, in raising the pole in front of the President's house, to which is to be attached the Garfield banner. There was no riot and it was not necessary to call out the troops (!)

The Wycliffe Bible Celebration.

The Bible Societies of New Jersey will hold a State Convention in the Assembly Room of the Capitol, at Trenton, on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 21 and 22, 1880, to commemorate the Five Hundredth Anniversary of the Translation of the English Bible by John Wycliffe. Three sessions of the Convention will be held on Tuesday, commencing at 10:30 A. M., and one on Wednesday, closing at 12:30 P. M.

Two handsome Hancock & English Banners will be raised in Plainfield next Monday night.

Fairs.

The County Fairs to be held in this State this season will commence and end as follows: State Fair, Waverly, Sep. 20th to 25th; Burlington, at Mt. Holly, Oct. 12, 13, 14, 15; Cape May, at South Seaville, Sep. 16, 17; Cumberland, Bridgeton, Sep. 22; Delaware Valley, Lambertville, Sep. 14, 15, 16, 17; Egg Harbor City, Sep 13, 14; Hunterdon, Flemington, Sep. 28, 29, 30; Monmouth, Freehold, Sep. 14, 15, 16; Moorestown Fair, Sep. 14, 15; Somerset, Somerville, Oct. 5, 6, 7, 8; Union and Middlesex, Plainfield, Sep. 27, 28, 29, 30; West Jersey, Woodstown, Sep. 15, 16. The time for holding the Sussex Fair has been fixed for Oct. 12, 13, 14 and 15.

To Manufacturers and Exhibitors.

Now that the world's Fair of 1883 is an assured event of the future, and such unusual endeavors are to be exerted tending towards making it the greatest of the international expositions of the past, manufacturers, producers, and all intending to exhibit should lose no time in applying for the space they desire and forwarding such information regarding their intentions as may be necessary. If the manufacturers of this State will address Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, Plainfield, N. J., with information in relation to what they propose to exhibit, how much space is needed and the location of their factories, and if all others will forward their names and the kind of products, whether the result of brain or hard labor, they wish to display, their communications will be placed before the Executive Committee of the World's Fair organization.

Masonic.

The Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of New Jersey held its annual Conclave at the Asylum of Palestine Commandery, Trenton, last week, and elected Grand Officers for the ensuing year. The following are the officers:

A. B. Frazer, G. C.; G. G. Felton, D. G. C.; Joseph Stokes, G. G.; Edward Clift, G. C. G.; M. N. Oviatt, G. S. W.; T. W. Tilden, G. J. W.; Seth Thomas, G. P.; F. G. Wiese, G. T.; Charles Bechtel, G. R.; J. H. Ackerman, G. S. B.; M. K. Raub, G. S. B.; J. S. Roberts, G. W., and Amos Howell, G. S.

The Order of High Priesthood met last week and elected the following officers:

Geo. H. Jones, G. P.; John Woolverton, G. V. P.; J. Layton Register, G. C.; Charles Bechtel, G. T.; Geo. B. Edwards, G. R.; J. H. Durand, G. M. C.; W. W. Goodwin, G. H.; T. H. Redway, G. C., and C. L. Chovey, G. S.

State Agricultural Society.

The twenty-second exhibition of the State Agricultural Society will be held at Waverly Park on the 20th inst., continuing for five days. The coming exhibition will surpass all its predecessors in numbers and quality. There will be a large show of thoroughbred neat cattle, as well as fine herds of grades. The horse department will range above those of other years. In sheep, swine and poultry, every available inch of room will be filled. There will be a choice display of fruit, flowers, grain and vegetables. All the improved agricultural implements, farm and garden machinery will be found on the grounds.

On Thursday the 23d instant, many distinguished citizens will be on the grounds. Among them the Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow and the Hon. Frederic A. Potts, and United States Senator, the Hon. James G. Blaine, will positively be on the grounds the same day.

THE First Warders will be out next Monday night.

Democratic State Committee.

Ex-Senator Leon Abbett, Chairman of the State Convention, on Friday last appointed the following-named gentlemen members of the Democratic State Central Committee for the ensuing three years: Senator John R. McPherson, of Monmouth; C. Meyer Zulick, of Essex; Wm. A. Wood, of Salem; Robert F. Stockton, of Mercer; James S. Vosseller, of Union; James N. Pidcock, of Hunterdon; John Hone, Jr., of Morris; John D. Randall, of Essex, and William Brinkerhoff, of Hudson. The committee met at the State House, Trenton, on Tuesday, Sept. 14, at noon, to organize, and elected the following officers: Hon. John R. McPherson, Chairman; R. F. Stevens, Secretary; Wm. Brinkerhoff, Treasurer. The Committee has decided to have its headquarters at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, during the Campaign.

The letter of acceptance of Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow, for Governor, was read before the Committee.

THE Hancock Veterans will parade in uniform next Monday night.

A Smash Up.

There has been a C. R. R. locomotive laid up for repairs and an engineer laid off to study the laws of gravitation, since our issue of last week. The latter, about midnight of Thursday last, was in charge of engine No. 76, engaged in running a fast freight train from New York to Philadelphia. At Fanwood an original idea seized him, and uncoupling the locomotive it was speeded down to the tank at this city where it halted to take water. Whether this engineer of the fertile brain expected that his train would not run down hill, is not known, but if so, he soon changed his belief. While still standing at the tank, the engine was caught up with by the heavy train which had attained an unending high degree of speed on the down grade into this city, and a total wreck resulted. The engineer claims that he whistled to put on brakes and supposes that his men were all asleep —which, for his sake, it is to be hoped, will be established to the satisfaction of the Company.

Frightful Accident.

Yesterday (Thursday) afternoon, at about 4 o'clock, Mr. James Connolly of this city was killed at Elizabeth. The unfortunate man was about twenty years of age and lived on Third street. He attempted to get on a moving coal train, against the warning of friends with him, and fell beneath the cars. His body, after the rear portion of the train had passed over, was wholly unrecognizable. Parts of his skull and brain strewed the track in every direction.

Closed.

The Hotel Netherwood, after a season of unequaled success under the able management of Mr. Chas. A. King, closed on Monday last. So popular is this resort growing with each year, that increased revenue is the result, and its managers are justly satisfied with the patronage that has been accorded the Hotel during the Summer just past. No pains nor expense was spared in providing service for the guests, and an unrivalled cuisine left nothing to be desired in any of its branches. The season of '81, it is fair to suppose, will far surpass any preceding one.

Dr. Ketcham's Lecture.

The following correspondence will explain itself. We hope that our citizens will give Dr. Ketcham a full house and a "benefit" such as he deserves. Price for the lecture, 50 cents:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 10, '80.

REV. DR. K. P. KETCHAM—Dear Sir:—We the undersigned, citizens of Plainfield, representing a large number of your personal friends, respectfully and urgently request you to deliver in our city, at an early date, a lecture on your recent European tour. Trusting that you will give a favorable and early reply to this request, and indicating an evening in September most agreeable to yourself, we remain

Respectfully yours,

[Signed]—D. J. Yerkes, P. Balen, Jos. W. Yates, Jno. P. Giles, David M. Stiger, J. H. Vincent, I. N. Rushmore, L. Myers, Dr. Chas. F. Dillman, L. V. F. Randolph, W. R. Clarkson, Wm. M. McCutchen, Mason W. Tyler, John C. Bliss, A. Gilbert, J. Clark, Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, Jas. McGee, Jas. W. Jackson, Geo. H. Babcock, Erskine M. Rodman, Thos. H. Stockton.

DR. KETCHAM'S REPLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 13, '80.

Messrs. Peter Balen, Jos. Yates and others

—GENTLEMEN—In reply to your kind letter and request of Sept. 10th, I would say that I had supposed the maxim of every wise man in Plainfield to be—"anything but the man who has just returned from his first trip to Europe!" And it is still my own judgment that very few will be at pains to expose themselves, in this respect, and that those who do in this instance will be sorry they did. Nevertheless, like the meek and self-sacrificing politician, "I am in the hands of my friends," and will therefore name the evening of Tuesday, Sept. 21st, as the time at which I will do the best I can, as a new hand upon an old theme, to give you as little repentance of your present action as possible.

Very gratefully and truly yours,

K. I. KETCHAM.

Dr. Ketcham's lecture will be entitled "Memories of a Pleasant Summer Beyond the Sea," and will be delivered in Crescent Ave. Pres. Church, Tuesday evening, Sept. 21. Admission, 50 cents.

A SURPRISE is awaiting the Garfieldites of Plainfield worse than the Maine boom.

Forty-Ninth Annual Exhibition.

For the past half-century the annual fair of the American Institute has been among the greatest attraction for old and young of our country; and although steadily improving with each year, until perfection had seemingly been reached, yet the exhibition of '81 which opened on Wednesday last, promises to be the grandest ever given under the auspices of the Institution. The building at 63d St. and 3d Ave., has lately been thoroughly renewed in its foundations and supports, and new floors and platforms laid. Repainted, frescoed and kalsomined inside and out, it is now one of the brightest and most attractive halls in the city of New York.

With the great mass of visitors, Machinery Hall has always been one of the great points of interest. This year it is more complete and interesting than ever before. There is a splendid variety of new, novel and intricate engines in motion, attended by competent engineers who kindly explain their peculiarities to visitors. The art gallery receives special attention and many fine oil paintings, rare bits of statuary, and excellent specimens of finished photographs are shown. On the main floor and in the alcove a grand display of all sorts of rare and curious manufactures and odd inventions is made, all the productions of American brains and genius. A superb orchestra under the leadership of the celebrated cornet soloist, Arbuckle, gives a grand concert every afternoon and evening, and nothing that money could purchase or experience suggest has been neglected that can add to the convenience of the exhibitor, or the comfort and pleasure of the visitors.

The old and experienced manager, Mr. Charles Wager Hull, who has been General Superintendent for many years, is still at the helm, and to his exertions and untiring labors is due the success that gains for the present exhibition the title of greatest of all.

UNIFORMED clubs will remember that the banner raising will take place between 6 and 7 o'clock on Monday evening.

A Clever Burglary.

Mr. E. A. Vermeule, of West Front street, was, on Wednesday night the victim of a robbery, which by the seeming ease with which it was accomplished, was undoubtedly the work of one with either a thorough knowledge of the art and science of burglary, or an acquaintance with the premises and the business habits of their occupant. At about 10:30 in the evening, Watchman Wright discovered that the door of the store tenanted by Mr. Vermeule was unlocked. He entered, and upon making a search found no one. The lamp that is always burning, lighted up the premises, and everything to all appearances was undisturbed and just as left by the proprietor for the night. He notified Mr. Andrew Jennings, the book-keeper of the establishment, who lives but a short distance from the place, and that gentleman immediately went to the store. His surprise at finding the door securely fastened, upon his arrival, was great. Afterwards, however, a less agreeable degree of astonishment arose, when the loss of $107 was discovered to be the result of a most clever robbery. It is fair to suppose from the condition of things as shown by an examination that the burglars (probably two) entered by forcing open the back entrance and afterwards opening the front door from the inside by taking the lock off. A free way of escape was thus left clear in two opposite directions, and possibly one of the men stationed himself where he could have an uninterrupted view of Front street and a free observation of any approach. But a short time was necessary to complete the theft. Those concerned in it fully understood the workings of the combination lock which opened the safe without any trouble. An inner safe door of iron was then sprung back without drawing the bolt, and from this receptacle cash to the amount of $107 was secured. At this point of the proceedings, they were probably frightened away. A drawer was shown to have been slightly tampered with, but not opened. In it was a gold watch and other articles of more or less value. Nothing that would help to trace the perpetrators or lead to their identification was left behind or taken by them, and it really seems as if the mystery of the affair would undoubtedly never be cleared up.

MURDER.

Since and before the incorporation of Plainfield as a city, it has always shown a law-abiding character not to be behind other places of its size in goodness and wickedness, and all the many phases of crime have at one time or another been committed in its midst, with the exception of murder. Until within the past week, the taking of one mortal's life by another was fortunately an unknown local experience, although a few attempts and assaults have occasionally been made; but on Sunday morning last contradictory reports of a fatally terminating quarrel, showed that the highest degree of crime had at last been reached.

Late on Saturday evening last two young colored girls, Eva Thompson and Mary Stewart, started from Front street for their home on Fourth street between Liberty and William. On Park avenue near Second street they were met by John Johnson (also colored) a coachman in the employ of Wm. B. Lewis, Esq., of Eighth street and Central Avenue, who asked them where they were going. Upon being informed, Johnson walked along with the girls through Second to Liberty and thence to Fourth and so to "Battle Row" where they lived. This "Battle Row" is a long two story building divided into eight houses, with four entrance doors facing sideways by the street. It is owned by Father McAllaire, a Catholic priest of Baltimore, and although originally occupied by a poor class of Irish, is now almost entirely rented by colored families. The building stands in a deep lot, running back towards Third street.

As the girls and Johnson entered the yard, they were met by Sam Williams—brother-in-law of Eva Thompson—who seized both her and Johnson, and dragging them into the street said "come here I want to see you." The girl broke away and ran back into the yard, but upon Williams repeating that he wanted to see her "just a minute, after which she could go," she started to return. The two men by this time had become engaged in a wordy quarrel on the sidewalk, and Mary Stewart having gone to Mrs. Thompson and told her of the trouble, the latter came out of her house and persuaded her daughter to come away. A number of the inhabitants of the "Row," hearing the loud talking, stood on the stoops and in the door-ways of the respective quarters, and from what they were able to hear and see at the distance they were from the men, is the account of subsequent events recorded. Williams was heard to say: "put that thing in your pocket. I havn't any, but I'll fight you with my fair fists." Almost immediately afterwards, while the two were standing face to face, a pistol report was heard and a flash seen which threw a bright light over the breast of Williams. The latter then stepped back into the street and almost immediately turned and fled towards another gate into the yard. Before reaching it, two more shots were fired; but Williams continued his flight and passing through the gate ran around to the left of the house, pursued by Johnson. At the back of the lot is an entrance through a board fence into a garden; Williams passed through this, and after running a short distance down a path, fell dead at the foot of a small fruit tree, thus going a distance of 250 feet, with a ball in his heart. Johnson continued around the house, coming back along its front, and speaking to William's mother-in-law, who stood on the stoop, said: "go in the house. Everything's all right." He then endeavored to enter the house where the girls were, but on their refusing to open the door, went away. Josiah Dunham, (also colored) who lived in the "Row," heard the firing and on being informed that some one was shooting Sam Williams and which direction he had run, went out into the garden and found the victim lying in the path. He immediately hunted up officer Hapenny, and returning with him they carried the body into the house. Chief Dodd was soon after informed of the occurrence, and going to Mr. Lewis' stables Sunday morning found Johnson engaged at his usual labors. Officer Randolph, accompanied Dodd and the two arrested the culprit, informing him that Williams was shot in the leg and would get along all right. Subsequently he was told of the fatal termination of the quarrel, and at his request Corporation Counsel Suydam was sent for and retained by Johnson as his counsel.

County Physician Terrell was telegraphed for, and assisted by Dr. Mrvalag of Elizabeth a post mortem dissection was made on Monday morning. It was found that a pistol ball had entered the left side of the body between the fifth and sixth ribs, passing through the right side of the heart, grazing the lower portion of the left lung, making an opening between the middle and lower portions of the right lung, and lodging in the right side of the body between the fifth and sixth ribs. All the other organs were found in a perfectly healthy condition.

A jury was sworn in at the Council Chamber on Monday afternoon. After viewing the body at the morgue and inspecting the premises where the deed was committed, an adjournment was made until the next day. On Tuesday testimony to quite an extent was taken, establishing the facts set forth above. The ball from the victim's body was produced, and the physicians who made the dissection gave as their opinion that it was the cause of the death. After a retirement of a few moments the jury returned to the Coroner the usual printed form filled out as follows:

"That the said Samuel Williams came to his death from a pistol shot wound at the hands of John Johnson, on Fourth street, between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue, in the city of Plainfield, Union county, aforesaid, on the night of the 11th or the morning of the 12th of September, A. D. 1880."

The following diagram may serve to give some idea of where this affray took place and the surrounding premises.

B—House where the two girls lived.

The accused was removed to Elizabeth on Monday, where he occupies a cell in the County jail. He seems to feel entirely confident of escaping any penalty for the terrible deed he committed. His counsel also—Messrs. Suydam & Jackson—claim to be able to establish a strong defence in his favor, and [illegible] [illegible] for their client. [illegible] Johnson [illegible] with [illegible] lives in the company of the girl Eva Thompson, and Williams's wife had but a few days ago complained to her lawyers of the infidelity of her husband and his attentions to this very girl. It is natural with people to hit a man when he is down, and to lay a subject with complaint testimony. Immediately after the affair, any quantity of persons doubtless relate the whole past history of Johnson, embellished with innumerable and awful crimes that he had committed. And there are many who would hang him without permitting a defense. All these rumors may be true, but we appeal to the generosity of everyone and suggest that the accused be given a fair chance.

GRAND Democratic Rally next Monday night.

New Jersey at Creedmoor.

On Wednesday last at Creedmoor was concluded the Inter-state Match for the bronze "Soldier of Marathon" which was first offered by the State of New York in 1875, and won by it. Since then the victorious teams have been as follows: 1876, Connecticut; 1877, California; 1878 & 1879, New York. This year it falls to the lot of our own riflemen.

The match is shot by teams of twelve men firing each ten shots at 200 and again at 500 yards, making a possible team total of 1,200. The 200-yard score found the New York team, which was made up of four Seventh men, four Sixty-fifth men, two Fifty-first men and two Thirty-fifth men, very far in the rear. At 500 yards, though it was near dusk, and elevations were falling rapidly, it did better, but was fairly outshot by the New Jersey team, which was made up of Colonel Howard, Dr. Bart, Captains Griffith, Reeve, Denman, Holmes, Symes and Anderson, Lieutenants Curry, Privates Hadden, McCabe and Dudley. The scores stood:

They Heard from Maine.

The sentiments with which the news from Maine was received on Tuesday morning in this city by its voters, were various and manifold. The Republicans were struck speechless at the result, and were unprepared with any theories or arguments. The Democrats were, of course, overjoyed and happy, and the American flag was unfurled in honor of the triumph from many of the city's most prominent buildings. During the evening, salutes were fired in Plainfield and over the brook; and the Democratic headquarters on Front street was crowded with jubilant sympathizers in the cause of honest government. The news was the main (no pun) topic of conversation on the streets; but although the enthusiasm was so great, there seemed to be—by the reasonable way in which it was taken—no danger that the Democrats should become what the Republicans had been so thoroughly taught the fallacy of being—over confident. It merely gave the former a taste of the overwhelming victory they would achieve on November 2d.

Plainfield Pedestrian Pastimes.

For almost the first time, during a half-score of annual games given under the auspices of the Plainfield Athletic Club, the weather on Wednesday last was propitious. In consideration of this, and in recognition of the fact that unusual pains were taken to make the contests interesting and attractive to the spectators, a large gathering of both sexes assembled at the beautiful grounds of the association upon the occasion referred to. Besides the large number that crowded the Grand Stand until even "standing room" was unobtainable, fully two hundred people of all ages lined the home stretch and occupied the carriages drawn up along the course. Efficient track management kept the way clear even when exciting finishes threatened to carry the on-lookers beyond the prescribed boundaries, and no difficulty was experienced by those desiring to obtain a full sight, a free vision and a fair view. All will agree with us, undoubtedly, in our opinion that notwithstanding all these admirable surrounding features and circumstances, the greatest source of pride arising out of the day's events, is the praiseworthy showing made by our home athletes. It has usually been the result of former years that outside competitors, by their superior training and consequent greater ability, have carried away the pick of the laurels; on Wednesday, however, five members of our home clubs and another resident of the city entered by a N. Y. club, succeeded in gallantly gaining enviable victories. Especially noticeable was the bicycle riding of Mr. Joseph W. Gavett, who, although never contesting in an open race of the kind before, yet succeeded in securing first medals at one, two and five miles. In the latter race, being pitted against Rawson Underhill—a rider of no mean reputation—Gavett beat him from the scratch by finishing the entire distance without taking advantage of his handicap.

The following is a brief summary of the different events:

100 yd. run, for those who had never beaten 11 sec. First trial: W. G. Hegeman, Brooklyn, 1st, E. F. Foster, Scottish American A. C., 2d. Second trial: R. W. Brown, Manhattan A. C., 1st; P. St. J. Bissell, M. A. C., 2d. Time both heats, 11 sec. Final: R. W. Brown, 1st; W. G. Hegeman, 2d; P. St. J. Bissell, 3rd. Time, 10½ sec.

Hurdle Race (handicap). J. W. Murray, Jr., (4 yds.) Independent A. C., 1st; J. DeCamp, (scratch) I. A. C., 2d; C. G. Moore (10 yds.) P. A. C., 3d. Time, 21½ sec.

Half-mile run; for those who had never beaten 2.10. E. F. Foster, S. A. A. C., 1st; E. S. Knight, Man. A. C., 2d; R. H. Atha, Mystic Boat Club, 3rd. Time, 2.08. This was a beautiful race. Foster bringing up the rear during almost the entire distance, but winning as usual on the last fifty yards.

440 yards (handicap). C. A. White (40 yds) Staten Island A. C., 1st; W. R. Paynter (35 yds) American A. C., 2d; T. B. Hegeman (35 yds) W. A. C., 3rd. Time, 53½ sec.

100 yards (handicap). First heat: J. B. White (scratch) Man. A. C., 1st; W. W. Storms (2 yds) Man. A. C., 2d, Time, 10¾ sec. Second heat: H. Dalrymple (1 yd) S. A. A. C., 1st; P. St. J. Bissell (4 yds) Man. A. C., 2d (walk over). Final: J. B. White, 1st; H. Dalrymple, 2d. Time, 10¾ sec.

Mr. L. E. Myers of the Manhattan Athletic Club, in his endeavor to cut down his own championship record of 22¼ seconds at 220 yards, was unsuccessful. Both the runner and track were in fine condition, but a strong wind was against him during a part of the distance, which was made in 23¼ seconds.

220 yards (handicap). First heat: W. W. Storms, M. A. C., (6 yds) 1st; J. B. White, M. A. C., (scratch) 2d. Time, 25 sec. Second heat: H. Dalrymple, S. A. A. C., (scratch) 1st; E. J. Connell, Am. A. C. (8 yds) 2d. Time, 24¾ sec. Final: J. B. White, 1st; W. W. Storms, 2d. Time, 24½ sec.

Two mile bicycle (handicap) J. W. Gavett, P. A. C., (172 yds.) 1st; E. C. Bodell, Essex Bi. C. 200 yds., 2d. Time, 7 [illegible]

One mile walk, for those who had never beaten 8:15. A. Varian, Ind. A. C. 1st; H. P. Moore, Ind. A. C., 2d. Time, 8 [illegible]

One mile bicycle (club) race: J. W. Gavett, 1st; P. B. Vail, 2d. Time, 3.46.

Five mile bicycle race: J. W. Gavett, P. A. C., (200 yds.) 1st; Rawson Underhill, (scratch) 2d; E. C. Bodell, Essex Bi. C. (200 yds.,) 3d. Time, 19.51½.

Look out for the "torpedo" [illegible] Monday night.

Personals.

County Clerk Vosseller has been appointed a member of the Democratic Central Committee of this State.

Julian Scott, the artist, is at present engaged in painting the portraits of several prominent army officers at West Point.

All will sympathize with Mr. Augustus Frazee in his loss of a considerable sum of money, on Saturday of last week. That gentleman, however, in spite of the unfortunate occurrence, started on a short pleasure trip on Tuesday morning, in search of the rest and recreation that he has earned by years of faithfulness in his business.

Infants on Bicycles.

A case of much importance to bicycle riders came before an English Court a few days ago. It arose from a collision between two bicycles. The plaintiff sued the defendant, a lad about 16 years old, for £1 1s., damage done to his bicycle by a collision with the defendant's bicycle. It was urged on behalf of the plaintiff that the defendant was riding on the wrong side of the road when the collision occurred, and was therefore guilty of negligence. The defendant pleaded "infancy," and upon that ground the Judge nonsuited the plaintiff. This decision may be right in law, but it is unconstitutional in fact. If an infant on a bicycle is not responsible for the damage he caused by running into another bicycle, is he free from responsibility for the consequences of a collision with a pedestrian, or indeed for any injuries he may inflict on his fellow creatures by careless riding? The point is one of interest to the public, for it is impossible to judge the precise age of a bicycle rider as he dashes along the road with the rapidity of a race horse.—Exchange.

Wise and OtherWise.

The following quotations from Judge Dittenhoefer's speech of Thursday of last week, show more or less judgment and discernment. The last extract, however, is a specimen of his many false prophecies.

"The rebels are no worse than you are [addressing the Republicans] and you are no better than they." No one will dispute this!

"Do not fly from the ills you have, to those you know not of." In other words, your are sure of what you have, it is possible you may get worse. That's sensible!

"If the Democrats get in they will want to stay in." As a Republican, the Honorable Dittenhoefer thinks a continuance of reign is reprehensible.

"Every illiterate person is a Democrat." Which is paying the colored population quite a compliment, inasmuch as he considers them highly educated or else Democratic in principle.

"Vermont sounded the keynote of the campaign" (he should have commenced at the beginning of the alphabet, and then Alabama and Arkansas with their keynotes would not have been forgotten by the speaker) "Next Tuesday the State of Blaine will follow in its footsteps." Do so some more! Sister States follow in the same footsteps!

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Considerable interest is attached to the trotting between three well-known horses owned in Union county, in the Circuit of County Fairs now being and to be held in the State this and next month. The names of the horses are Sciola, Carbolic and Peralto, the former owned by J. Wesley Johnson of this city, the second by Wm. Moore, also of Plainfield and the latter by Mr. Stearns of Elizabeth. The initiatory trot occurred at Morristown during the Fair there last week. We take the following account of the trotting from the Morris Banner.

SECOND RACE, FREE FOR ALL.

Four starters, Sciola, Carbolic, Peralto and Phil. Dwyer.

FIRST HEAT.—Peralto won the pole and captured the first heat in 2:29¼, Sciola second. Carbolic passing Phil. Dwyer on the homestretch, came in third.

SECOND HEAT.—Peralto won this heat by two lengths, Sciola second. Carbolic running under the string, third place was given to Phil. Dwyer. Time, 2:30¼.

THIRD HEAT.—This was a neck and neck race between Peralto and Sciola, the latter winning by a length, Peralto second, Phil. Dwyer third. Time, 2:30.

FOURTH HEAT.—Sciola won this heat in 2:34¼, having passed Carbolic, who was leading on the homestretch, and winning by a length, Carbolic second, Phil. Dwyer third.

FIFTH HEAT.—Phil. Dwyer was taken off sick or used up in this heat, and did not trot.

Carbolic was third at the ½ mile, but coming down the back stretch passed to the front, winning the heat by two lengths, Sciola second, Peralto four lengths behind. Time, 2:33.

SIXTH HEAT.—This was the most exciting event of the race. Carbolic and Sciola coming down the homestretch at a tremendous pace, Sciola leading till near the string when a run by Carbolic placed him first, but Sciola trotting in squarely, took the heat and race. Time, 2:36¼. Sciola took first money, Peralto second, Carbolic third.

The same horses will next trot at Lambertville, then Waverly, next Plainfield, and last at Somerville, during the Fairs held respectively in each of the above mentioned places. The horses are all fast ones, and whatever may be the result of their trotting previous to their performance at the approaching Fair near Plainfield, that will be the grand struggle and contest for supremacy. Being used to the track here some fine trotting may be looked for between these really good horses.

A black bass was recently caught in the Delaware River, near Port Jervis, weighing 6¼ pounds.

At the annual meeting of the "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society," held at the Mansion House, this city, on Wednesday, Sept. 15th, the following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year:—President, James S. Vosseller; Vice Presidents, Percy C. Ohl, John L. Holly, and R. M. Stelle; Secretary, W. L. Force; Treasurer, Wm. E. Jones; Counsel, Wm. B. Maxson; Directors, M. W. Schenck, Roderick Robertson, H. L. Webb, R. S. Little, Isaac Brokaw, E. P. Thorn, Julian Scott, Joseph C. Ohl, J. W. King. The Society has increased in membership over sixty members since last September. The total membership is now 215.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The regular meeting of the N. P. Hancock and English Campaign Club was held at Blair's Hall on Wednesday evening last. Flattering reports of successful progress by the different committees were received, and a Constitution and By-laws adopted and ordered printed. The President completed the organization of the association by the appointment of an Executive Committee of eight, one from each road district.

A subscription paper to raise funds for the purchase of a banner was started and liberally signed. The Hon. Wm. B. Maxson delivered an inspiring and eloquent speech, at the close of which the meeting adjourned. The Veteran Association's drum corps was also present and displayed their efficiency.

A Republican banner was last Wednesday evening raised on Somerset Street and another Campaign Club formed. Members of like organizations from this city helped to swell the ranks at the raising.

A Republican primary was held on last Monday evening, at the party's new headquarters, on Somerset street next to "Warren" engine house. Mr. Isaac Brokaw was chosen chairman and Mr. E. E. Anthony as Secretary. Mr. Alexander Williams was elected as delegate, and Chas. Flake as alternate, to attend the 4th Congressional Convention held at Phillipsburg yesterday (Thursday.)

FIRE MATTERS.

"Gazelle" Eng. Co. No. 1 have procured Winkler's celebrated 7th Regt. Band of Trenton, to play for them on the occasion of the parade of the Fire Department of this city on the 14th of next month.

Messrs. A. Winkler and E. W. McGiery, of "Harmony" steamer, Trenton, N. J., were the guests of "Gazelle" No. 1, of our city on Sunday last. The visitors enjoyed themselves by a tour of our Department's houses and an inspection of the property; expressing themselves exceedingly pleased with the fine appearance of Plainfield's fire apparatus.

We have already heard of parties preparing mottoes of welcome for the firemen's parade on the 14th of Oct. There is nothing that will aid more to make the parade a success than the decoration of residences on the line of march; and we hope to see it general and tasteful.

"Alert's" hose carriage is in the hands of L. M. French's workmen, who are repainting it, preparatory to the coming parade. There is no handsomer hose carriage in the State than that which the boys of "Alert" are so proud of being the possessors of. There is [illegible] among them.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Firemen's Relief Association held at the "Alert" Hose Co's house, next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

In the Whole History of Medicine No preparation has ever performed such marvellous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long-continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in the throat and lung disorders of children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and effects, Physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and Clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, Sept. 24, 1880.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union met at the Court House on Thursday, Sept. 24, 1880, at 2 o'clock P. M. Regular meeting.

All the members present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting bills ordered paid) and on motion approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Notice from the County Physician of the suicide of Adolph Gabriel was read.

On motion of Freeholder Doty received and placed on file.

The following communication presented by a committee appointed at a meeting of the police, and other officers and employees of the city of Elizabeth, was read:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
CITY OF ELIZABETH, N. J.,
Sept. 2, 1880.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:

A meeting of police and other officers and employees of the City of Elizabeth held on the evening of the 28th of August last, for the purpose of securing relief by an early payment on account of salaries and wages due from the city for the present year to themselves and others, appointed a committee, which committee has since named the undersigned as a sub-committee to lay the subject before your body for consideration.

If any lawful arrangement can be made under which the amount due from the City of Elizabeth to the County of Union out of the first collections of taxes for this year can be temporarily used in payment of salaries and wages, some of the relief sought for might be granted.

The undersigned in behalf of those whom they herein represent submit the matter to your honorable body trusting it may receive your favorable consideration.

PETER BONNETT,
S. D. BOWERS, } Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Roll, received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

A petition from property owners residing on Fourth street, between Bond and Pine streets, Elizabeth, asking for relief on account of the inadequate size of the culvert between Pine street and Port avenue, was read.

On motion of Freeholder Forsyth, received.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From committee on bridge over West Brook, Linden.

To the Board of Freeholders of Union County:

Your committee appointed to examine the bridge over West Brook on the road leading from Roselle to Rahway, in Linden township, near the residence of Mr. Banta, and report the necessity and probable cost of same, would respectfully report—

That they have examined the bridge and find it in a poor condition, the throat much too narrow to conduct the flow of water. We would recommend the building of a new bridge, the cost not to exceed six hundred dollars.

JOHN K. ROLL,
JOHN BALL,
GEO. W. F. RANDOLPH,
JAMES L. MILLER,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Doty received and recommendation adopted by a unanimous vote.

From Committee on Passaic Bridge, on Mt. Vernon avenue, between Union and Morris counties:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your committees appointed at the last meeting of this Board to meet with a committee of Morris county and report "as to the condition of a bridge near New Providence depot," beg leave to report.

That they met with the Freeholders of Morris, and as a joint committee made a thorough examination with Mr. A. J. Post, C. E., who made a report which is herewith submitted.

We found the bridge to be over the Passaic River, a Post and Watson combination built in 1872, 100 feet span, at least 20 feet above the bed of the river, very much in need of adjusting and paint.

On the Morris Co. side the abutment and wing walls are of the very best masonry, built in the year 1872.

Considering the height of abutment, weight of bridge, and filling back of walls, the joint committee think it should receive immediate attention, we would therefore recommend that the bridge be jacked up on the Union Co. side, the abutment and as much as necessary of the wing walls taken down and relaid of quarry stone or stone as equally as good, and that the bridge then be properly adjusted and painted, all of which is respectfully submitted.

POST & McCORD,
CIVIL ENGINEERS & CONTRACTORS,
Iron Work for Buildings and Bridges,
102 Broadway,
NEW YORK, Aug. 27, 1880.

C. W. L. Martine, Esq., Director B. of C. F., Fanwood, New Jersey:

DEAR SIR:—As requested by you I have examined the bridge over the Passaic River at New Providence, built by the Watson Manufacturing Co., and find the superstructure generally in good condition, but very much in need of painting and adjustment.

The masonry of the easterly abutment is very poor and it should be taken down and rebuilt, as it has settled and cracked so that I do not consider it safe for a very long time.

The masonry in settling has moved towards the river and crowded so hard upon the bottom chords of the bridge as to buckle the two end panels and the ones next to them.

I would recommend that when a new abutment is finished that the bridge be adjusted, and the iron, and woodwork of the trusses, be painted with two coats of paint, and the last coat of paint on the woodwork sanded. The planks in the first and second panels are rotted out and need renewing. The other woodwork is in fair condition, and with a proper attention can be made to last for ten years yet without renewal.

Very respectfully,
ANDREW J. POST, C. E.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph, received and placed on file.

From Committee on Grand street bridge, Rahway.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your Committee on Grand street bridge, Rahway, beg leave to report that the contract for superstructure was awarded to the New York Iron Bridge Co., for $2,250, they being the lowest bidder. The bridge to be an iron truss bridge, 80 pounds pressure, with factor of five for safety. The Committee, on examination, found the walls in good condition and decided with re-pointing and two new shoe stones, four feet of iron truss, no other mason work would be needed.

M. W. CROWELL,
WM. JEWELL,
GEORGE W. DOTY,
GEO. W. F. RANDOLPH,
J. T. WILCOX,
Committee.

September 24, 1880.

On motion of Freeholder Roll, received and placed on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Roll:

Whereas, The bills and vouchers for moneys paid by this Board previous to the year 1871 have never been pasted in books for safe keeping and reference, as has been the custom since the year 1871, but are filed with other papers indiscriminately and are liable to become misplaced or lost,

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Board be directed to have all such vouchers placed in books in the same manner as the bills and warrants are now kept, and so arrange reports and miscellaneous papers that they may be readily found when required.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder O'Sullivan:

Resolved, That a committee to consist of three be appointed to examine the culvert between Pine street and Port avenue on Fourth street, to see if this Board has the power and can relieve the petitioners; said committee to be members outside of this city.

On motion adopted and the following committee appointed:

Freeholders Crowell, Miller, Lenmann.

By Freeholder Briant:

Resolved, That the Committee on the line bridge between Union and Morris counties, near New Providence depot, are hereby authorized to build new abutment walls, repair wing walls and adjust iron superstructure at a cost not to exceed $1,250 to Union county.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Roll:

Resolved, That the effects of Adolph Gabriel now in possession of the County Physician, be retained by that officer until the Court appoints an administrator.

On motion adopted.

By Director Martine—Freeholder Hubbard in the Chair:

Whereas, A number of the citizen creditors of the city of Elizabeth, have this day communicated with this board, asking for relief in the way of an extension of the time fixed by law for the payment of taxes or to relinquish the right of the State and county to the first moneys collected, or to loan the city the money or credit of the county, and

Whereas, By mandamus issued against many of the cities and townships of the State, the courts have held that collectors and treasurers shall pay the first money collected to the State and county, and

Whereas, We have recently had this rule enforced in our county, and

Whereas, We are now before the courts asking for the same rule against all delinquents, and

Whereas, The new paragraph No. 19, article 1 of the amendments of 1875 to the constitution of the State, recites that "No county, city, borough, town, township or village shall hereafter give any money or property or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, etc., etc.; therefore be it

Resolved, That the statutes, our oath of office and consistency all forbid that we should take any action tending to relinquish the right of the State or county in the premises, or loan the money or credit of the county in any way, either directly or indirectly.

Freeholder Randolph moved the resolution be adopted and spread upon the minutes.

Carried by a unanimous vote.

The following bills were read and ordered paid:

W. B. Tucker, bridge, Elizabeth, 51.80; S. C. Terrill, bridge, Rahway, 12.49; W. F. Rose, bridge, Elizabeth, 15.00; Ezra Miller, bridge, Westfield, 9.75; Peter Van Pelt, bridge, Rahway, 62.50; A. B. THE PUZZLED DUTCHMAN.

I'm broken hearted Dutchman,
Vots filled mit caier und shame;
I dells you vot der drubble ish—
I doesn't know my name.

You dinks it fery vunny, eh?
Ven you der story hear
Vot vill not wonder den so mooch,
It vas so shtrange und queer.

Mein mudder had dwe liddle dwins—
Dey vas me and my brudder;
Ve looked so very mooch alike
No one knew vich from toder.

Von of der poys vas Yawcup,
Und Hans der oder's name;
But den it made no differend—
Ve both got called the same.

Vell, von of us got dead—
Yaw, Mynheer, dat is so;
But vedder Hans or Yawcup,
Mein mudder she don't know.

Und do I am in drouble,
I can't git droo mein hed
Vedder I'm Hans vot's living,
Or Yawcup vot is dead.

TRUE LOVE TESTED.

Charles Thornby had amassed a fortune as a merchant of the highest honor and strictest integrity. At the time of which we write, he had retired from active business, to enjoy the fruits of his former labor and application to business. He had been a widower for many years, and had but one child, a daughter, Helvia, who had reached her twentieth year, and on whom he lavished all the strength of his affection. She was accomplished, and possessed a more than ordinary amiability, as well as a brilliant intellect.

Surrounded as she was by wealth, moving in the first-class of society, no wonder that she was flattered, and not a few aspired to her hand. Doubtless some were attracted by her noble qualities, and it must be confessed that the fact that she was known to be the heiress expectant to a large amount of wealth, was not the least consideration that influenced many of her suitors. Up to the time of which we write, she was heart-free, content for the present to live with her father in his loneliness.

A year after the opening of our tale, the grim messenger snatched her fond father from her loved embrace. Her grief was intense, and many were the condolence she received from sympathizing friends.

She continued to reside at her old home with the housekeeper, who had presided in that capacity since her mother's death.

Among those who strove to win her affections, were some who might be denominated "fast;" who very evidently thought it would be a fine thing to have the handling of her money; others there were who were engaged in business, and, while they admired her character, thought more of the benefit they might receive from her fortune.

There was one, however, who worshipped her at a distance. He was a poor clerk, whose salary barely supplied his own wants, and those of his widowed mother. He had never expressed his feelings openly to her. He regarded her as far above him in the social scale, and often lamented that she was not as poor as himself, for then he would have courage to lay his heart at her shrine. His name was Walter Benson, they had been acquainted for a long time, and when they met, as was often the case, Miss Thornby treated him kindly, for she appreciated his good qualities, and often remarked to her friends that a young man who was so kind to his mother could not help being a good husband. This, however, was the extent of their acquaintance. He had never presumed to call upon her, and, save the language of the eyes, and the tell-tale expression of the countenance, she had no opportunity to suspect the state of his feelings.

For a year after her father's death, Helvia confined herself almost exclusively to her home, seldom going out save to church or among the afflicted and suffering of the neighborhood, where, like an angel of mercy, she scattered blessings wherever she went. At the end of that period she resumed her former social habits, and then the aspirants to her hand again gathered around her.

For more than three months she endured their attentions, and then it occurred to her that it would be best for her to know, without mistake or conjecture, the true motives that influenced their actions. She hit upon a plan that she imagined would test the matter to her satisfaction, and perhaps save her from keen disappointment in subsequent life. She confided her plans to no one save the old lawyer who had transacted her father's business for him for many years, and who approved of her motives and designs, and promised to aid her all that was needful for the purpose of furthering them.

The circle in which she moved was astonishing to see the beautiful residence in which the Thornby's had so long resided closed, and the rumor gain ground that the Thornby estate had proved insolvent from claims that had come against it from an unexpected source. To place the matter beyond all doubt, a daily paper in a few days contained the following announcement:

"We are pained to learn that the estate of the late Charles Thornby, Esq., has proved insolvent, a much larger amount of claims having come against it than can be liquidated by the property left. Mr. Thornby's daughter has relinquished all in the hands of the proper officers, and has taken her abode with a former nurse in her father's family."

Mrs. Benwood, the nurse, really supposing that her pet, as she called heroine, had been unfortunate, gave her a cordial reception to her humble home.

Helvia applied herself at sewing, and from her scanty earnings regularly paid her board. Those who professed so ardently to admire her in the days of her prosperity, deserted her, blessing their stars that this calamity had come in time to prevent their being sufferers in consequence of it. One who had proposed for her hand with the most earnest protestations of undying affection, to whom she had deferred an answer, after the news of her calamity had been made public, and she had taken her place among those who earn their bread, sent her a note, of which the following is a coppy:

"MISS HELVIA THORNBY—The change in your circumstances will make it evident to you that it will be unnecessary for you to consider the proposal made by me. As you have lost your fortune, it would be impossible for me to maintain you in the style I should desire. I shall ever remain your friend.

EDWARD SPARNING."

The reception of this note, and other circumstances, convinced Helvia of the wisdom of the course she had pursued.

But there was one true heart that worshipped her yet. When the news of our heroine's poverty came to Walter Benson's ears, hope sprung up in his path. Now pecuniarily, they were on a level, and he could tell her of the love he had so long cherished, without making himself liable to the charge of "fortune hunting."

He called on her at her humble home, and after a few visits, told her of the feelings that had filled his breast ever since his first acquaintance with her; how he had suppressed them from the fact that she occupied a much higher social position than he did; now that they were on a level of financial point of view he dared to ask her to share the vicissitudes of life with him.

To her his manly wealth and disinterested affection, uninfluenced by her misfortunes, elevated him far above the "swells" whose hollow professions could not endure the tests of adversity. So Helvia became the affianced bride of Walter Benson.

He supposed that after their marriage they would reside in the humble cottage that had been his home since his recollection. She only made one condition—that they should be married in church, and that she should be allowed to send a carriage for his mother, and that after the ceremony they should go to a place where she would have the wedding dinner provided. He expostulated, but she was firm, and assured him that she had saved enough from the wreck of her father's property to enable her to do this, and, if he would indulge her in this whim she would be perfectly willing to submit to his views in the future. She carried her point, and it was settled that this arrangement should be made.

The happy day when these two were to be pronounced man and wife. The wedding party started from the church, and great was the astonishment of the newly-made husband, to see the carriage stop befor the late residence of his bride, which was open and adorned for their reception. A sumptuous feast had been prepared, which was shared by a large number of invited guests, all of them from the humble walks of life.

After the guests had departed, and none were left but the servants, the astonished bridegroom, his mother and bride, the latter turned to her husband and said:

"It is time I made an explanation. I see that you are astonished. You will be more so when I tell you my future is unimpaired. I resorted to this ruse to test the reality of the friendship of those who, when they thought me rich, were loud in their professions of affection; of all others I have found only you true. Henceforth this is not only your home and mine, but also that of your mother. So kind a son shall not be separated from his mother."

After he had recovered from his surprise, he playfully bantered her upon obtaining him "under false pretences," but added:

"I do not think your property any objection; but it would have been happiness for me to have called you mine, had you been as poor as I supposed you to be."

The elder Mrs. Benson approached the bride, and, encircling her in her arms, said:

"Heaven bless you my dear daughter! May you be as happy as you deserve to be. Walter always was a good boy—I know he will make a good husband—and you will not find his mother ungrateful for your kind offer to give her a home with you."

The chagrin and mortification of the former aspirants to Helvia's hand, who all wish they had acted otherwise, when the whole truth was known, may be imagined.

The wedding party was managed by our heroine's friend, her father's lawyer, and managed so adroitly as to make the surprise complete. They all enjoyed themselves, and everybody was very happy. Helvia never had reason to regret that she resorted to the above related stratagem as a test for true love.

"YOU, PETER, STOP THAT!"

Once there was a very poor woman who had an only son. She did her best by him and brought him up as well as she could. Whenever he did well she praised him, but whenever he did anything she thought wrong, for instance playing marbles on Sunday, stealing apples from their neighbor's trees, teasing little girls or tying tin kettles to the cat's tail, she used to call out:

"You Peter, stop that," in a peculiarly shrill tone.

Immediately another voice, sharper and shriller than hers, would cry out:

"You Peter, stop that."

It belonged to the yellow parrot who swung in a big basket-work cage on the wall. She had learnt the speech by listening to it so often, although she was not a very accomplished parrot, and knew little else besides but "Polly wants a cracker," and "poor Polly." The boy loved his mother, but he was rather a wild, bad sort of a boy. When he was about 16 years old he left the carpenter to whom he was apprenticed and ran away to sea. However, before he went he wrote a note to his mother, telling her not to worry, that he liked the sea better than sawdust, and that he would come back with a cap full of money some day. Moreover, he told her the vessel he shipped on—The Jane.

The mother wept and prayed, as all good mothers do, while her boy was on the sea; but she believed that he was, after all, fond of her, and she expected him back, until one day she read in the paper that The Jane had gone down in mid ocean with all her crew and cargo.

Then it seemed to her that all the light of the world had been quenched. She gave herself up to misery and longed to die. Indeed, she would have prayed for death had she not feared that this would be wicked.

However death spared her, and took instead a certain cousin who had made a large fortune, and was about to be married to a pretty woman, and who was very, very anxious to live. His death made an heiress of the poor widow, and though she cared nothing for the money now she had lost her Peter, the lawyers made her come over to the reading of the will, and finally persuaded her to settle in the handsome house which was furnished for the poor dead cousin's future wife.

There she lived for several years. Meanwhile Peter, who had after all been saved from the wreck of The Jane, returned home.

He went straight to his mother's cottage. The poor woman had lived a solitary life. When she left her home she had told no one why she went. The old furniture she had sold to the junk man, and had taken nothing but her parrot with her. Poor Polly, who had brought tears to her eyes since her boy's departure by screaming out: "You, Peter, stop that!"

The neighbors who had lived near the cottage when Peter went to sea were gone. So Peter heard from a stranger "that the lady that lived in the third house died last winter," and went sadly away. Mother and son mourned each other as dead, when only a few miles—an hour's journey by rail—lay between them.

Peter had been intending to return to carpentering, and be a good son and a worthy citizen, but his mother's supposed death upset him. He fell into dissipated ways; made the acquaintance of a man of doubtful character, who was called Red Jack, and one day found himself deeper in the mire of dishonesty than he had ever intended to go.

Red Jack intended to rob a house, and confided his plans to Peter.

"It's an old woman that lives all alone," said Jack; "her servants are quite in another building. We can get in by a window I know of, and get all there is to carry off, as easy as winking. If we make a good haul, we needn't try that sort of a thing again; and what does an old woman want of much, while two fine young fellows are suffering."

At first Peter refused to listen, and reproach his new friend with having fancied he could join in such work; but finally he yielded. His part was to creep in at a window, while Red Jack, who had lamed himself in some past exploit of the sort, waited outside with a horse and cart for his appearance with the booty.

The night came. There was no moon in the sky, no stars—all was dark and gloomy. Jack drove the wagon as near to the house as he dared, and Peter crept out of it, and after some search found the house Jack had mentioned. All was dark; but Peter thought it best to make sure that no one was stirring.

Softly he crept around the garden, peeping and listening, and at last stepped upon the low back porce, upon which the window opened, through which he was to make his way. As his foot touched it a board creaked and suddenly a voice cried out in his ear:

"You, Peter, stop that."

Peter stood still as though suddenly petrified. Again came the cry:

"You, Peter, stop that."

The chisel Peter held fell from his fingers. He uttered a low groan.

"Don't do that. Don't do that. Peter, don't do that," repeated the voice.

Poor Peter fell upon his knees. He felt sure that it was a supernatural warning. Pale, trembling, miserable, he crept back to Jack, who sat in his wagon. "Help me in, Jack," he said. "I've seen a ghost. I can't go back to that house again."

Jack was superstitious, like all people of his class. He struck the horse with the whip and away they rattled through the dark village, as though Satan was after them. Daylight, however, restored Peter's senses. He ventured near the house in the afternoon and saw what he begun to think he should see his mother's great yellow parrot swinging in a cage upon the porch.

"It was Poll that called to me," thought Peter. "Some one has bought the poor bird. Well, he saved me from doing what I'd have been sorry for—for I wasn't born a thief." Then he knocked on the kitchen door, and being answered by a servant in a prim cap and apron, began as follows:

"Miss, by your leave, I'd like to know if whoever owns that parrot would like to sell her. You see, she used to belong to mother, and the old lady has gone to heaven, and I'd like—"

But there he stopped, for out of the house came rushing the old lady herself and flung herself on his neck.

"You, Peter, stop that!" screamed Polly.

But Peter could not stop crying. Bad as he had been he loved his mother. Grom that time he became an exemplary individual, though to be sure, there was no reason for his being otherwise, for he had all he needed without being dishonest. And the old lady—who never guessed what had brought her son back to her—lived happy ever after.

THE BASTILE.

The destruction of the Bastile, whose anniversary was recently grandly celebrated in Paris, has assumed, though of small importance in itself, a wholly disproportioned consequence in history because it turned the current of events at the capital in favor of the people. When the Bastile was attacked by an armed mob, infuriated by the reactionary policy of the court, the garrison was composed of but 82 invalid soldiers of the regular army, and 32 Swiss mercenaries. The negotiations of the insurgents with Delaunay, the Governor, merely caused the removal of the cannon pointing to the Faubourg St. Antoine, and had no pacifying effect on the exasperated crowd. Some members of the mob having cut the chains of the first draw bridge, a fight ensued. One of the garrison was killed, and one hundred and fifty of the people were slain and wounded; but the arrival of a part of the King's forces, who had joined the popular cause, with four field pieces, rendered further defence of no avail. Delaunay, who had been prevented from blowing the fortress into the air by firing the magazine, allowed the second draw-bridge to be lowered, and the howling, frantic populace rushed across it, killing the Governor and several of his officers on the spot. The day following, July 15, 1789, the demolition of the Bastile began, amid the thunder of cannon, the pealing of organs and roars of joy and triumph. The popular notion is that hundreds of miserable political captives were released. The fortress would not hold, and never held but 70, and on the memorable occasion only 3 unknown men and 4 forgers were delivered. The chief actors in the stirring scene were the 664 whose names are engraved on the commemorating column in the Place de la Bastile. The famous building was originally the Castle of Paris, and built at the Porte St. Antoine, by order of Charles V. (1370 82), by Hugo Aubriot, Provost of Paris, as a defence against the English. Afterward converted into a State prison, during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, its vast bulwarks and ditches were added. On each of its longer sides the Bastile had four towers, of five stories each, over which ran a galley armed with a cannon. Partly in those towers and partly in subterranean dungeons, the political prisoners were confined. The Bastile was bad enough, but its horrors have been greatly exaggerated.

WANTED TO SEE THE EDITOR.

A man on the cars was offered a newspaper. He took it, looked at the heading, and then threw it aside with disgust and remarked;

"I don't want news from that paper."

"I suppose everybody read it in those parts," I answered. "Has it been pitching into you?"

"Pitching into me? Great Cæsar! I should think it had. But you just let me meet the editor of that paper."

"You never make anything by striking an editor," I said; "better grin and bear it."

"Yes, that's all right for you to say, but just let me meet that man! I'll show him how to run a newspaper."

"What did he do?"

"Do! He did a deal. Here's how it is: I often go to Springfield in the evening and come home on the first train in the morning. Well, one night I met an old crony and we went to the music hall and the theatre. When we came out we met some friends. Of course I could not get right out, so I treated; in fact, we were having a pretty good time, when some fellow came in and tried to raise a row. In less than no time the police were in and had us. The next morning I was hauled before the court and fined $7.40. I did not care much, because I gave a false name, and I knew my wife couldn't find it out; but the very next morning I'll be eternally confused if that paper didn't have it all in, and my name too."

"Did your wife see it?"

"I should say she did."

"Did she make a fuss?"

"Fuss! Godfrey Elliot! Are you married?"—Burlington Hawkeye.

WHAT THE LADIES SAY.

All the world knows, that when a woman has once expressed a decided opinion upon any subject, the matter may be regarded as settled, and the status of the article under consideration is defined beyond possibility of dispute. Nor are these opinions often wrong. That marvelous short-hand logic, which enables the female intellect to rush to a conclusion, as if by instinct, while the slow masculine mind is still struggling with the pros and cons, is generally to be depended on; and when a woman says a thing is good, the chances are a thousand to one that it deserves her encomium.

An apt illustration of this truth is EHRICHS' FASHION QUARTERLY, of which the Fall number is before us. That over sixty thousand ladies throughout the United States should accept this magazine as their guide to Fashion and Shopping, is sufficient evidence of the estimation in which it is held by the fairer portion of the community. The ladies look at the magazine, discern its character at a glance, and hasten to subscribe while the male reader examines the pages critically, scans the illustrations, and reads the descriptions, and finally concludes the female verdict to be sound.

The Fall number opens with a choice selection of literary articles, in which entertainment is blended with instruction: lessons in dress-making, lace-making, cooking, etc. Published by EHRICH BROS., 287 to 295 Eighth Ave., New York, at 50 cents a year, or 15 cents a single copy.

3d District—MILES ROSS.

WATCHWORDS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

"The right of trial by Jury, the Habeas Corpus, the Liberty of the Press, the Freedom of Speech, the Natural Rights of Persons, and the Rights of Property must be preserved."—Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

"I will maintain that the entire freedom of thought and speech is consistent with the noblest aspirations of man and the happiest condition of his race.

"Power may destroy the forms but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword."—Letter of General Hancock, March 3, 1868.

"Military interference with elections is prohibited by law, and no soldiers will be allowed to appear at any polling places unless, as citizens of the State, they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting."—Order of General Hancock, December 18, 1867.

"Nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right.

"The great principles of American Liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and ever should be."—General Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

GOING UNDER.

There is no surer sign of a weak and sinking political cause than a resort to desperate make-shifts on the part of its advocates.

A good cause needs no other argument than honest truth. A bad one must vainly rely upon device.

That is the position of the Republican leaders at the present time. They cannot sustain the ugly public record of their candidates, Garfield and Arthur, and neither can they truthfully meet the outspoken advocacy of the Democracy for peace and prosperity—the fruits of a loyally administered Constitution and a united country.

Hence they have recourse to every imaginable expedient to keep their leaky craft afloat and make believe she is gallantly sailing onward.

The appearance of her is enough to satisfy every intelligent eye that she is fast going under. The incessant "rebel" cry of her excited crew has no other effect upon men of common sense than to disgust them, while the tattered bloody rag she carries aloft in lieu of the glorious star spangled banner of Union, plainly betokens that there is no such thing as principles on board.

The Republican party is on its last voyage.

AN ISSUE.

One of the most important questions involved in the approaching Presidential election is the restoration of national unity, or, in effect, the preservation of peace and prosperity among all the inhabitants of our far reaching and diversified land.

That is a vital issue.

A people to be nationally strong must discard sectional animosity, and that can only be secured through equity of administered law and the observance of charity and mutual respect.

The bayonet policy of Russia and Austria may suppress freedom in Poland and Hungary and make supreme such tyrannical governments as exist at St. Petersburg and Vienna.

Russia and Austria are nations.

America is a Republic of co-equal States.

Therein abides a radical difference, and it portrays the opposing aims of political parties in this country at the present day.

Leaders of the Republican party would blot out the title of Union and in its place substitute that of Nation, ruling with iron hand from centralized authority at Washington, converting States into Provinces, and making the people subject instead of sovereign.

The Democrats, swayed as they are with an abiding faith in free representative government, and venerating as they do the Constitution, demand that the Union shall be maintained as it was originally established, not for the emolument of corrupt and ambitious partisans, nor as an engine to crush liberty and manhood into lifeless forms, but as a sure protector of States and equal dispenser of blessings to all the people—North, South, East and West, and regardless of creed, condition or color.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

A SPECIMEN.

When Franklin Pierce was President, prosperous activity prevailed throughout the mercantile marine of the United States. Our white-winged fleets were on every sea, and a large and efficient naval force was needed to protect the wide expanded and valuable interests of commerce. We were at peace with foreign nations, but had practical use for a Navy, which then cost for a period of four years the sum of $44,[illegible],[illegible].

For a like term of years, when Mr. Garfield decreed appropriations in Congress and Mr. Robeson manipulated contract jobbery as Naval Secretary, and when American Commerce had been almost driven from the ocean, and peace existed, the Navy cost $94,[illegible],[illegible].

There is food for reflection in figures. They furnish the most potent of arguments.

The increase of population does not affect naval expenses like those of the army, but the decrease of merchant shipping, and continued peaceable relations with foreign powers, made an enlargement of naval expenditures, as above noted, utterly unjustifiable.

Think of the enormous difference!

Fifty millions dollars more drawn from the Treasury for Naval purposes when Garfield and Robeson held the purse strings than when the Democratic Administration of Pierce guarded the peoples' money.

And that is a specimen record throughout.

SECTIONALISM.

Senator Conkling is nothing if not sectional. His Academy of Music speech is saturated with sectionalism. From beginning to end it is an effort to embitter the North against the South by burning appeals to old sectional jealousies and hates. Why does the Senator hate the South? The civil war ended fifteen years ago. The Senator is not a weak sentimentalist. He does not cherish an unmanly, implacable hatred of a vanquished foe. He does not hate the South on account of slavery. For slavery is as dead as the lost cause. He has but one reason for hating the South, and this he does not state, for it would be the instant antidote of all that is baneful in his speech. He hates the South because her people, by a very considerable majority, are opposed to Mr. Conkling's party. Mr. Conkling chooses to regard this opposition as personal to himself, as in some sense it is. He is the bright and shining light of Republicanism. He is the exponent and oracle of Republican methods and aims. He is a standing Republican candidate for the Presidency. To-day he is, by all odds, the leading Republican of the country. The South is politically hostile to him. Therefore he hates the South with all the intensity of his nature.

How different it would all be if the South were Republican to the extent of its present Democratic majority. Then Mr. Conkling would love the South. Then he would not taunt her with a decline in population, with poverty and with ignorance. Then he would not fling in her face her misfortunes such as they are. Then he would make "the solid South" a term of praise. Then he would point to her Republican unanimity as a model for the doubtful North. Then he could not commend too warmly the political enthusiasm of all Southerners. Words would fail even him in flattering the devotion of the South to politics—if its variety were only Republican. We can imagine the eloquent Senator contrasting the profound interest taken by the South in politics—the profoundest of all by her ablest men—with the langour and indifference of the North, where our most capable citizens too often shun politics as a pestilence. But, alas, circumstances alter cases. The South is overwhelmingly Democratic. Therefore Mr. Conkling hates her, and tries to make everybody else hate her too. Cold-blooded policy harmonizes with his personal feelings. In pouring out his vials of hatred upon the South he runs no risk of losing electoral votes down there. The Republicans expect no votes from the South. They are making no contest in that field. Their only battle ground is the North. And they hope to win here by arraying a majority of Northern people against what they call a solid South. Their weapons are those brandished by Mr. Conkling in his great speech—misrepresentations, taunts, sarcasms. This is sectionalism, as cruel and unjust in its way as any that preceded the late war on either side. And it is full of dangers, as sectionalism ever is. Southern slavery has ceased to exist. But, if Northern sectionalism is to take its place as a disturbing element, the peace of the country is again threatened.

We repeat that Senator Conkling is nothing if not sectional. He is no more national than he is a statesman. He is a brilliant politician with narrow sectional views. If he were a Southerner he would make to Southern audiences red-hot speeches full of hatred of the North. He would juggle with facts and figures, and be as voluble in depreciation and sneers at the expense of the North as he now is with the South as the target of his eloquence. Mr. Conkling now pretends to fear that the South may obtain entire control of the Government. But if he were a Southerner, he could lay tremendous stress on the fact that the North has had complete possession of the Government for nearly twenty years. He could and would demand that this sectional monopoly be overthrown. He would appeal in glowing sentences to the pride and self-interest of the South, and summon her to resist the continued domination of another section. As a Southerner the Senator, with his peculiar qualifications, would shine more lustrously than as a Northerner. The fiery nature of the Southrons would respond to his invectives more readily than that of the cooler Northmen. He is the right man in the wrong place.

Suppose an accident of birth had made Mr. Conkling a Westerner. He would then have hated the East as thoroughly as he now hates the South. He would have been the very man to plead that Western movement which is fast gaining strength against Eastern interests and pretensions. The whole strain of his argument on Friday night would apply almost as well to the New England States as to the South. New England makes as little progress in population as the South. Compared with the mighty West she is weak in numbers of men. The West and not the East is the great centre of material wealth. And yet the New England States will not relinquish their desire and purpose to control, as far as they can, the policies and destinies of the nation. In this resolve New England acts up to a noble ambition. Though she may be overshadowed by the rising power of the West, she is still the prolific mother of political ideas, and she has sons with brains and energy enough to impress themselves upon the national character. So has the South.—Why should one section be denounced for ambitiously striving to make her influence felt, while another section is praised to the skies (by Eastern men like Senator Conkling) for doing the same thing? Truly, circumstances do alter cases. New England, which will read and doubtless admire the Senator's speech, may congratulate herself that he is not a Southern or a Western man using all his powers to inflame the passions of other sections against herself.

There is but one means left of putting down sectionalism wherever it lifts its head. That means can only be supplied by a Union party. There is but one Union party in this country to-day. That is the Democratic party. It is the only party which is alive and strong in all sections of the land. It has its faults, but the greatest fault of all—sectionalism—cannot be imputed to it. Its strength is more in the North than in the South. It has nearly twice as many voters here as there. In these populous Northern States it divides the votes so evenly with the Republicans that a few thousands, in many States even a few hundreds, turn the scale at every election. This is the party which, literally and truly, knows no North, no South, no East and no West, and consents to no sectional injustice it has the power to prevent!—Journal of Commerce.

HOW THE UNION SOLDIERS WILL VOTE.

In Pennsylvania alone, Hancock's native State, there are four hundred War Veteran Associations, each member of which is pledged to Hancock. In Philadelphia, on Friday night, at the very moment when these Babies in Blue were parading New York's streets, a meeting was held of citizens of that city who organized a "Republican Hancock War Veterans' Club," numbering seven hundred and sixty members, not one of whom had ever before voted the Democratic ticket, and every man of whom was an honorably discharged soldier of the United States! In Kings county the War Veterans' Association, to procure membership in which the applicant has to show his discharge from the service, numbers one thousand members. Its President is the gallant General Henry W. Slocum, and every man of the association, Republican and Democrat, is for Hancock. The latest recruit to this particular organization is a miner from Colorado, Captain A. R. Samuells, who, when he applied for admission, declared that he had always been a Republican heretofore, and produced the records showing that he had taken part in twenty-eight pitched battles of the war. Captain Noah Cochen, who organized the Boys in Blue four years ago, and is still an enthusiastic Republican, declared only a day or two since that if the people want to look for the real soldiers of the war to-day, they must look in the Democratic ranks.

In New York city, and throughout the State, in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Connecticut, the same state of things exists. Those who are closest to General Hancock and enjoy his confidence declare that the information received direct at headquarters is so encouraging that in States where the soldier vote is the practical balance of power he will undoubtedly reverse Republican victories of previous years.

It is only right and reasonable that this should be so, and the marvel to us is that the leaders of Garfield's campaign ever challenged a comparison in which any schoolboy could have told them they would be signally worsted.—N. Y. Truth.

MAINE.

The Republicans of Maine now concede a plurality to Mr. Plaisted, the anti-Garfield candidate for Governor.

He no doubt lawfully possessed such a vote when Mr Blaine presumed to announce the contrary, and would have been declared defeated, after the Louisiana Returning Board style, had the experiment promised safety.

The business of counting out has become a dangerous enterprise, as the people are determined to stop that species of fraud. They have had enough of it.

It makes but little difference whether Mr. Plaisted has a plurality or not, the moral effect of the Maine election is damaging to Mr. Garfield in other States, let his supporters twist facts as they may.

Mr. Blaine and all the Republican speakers and editors positively promised a majority for Davis ranging from 8,000 to 15,000.

They were boastingly confident.

The election has been held and Davis' majority is 0.

A State that four years ago gave Mr. Hayes 15,000 majority now gives the Republican nominee for Governor, 0.

Popular sentiment has repudiated Blaine-Garfieldism in heretofore reliable Maine.

It is a bad Republican defeat look at it as you please.

15,000 to 1876.
0 to 1880.

IS FREDERIC A. POTTS INELIGIBLE.

The eligibility of Frederic A. Potts, the Republican nominee for Governor of New Jersey, is questioned. A reporter of the Newark Register has learned that Mr. Potts is living at No. 39 East Thirty-ninth street, N. Y. city, and has resided in that city for years. The reporter has ascertained that the nominee, whose name appears in the directory, had the house on Thirty-ninth street altered to his ideas of comfort, and he occupied the dwelling at all seasons of the year, and has abandoned until now his Hunterdon County home.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

The rooms of the Democratic Association were crowded last Friday evening on the occasion of the Primary for the selection of delegates to attend the Third Congressional District Convention, held at New Brunswick last Tuesday, at which Hon. Miles Ross was nominated for that important position. There was a friendly rivalry between the adherents of different tickets for names of delegates, and a large number of votes cast. The following are the delegates chosen:—Jas. S. Vosseller, J. Rafferty, E. P. Thorn, E. G. Morse, J. H. Platt, R. M. Stover.

Hon. Miles Ross was re-nominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Third Congressional District at New Brunswick last Tuesday. During Mr. Ross's three terms of office he has faithfully served his constituents and watched over and looked after their interests and that of the State. The fact that he received the nomination again over a strong competitor, is sufficient evidence that his efforts in their behalf as a public servant are appreciated by the voters of his District. There is no reason why he should not be elected by a very large majority. He will be.

The colossal Democratic Ratification meeting and parade in New York city last night (Thursday) was the largest and most imposing affair ever before witnessed in New York. Nothing like it in grandeur and enthusiasm has been known or seen in Democratic New York. There were eleven separate meetings indoors and outdoors and over 50,000 men were in line in procession.

Hon. Augustus W. Cutler received the nomination for Congress in the Democratic Congressional Convention for the Fifth District, held last Wednesday.

Ex-Gov. Bedle of New Jersey addressed the Hancock Citizens at Chickering Hall, New York city, Wednesday night.

According to the Louisville Courier-Journal, Daniel Dougherty will make eight speeches in Indiana. John Kelly is mentioned as among the Democratic orators who will visit the State about the 1st of October, and at the big State rally in Indianapolis on the 5th of that month fifteen Union Generals—Slocum, McQuade, Butler, Cary, Morgan, Cameron, Black, Palmer, Ewing, Sigel, McClellan, Walford, Manson, Crittenden and Mossmore—will make speeches.

The City Council of Elizabeth has adopted resolutions requiring the Long Branch and Central Railroads to erect gates and place flagmen at all the crossings in the city.

The census enumerators of New Jersey are being paid for their labor. The vouchers have been drawn.

Blaine Before the Counting Out.

AUGUSTA, September 14.

To General Jas. A. Garfield, Mentor, O.:

The net results of yesterday's election, as nearly as can be stated at this hour, 3 p. m., Tuesday, is about as follows:

The Republicans have carried the First, Second and Third Congressional districts, while the Fusionists have carried the Fourth and Fifth. The Republicans have carried both branches of the Legislature by a strong majority, reaching perhaps two-thirds of each House. On the popular vote for Governor, Davis and Plaisted have each over 73,000 votes, with the probabilities in favor of Plaisted coming out a few hundred, perhaps a thousand ahead. The result is undeniably a surprise to us, and equally so to the mass of the Democratic party in Maine. Our canvass was never more accurately taken, and it showed on Wednesday last a total vote for Davis of a trifle over 76,000, with an assured majority of 4,000 as the minimum. In the four days preceding the election we lost over 3,000 votes by means well known to the managers of the national Democratic campaign and which do not call for further specification from me. The total cost is variously estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000, and the money all came from beyond the State. Such scenes were never before witnessed in Maine. J. G. BLAINE.

Blaine After the Counting Out.

AUGUSTA, Sept. 17.

To Marshall Jewell, Chairman Republican National Committee, N. Y.

We have complete returns with the exception of a few distant plantations, and I give you a summary of the result: In the election of 1879 the Republicans lacked 1,065 votes of a majority. This year we have made gains in twelve counties, held our own in two counties and in two other counties we have made slight losses. Our net gain in the whole sixteen counties is reckoned at 1,300 as a minimum, with a possible maximum of 1,600, making Governor Davis's re-election a certainty not denied by his opponents. His majority over Plaisted will probably not vary much from 200. We have chosen three-fourths of the county officers, more than two-thirds of the State Senate and a large majority of the House of Representatives, giving us complete control of the State government in all its branches. Our only regret is the failure to regain the Fourth and Fifth Congressional districts. We succeeded in reducing the majority in each case to about one-third of the Fusion majority of two years ago, but the Democratic alarm over the result in Vermont caused the application of arguments in both districts last week which we could not meet.

J. G. BLAINE.

THE ELECTION IN MAINE.

ADDRESS FROM THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

The National Democratic Committee has issued the following statement relative to the election in Maine:

HEADQUARTERS,
NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE,
NEW YORK, Sept. 17, 1880.

The latest reliable and official returns received from Maine are as follows: Returns from [illegible] towns give Plaisted 70,[illegible]; Davis, 70,[illegible]; Republican majority, [illegible]. In the same towns in 1876 the opposition vote was [illegible]; Republican, [illegible]; Republican majority, [illegible]. Republican loss in 1880, from corresponding election in 1876, [illegible]. There are [illegible] towns and plantations yet to be heard from. The relative gain in these towns, as compared with 1876, would give us at a low estimate over 1,000 Democratic majority.

The Republican manipulators in Maine are preparing to claim a majority for Davis, and are industriously trying to manipulate the returns to bear out this claim. It remains to be seen whether they propose to begin in Maine to re-inaugurate the frauds of 1876. [illegible] the Republican leaders [illegible] election, as the Republican party did Tilden's in 1876. The entire machinery for counting the vote is in the hands of the Republican Returning Board. Usually, in past years, it has only required about two days to ascertain definite results in Maine. This year all the first returns showed great Democratic gains, and it was only when the Republican manipulators have stopped the returns coming in and delayed them until they could be altered, that changes were made in favor of Davis. As an instance, the county of [illegible], which usually completes its returns in one day, was held back until after Thursday. And it is openly asserted by a former Republican leader that the returns are kept back for manipulation.

Two of the five Congressmen, Murch and Ladd, are conceded. [illegible], Democratic candidate in Blaine's district (the third), while actually elected, may be counted out by fraud by a very small majority—under one hundred.

In the Fifth District Anderson, the Democratic candidate, is practically in the same position, as the Republicans only claim a majority for Reed of ninety-three; thus showing that out of five Congressmen four Democrats were elected. This is the best criterion by which to judge the popular sentiment of the State.

Plaisted is clearly elected, and can only be defeated by a fraudulent count. The only gains shown by the Republican party, as claimed by them are in Democratic counties [illegible] telegraph and away from the lines of railways. The best evidence of the fraud proposed to be perpetrated is the fact that while the Fusion ticket shows large gains all over the State in Republican cities and counties, the Republican gain is claimed in Democratic counties.

WILLIAM H. BARNUM, Chairman.

POLITICAL CLIPPINGS.

Fall in, Democrats of New Jersey, and see how large you can make the majority.

Two-thirds of the inmates of the National Soldiers' Home at Dayton, O., will vote for Hancock.

Senator Blaine was announced to speak at New Brunswick last Wednesday evening. He failed to appear.

Marshall Swartzlander, a prominent member of the Pittsburg bar, hitherto a Republican, has come out for Hancock.

Colonel Mosby writes home from Hong Kong that he will vote as he shot—against Hancock.—Phila. Times.

Mr. Garrett Berry, of Rahway, who was a Republican, has gone over to Hancock and English. He is the City Attorney.

The Democrats of the Second Congressional district have re-nominated Mr. Hezekiah B. Smith, who is pretty sure to beat Mr. J. Hart Brewer.

A Hancock club has been organized in Deckertown, the home of Gen. Kilpatrick, with 104 members. Three lifelong Republicans publicly signed their names to the roll of membership.

In three counties of Pennsylvania—Cumberland, York and Warren—3,256 ex-soldiers have been enrolled in Hancock veteran clubs. Many of them were formerly Republicans.

The Republican Hancock and English Club of New York, has issued a call for a meeting, which is signed by 229 names of those who have heretofore acted with the Republican party. This club is intended as a nucleus for similar clubs throughout that State, a large number of which have already organized.

General Garfield providently prepared his own political epitaph on the 10th of December, 1878, nearly two years ago. In the light which arose on Monday in Maine it reads like a prophecy: "The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support."

The battle of Gettysburg was fought on the Rebel side mainly by Longstreet's troops. This eminent Confederate is now drawing the comfortable salary of $7,500 as Mr Hayes' Minister to Turkey. Meanwhile the Union soldier who won the battle of Gettysburg and saved Pennsylvania and the North from invasion, is being denounced by the Republican press as a Confederate tool and rebel sympathizer.

Republican speakers are just now very much bothered by the fact that every time they mention the name of General Hancock it is loudly cheered. This was the case with Senator Frelinghuysen at a Republican meeting at Newark, and on Wednesday night at a Republican meeting at Brooklyn, when General Hawley mentioned General Hancock's name there was so much cheering that he thought he had got into a Democratic meeting.

LOCAL POLITICS.

CAPT. JAMES M. BRADY, a son-in-law of Silas D. Herring, Esq., the great Safe man, (both residents of our city), is one of Tammany's best and ablest speakers in the interests of Hancock & English. Last Monday evening he delivered his 36th speech of the campaign at Montclair, N. J. He is an able speaker and expounds sound doctrines to his hearers.

Among those seated upon the stage of Van Deventer Hall last Monday evening, on the occasion of the Democratic meeting, were many of Plainfield's oldest and influential party men.

The handsome uniforms and gentlemanly bearing of the wearers—the Continental Legion, of Elizabeth, were the subject of unusual and received many flattering remarks from among the thousands of people which lined the sidewalks of our streets on the occasion of the Democratic Rally and parade last Monday evening.

The Hancock Veteran Association of Plainfield now numbers one hundred and fifty members, all of whom are required to give the company and regiment in which they served during the war. If they cannot show such service, applicants for admission are not accepted. By the way, are there any such organizations in the country, as "Garfield Veterans?"

Is there anything the matter with those two new Democratic banners? Any fault to find with 'em? If so, spit it out, and give the old banner a rest.

WHAT a "lively old corpse" that was which burst upon the astounded vision of the Reps. last Monday evening.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

Third Congressional District Democratic Convention.

HON. MILES ROSS RE-NOMINATED.

The Third Congressional District Democratic Convention assembled at the Opera House, New Brunswick at 12 m., on Tuesday last. The delegates representing the three Counties of the District, Union, Middlesex and Monmouth held preliminary caucuses before the appointed hour, that of Union being prolonged over an hour beyond the time set for the convening of delegates.

At 1:20 the Convention was called to order by Major Yard. A. E. Gordon took the floor at once, and nominated James E. Martine, of Union, as Temporary Chairman. Henry Long, of Monmouth, was also nominated. The viva voce vote could not be decided. Benjamin Trafford of Red Bank, was appointed Temporary Secretary and the vote was called by counties and announced—103 for Martine, to 58 for Long. Mr. Martine was declared elected.

The nomination and election of Temporary Secretaries was next in order, when the following were chosen: John C. Haight, of Monmouth, William H. Price, of Middlesex, and John W. Whalen, of Union.

As Vice Presidents, Tiffany Curtis, of Monmouth, H. H. Brown, of Middlesex, and J. T. Dunn, of Union, were elected.

It was ordered that one delegate be selected from each county as Committee on Rules and Credentials, and Permanent Organization.

Three Committees were chosen as follows:

ON RULES.
Monmouth—T. S. R. Brown.
Middlesex—Charles [illegible].
Union—George A. Bayard.

ON CREDENTIALS.
Monmouth—Samuel D. Patterson.
Middlesex—A. E. Gordon.
Union—E. A. [illegible].

ON RESOLUTIONS.
Monmouth—Samuel N. [illegible].
Middlesex—John Waldron.
Union—Col. Joseph [illegible].

ON PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.
Monmouth—Thomas Cook.
Middlesex—J. [illegible].
Union—Wm. [illegible].

It was ordered that all questions of contested seats be referred to Committee without debate.

At this point, 1:55, the Convention took a recess till 2:30.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention re-assembled at 3 P. M., half an hour after the appointed time.

The report of the Committee on Permanent Organization was as follows:

President—Henry W. Long, of Monmouth.

Vice Presidents—Pitney Curtis, of Monmouth; H. H. Brown, of Middlesex; John T. Dunn, of Union.

Secretaries—William H. Price, of Middlesex; John W. Whalen, of Union; Chas. H. Bond, of Monmouth.

The chair appointed Mr. Deshler, of Middlesex, and Mr. Paterson, of Monmouth, to conduct the President to the chair.

The Committee on Rules reported as follows:

1.—Each delegate shall be entitled to one vote on all questions before the Convention.

2.—The vote of each Township and Ward shall be cast by the Chairman of the delegation representing the same, except in case of dispute when each delegation shall have the right to cast its own vote.

3.—In all other matters this Convention shall be governed by the rules adopted for the Government of the New Jersey House of Assembly.

CHARLES [illegible].
GEO. A. BAYARD.
T. S. R. BROWN.

The rules were adopted.

The Committee on resolutions reported as follows.

Resolved, That we cordially endorse and reaffirm the resolutions adopted by the National Convention at Cincinnati.

Resolved, That we pledge our united and unqualified support to the nominees of the State Convention, and the resolutions adopted at said State Convention.

Resolved, That we further pledge our support to the nominee of this Convention.

The resolutions were adopted.

The Committee on Credentials reported that there were contested delegates. After considerable discussion the matter was amicably settled.

Nominations being called for, Monmouth announced, through Chas. Haight that out of 53 delegates of that County he had been instructed to cast 42 of them for Major W. Haseltine.

Union County presented no nomination, though Hon. John T. Dunn spoke in favor of Mr. Haseltine.

A ballot was then taken by Townships, beginning with Middlesex.

Middlesex's vote (49 delegates) was 48½ for Ross ½ for Haseltine.

Monmouth, vote (53 delegates) was:—Haseltine, 41; Ross, 11; Holmes W. Murphy, 1.

Union's vote (53 delegates) was: Haseltine, 17½; Ross, 36.

The vote in the District was as follows:

Ross	95½
Haseltine	59
Murphy	1

Mr. Haight took the floor and said that Monmouth desired to make the nomination unanimous. Which was carried.

The Convention was then addressed by Hon. Orestes Cleaveland, Col. C. M. Zulick and others.

The Republicans in Pennsylvania must be terribly frightened, judging from the desperate and disreputable tricks to which they are resorting. An example is the publication of a letter said to have been written by a Democratic Congressman saying that Democratic Congressmen are opposed to pensions. The Congressman referred to no sooner saw the alleged letter in print than he sent by telegraph a despatch in which he denounced it as "an infamous forgery." This is not the first instance in which forgery has been resorted to by the Republican leaders in this campaign. It has become a favorite weapon with them—which is not surprising considering that forgery was one of the means by which the Presidency was stolen.

The German American citizens of New York held a large meeting in that city last Friday evening, and adopted resolutions declaring that in their opinion the purity of our institutions demands the defeat of the Republican party, and the election of General Hancock.

We Can't Talk

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them, let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

[illegible] GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits.

MARRIAGES.

[illegible]—[illegible]—At [illegible], Sept. [illegible], 1880, by Rev. [illegible], Mr. R. P. [illegible], of Plainfield, and Miss [illegible], of [illegible].

DEATHS.

DUNN—In this city, Sept. [illegible], 1880, of consumption, Sarah W., wife of L. A. Dunn, aged 26 years, [illegible] months, [illegible] days.

Funeral services Friday afternoon, at half-past two o'clock, at the 7th Day Baptist church, this city. Friends and relatives are invited without further notice.

We watched her breathing through the night,
Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro.

So silently we seemed to speak,
So slowly moved about,
As we had lent her half our powers
To eke her living out.

Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied—
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died.

For when the morn came dim and sad,
And chill with early showers,
Her quiet eyelids closed—she had
Another morn than ours.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Largest Circulation of any Weekly Paper in Union County.

CIDER mills in some parts of Union county have refused to accept any more apples.

READ the Mayor's notice to owners of stages regarding licenses, during the coming County fair.

NEARLY every township in Union county has one or more Hancock & English clubs.

THE handsomest campaign banners in this city are the two flung to the breeze by the Democracy last Monday evening. They were manufactured by Edwards, of Elizabeth.

FOR Good, Old Fashion Harrison Apple Cider, we recommend our readers to Vail Bros'. cider mill at Green Brook. They make pure cider and dispose of it at a reasonable price.

THERE was a large attendance at the First Baptist church on Sunday morning last, to hear the Rev. J. H. Vincent. Dr. Ketcham, upon that day, occupied the pulpit of the Park avenue church.

CHOIR singing will be resumed in the Crescent avenue church on next Sunday morning. The organ has received a greatly needed revivification, and Summer vacations have probably done as much for the vocalists.

SELDOM in the history of Plainfield has such a crowd been seen upon the city's streets, than that of last Monday evening, on the occasion of the Democratic Rally and torch-light procession. The fact that there was no occasion for the services of the police to be called into requisition tends to show what an orderly one it was.

THE Republicans contemplate having a grand torch-light procession in our city next month, on which occasion the managers will call upon all Republicans to illuminate their residences for effect. We would urge upon the Democratic residents a similar move upon the occasion of the next political demonstration of their party.

AT Grace Church on the morning of last Sunday, its new choir for the first time rendered the vocal portion of the services. Mrs. Belle Pagels-Collier and Messrs. Cook and Titsworth were present, but Mrs. Freeman, the contralto, was unavoidably absent. We omit a more extended notice of the choir's ability until all its members may be heard together.

FIVE members of a Philadelphia Bicycle Club reached Plainfield from that city on Saturday at midnight. Leaving Philadelphia at noon, they travelled to Pennington by rail, and from thence here on their machines—stopping at Somerville for supper. The night was spent at the Mansion house, and a return by the 9:48 to Philadelphia, was made the next morning.

THE Temperance Grove meetings, which have been so successfully held through the Summer, closed for the season last Sunday, with an admirable address by Rev. Mr. Hurlbut. It is intended to continue them, for the present, in-doors, at the Warren Mission Chapel, North Plainfield, commencing next Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. A welcome is extended to all.

GEN. WM. H. Sterling, Inspector of Rifle Practice, is to be congratulated upon the success attending his efforts to make the marksmanship among our State militia something to be proud of by not only citizens of our own State, but the whole country at home and abroad. The Jersey team not only won the Inter-State match at Creedmoor, but have scored honors by their close records in other matches.

MR. WM. H. BROWER, of this city—the well-known florist at 955 Broadway, New York—was awarded the three first-class prizes at the Floral Exhibition of the N. Y. Horticultural Society now being held at the Metropolitan Hall. They consisted of $50 for table design, $25 for basket of roses, and $15 for pair of hand boquets. Upon a division of judges regarding the award for funeral design, Mr. Brower received the second premium.

WE are in receipt of a letter from friend Augustus Frazee, Plainfield's veteran package expressman, dated Decatur, Illinois. It will be remembered that a number of Mr. F's old patrons generously contributed a sum of money to defray his expenses on a vacation trip, after his nearly 30 years service in the express business. His many friends will be glad to hear that he is enjoying himself hugely, and has as yet made no political speeches.

A SON of Mr. W. L. Titsworth of East Fifth street, a child of about six years, swallowed some foreign substance yesterday (Thursday) morning, and was seized with strangulation. Physicians were immediately summoned, and Doctor E. W. South arriving first found the lad suffocating to death. He immediately took such means to relieve him as he thought wise, and as we go to press the boy is much easier although not entirely out of danger.

ONE of the most important measures to come before the next Legislature will be the municipal, or proposed bills for the government of cities, counties and townships. If such a bill should be passed many of the laws now in force will be superceded by new laws. City Councils will be compelled to remodel city governments. Freeholders will have to revise the county laws, and Township Committees will be called upon to re-systematize the affairs of the townships.

THE State Council of the Order of United American Mechanics met at Trenton last week and elected the following State officers: S. C., J. S. Smith, No. 4, New Brunswick; S. V. C., A. D. Bois, No. 60, Union Hill; S. C. S., A. J. Shinn, No. 20, Camden; Treasurer, A. Sparks, No. 7, Camden; Inductor, G. H. Ludlow, No. 30, Jersey City; Examiner, W. E. Howell, No. 75, Trenton; J. P., D. P. Mount, No. 49; Representative to the National Council for three years, J. R. Baker, No. 50, Jersey City.

ON Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, the Lottie Combination of N. Y. will play at Van Deventer Hall. The piece to be rendered is the thrilling one of "The Poor of New York," so successful when played at Niblo's Garden some time ago; add all the grand effects of the different scenes will be given in a most realistic manner. It is regretted by the advance agent of the company that the bill boards of this city are almost entirely covered, thus preventing him making the attractive show he would desire.

SECRETARY of State Kelsey has issued his annual report on Fire and Marine Insurances for 1879. There were 148 companies in the State. The New Jersey Companies represent capital stock, $4,445,830; assets, $8,794,895.12; liabilities, $6,043,472.21; surplus, $3,714,389.91; average surplus over capital, 76.77 per cent; assets, $1.45 for each dollar of liability. The report is divided into classification of assets, liabilities, income and expenditure, summary of risks, premiums and losses, exhibit of business in New Jersey, and general comments.

LIST of patents granted by the United States to citizens of this State, for the week ending Sept. 14th, and furnished for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, from the office of J. McC. Perkins, 909 L street, (just north of Patent Office, Washington, D. C. Correspondence solicited.

N. F. Andrews, assignor of ½ interest to S. Thorp, Paterson, appliance for lighting rooms; J. Beahn, Jersey City, railway switch; J. Beahn, Jersey City, railway frog; E. R. Cahoone, Newark, coach pad; E. L. Goblach, Jersey City, toy bank; L. P. Lawrence, Jersey City Heights, pipe and hose coupling; C. Potter, Plainfield, delivery apparatus for printing machines; A. K. Shomaley, Jamesburg, tent frame.

THE Republican campaign clubs of Plainfield are desirous of making capital out of the to be regretted fact that members of their organizations were struck by rotten eggs on the occasion of their parade, Thursday night the 16th. Their organs hastened to announce that it was another Democratic outrage, and that Democrats threw the missiles. The writers knew that they falsified when they made such statements. The facts are that the stale eggs were thrown by boys of Republican parentage—bad boys it is true, who would just as soon egg a Democratic as a Republican procession. The best precaution against a repetition of the outrage, would be for the parents of these youths to put them to bed before dark.

"THE Ladies of the White House," by Laura C. Holloway (of the Editorial staff of the Brooklyn Eagle), has been issued by J. W. Bradley & Co., Publishers, Philadelphia. The work is the only publication ever offered the American people, containing complete sketches of the wives of every President, from Washington to Hayes, and of the Ladies who, in one or two instances, presided over the household of the unmarried Presidents. It is sumptuously illustrated with steel portraits of the subjects of the sketches, and with wood engravings of some of the famous residences of the Chief Magistrates. The volume is an octavo size, printed on excellent paper, and bound elegantly in several styles. It is sold only by subscription.

The Somerset Co. Embezzlement.

Upon the opening of the September Term of the Somerset County Court on Tuesday last, the indictment against John V. Veghte for embezzlement, known as the John Meehan loan, was moved. The prosecutor opened the case by stating the reasons for the investigation made by experts, and the consequent discovery of the alleged misappropriation of funds by the County Collector, Mr. Veghte. The State rested at noon on Wednesday and the Hon. A. A. Clark opened for the defense. As we go to press the case is still on.

Somerset County Fair.

The eleventh annual exhibition of the Somerset County's Farmers and Manufacturers' Association, will be held on its grounds at Somerville on the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th of October. Competent Superintendents have in charge the several departments, and an unusually large amount of entries have already been received. The popularity of the fairs given by this association, claims for it great success, and it is intended to make the coming exhibition to far surpass all previous ones. During the three latter days of its continuance interesting and exciting contests of speed will take place, in which well-known trotters will contest their respective superiority. Information furnished and entries received by Wm. S. Potter, Secretary, Somerville, N. J.

"A Democratic Outrage."

According to the New York Times, on the evening of last Tuesday, Dr. M. C. Fithian, formerly of Scotch Plains and well acquainted in this city, was stabbed in the back of the head at Andover, N. J. The doctor was passing the cattle-pen near the railroad, about 9 o'clock, on his way to visit a sick child (which a strange man had requested him to do) when he was attacked by two unknown assailants, and seriously but not fatally hurt. No cause is assigned for the outrage except by the New York Times. That paper very sensibly(?) gives as the reason, that the Democrats so far outnumber the Republicans in Andover, that it has caused bad feeling among the former, and they (the Democrats) consequently assaulted Dr. Fithian because he was a Republican!!

Personals.

We regret to hear of the severe illness of Ex-Councilman E. L. Moris, who has been confined to his residence several days past from a severe attack of neuralgia of the head.

J. U. Fraley, Esq., and family, returned on Monday last from their summer tour at Long Branch.

Councilman W. R. Potts and family returned to their home in this city yesterday (Thursday) after spending the summer months at Long Branch.

He will vote the Democratic ticket just 21 years from next month. His father's name is Charley Smith. He came to the paternal residence last Tuesday. All doing well.

Beyond the Seas.

One of the most select of Plainfield audiences, consisting of the city's choicest residents and the elite of its society, gathered in the Crescent avenue church on Tuesday evening to enjoy Dr. E. P. Ketcham's one-sided chat on his "Memories of a Summer beyond the Seas." The reminiscences of the speaker took the palatable form of a social colloquy with his assembled friends; and two hours of uninterrupted pleasure, combined with much instruction, was experienced. The listeners were held interested while they visited with the traveller the many scenes he had witnessed, and shared with him the comforts, inconveniences and amusing incidents of a quite extended trip. So full of events and facts, was the discourse, that it necessitated a curtailment of its length. In consequence of which, it is earnestly and sincerely hoped by the public that Dr. Ketcham will favor it with a supplement, or at least an appendix to his admirable lecture, at some future time.

"On Deck Again!"

John H. Murray, the New England favorite, is once more in the field, this time with a new and improved circus. Murray's was for years the standard show, and himself the most popular of managers. By reason of a disastrous voyage to the West Indies he suffered financial reverses, and buried his fortune with his show in the bottom of the ocean. With true Yankee pluck he "swam out," and now comes to the surface with "colors flying, and all sails set" to enter upon a new era of prosperity and re-establish the Murray "boom." Murray always had the name of conducting first-class exhibitions, to which no man was ashamed to take his wife or sister, and now that he is again upon his feet we are promised a revival of his excellent entertainments. The new John H. Murray Circus will exhibit here on Friday, Oct. 1st, on Emily street near Somerset, North Plainfield, afternoon and evening. In the afternoon a performance extraordinary is given for the benefit of the children—the only boys' and girls' circus ever seen, with all the boys and girls in their amazing performances on the smallest of Shetland ponies. Let everybody turn out and give Honest John a bumper.

The Muhlenberg Hospital.

This institution, the foundation stone of which was laid, with appropriate ceremonies a few months since, on the site of the proposed structure, just below Plainfield avenue, on Fourth street, is now rapidly nearing completion, and will be finished as soon as the requisite sum necessary can be raised for that purpose. It is to be regretted that so valuable and necessary an institution in our city should not progress more rapidly in construction from want of aid from our citizens. The parties who first conceived the idea, and the many friends who seconded their efforts, have faithfully labored since the conception of the idea for a realization of their hopes. Some place of the kind is needed where persons disabled by accident or disease, and too poor to assist themselves, should be taken to receive necessary medical aid. The institution is not to be a tax upon our people, but will be self-sustaining from the fact that generous physicians lend their aid and assistance for the relief and benefit of said sufferers. We learn that the Association propose giving an entertainment in our city early in October for the purpose of raising funds to assist in the completion of the hospital building. We wish them success in their endeavors and are sure that a generous public will assist them in their laudable enterprise.

Union & Middlesex Co's. Fair.

The unparalled success of the First Annual Exhibition of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, has impelled its managers to offer such unusual inducements and expend such an unsparing amount of time and labor, as will undoubtedly result in a grand success upon the occasion of their second Fair at Plainfield, September 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th. Cash premiums to the amount of thousands of dollars are distributed through a list that embraces trots for all classes; athletic contests; horses for all kinds of work and purposes; cattle, thoroughbred, imported and native; poultry; grain, vegetables and fruits; farm produce; flour and meal; worsted and articles of needle work; paintings and crayon drawings; home-made bread, cake, jellies, preserves; products of the dairy; utensils of all sorts for farm use; carriages and other manufactured articles; and ornamental penmanship and drawing by public school scholars. The grounds of the Association are the most convenient in the State, and the track considered the fastest and most suitable for the purposes of speeding. Everything necessary for the comfort of the stock exhibited, will be done—the stables and pens being both light and airy—while the conveniences for visitors are unequalled.

Keeping up Their Courage.

The usual wigwam meeting of the Republican party of this city took place on Thursday evening of last week, and again did their principal speaker neglect to appear. The party's followers filled the stage, and Democrats assisted in filling the hemlock benches. Mr. John Y. Foster, of Newark, mixed his figures regarding the debt, prosperity, &c., of the country, in a way that showed his great ability as a fabricator of unsubstantiated statements. After he had finished, his hearers were possessed with a belief that the decrease in the price of gallon and the amount of the National debt, was "all on account of the Republican party," which made up the difference out of its own pocket. He neglected to state, however, that the amount stolen by that party to pass into the hands of the ring and others who held the purse-strings and shared in the appropriations, was eighty millions of dollars more than the total amount of the decrease in the National debt. Mr. Foster was followed by J. Henry Stone, of Rahway, who boomed his own little personal boom, subtly.

Upon this occasion the Lincoln Guards, of this city, paraded for the first time in their new uniform. It is undoubtedly a handsome suit, and their appearance was commendable. The singing of the Glee Club also deserved praise as far as their vocal powers were concerned; but the [illegible] of their songs were, happily, [illegible] and [illegible].

RALLY FOR HANCOCK.

Two more Banners Raised—Grand Torch-light Procession—Enthusiastic Mass Meeting—Governor Ludlow's Address—Speeches by Algernon S. Sullivan, C. Meyer Zulick, John T. Dunn, Wm. B. Maxson and James E. Martine—The Public Aroused—Great Sympathy with the Cause Displayed—The Republicans Experience a Set-back—Hancock's Victory Fore-casted.

The same spirit of quiet but effective work, with which the Democratic party of this city have conducted their share in the campaign during the past months, was shown in the overwhelmingly enthusiastic rally that occurred on Monday evening last. The plan of its opponents has been after the manner of an intensely variegated patch-work quilt. One evening a parade of the Boys in Blue would take place; the next night a review of the colored club and then a drill of the Lincoln guards. These displays (?) would be patched in between wigwam meetings. But with great tact and judgment, the Democracy slowly but surely would collect its forces, and each time it showed itself in public would far out-do the efforts of its opponents. The rally that took place on Monday evening, astonished by the crowd of sympathizers it collected and the enthusiasm it created, the party whose uninterrupted control of the city's majority has led it to believe that it had no adversaries. Early in the evening the Cornet Band marched from its headquarters to North avenue opposite the office of this paper, and to the sounds of its enlivening music the banner of the Young Men's Hancock and English Club was swung across the roadway from Vanderbeek's building to Wm. Swaim's party wall of the brick building opposite. As it was spread on the cable, colored fire and other pyrotechnics lit up the handsome faces of the Democratic candidates, and cheer after cheer was so earnestly and vigorously given that even the noise of passing trains was drowned in the earnest fervor of audible approval. After the raising, the assembled crowd was addressed from Flagg's Hotel balcony by the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson, who spoke words of gratification at the prospects of the Democracy, that found like inspiration in the minds of his listeners. The band then proceeded to the corner of Third and Liberty streets, and from across the latter was swung another banner inscribed with the names of Hancock, English and Ludlow. Here the gathering was addressed by the Hon. John T. Dunn, in one of his unexcelled political orations.

These two banners are considered to be the handsomest in the city. The one over North avenue is especially admirable; and the position it occupies, so prominently observable from the railroad and the thoroughfare most generally travelled, undoubtedly adds to its effect. The one on Liberty street is fully as attractive, and it gains by contrast with the Republican banner near it, nearly as much enviable praise as the principles of the Democracy gain by being placed side by side with the past of the Republican party.

After these two ceremonies had been performed, the Hancock Veteran Association, headed by the Band marched to the depot to receive their invited brethren from Elizabeth. The Veterans presented a fine appearance in their new uniforms, although on account of the New York parade of Thursday night, the number of suits that were ordered could not be gotten ready in time. With their efficient drum corps in front, and their gunners and cannon in the rear, it vividly recalled the old times of '61 and the years following. No one with a patriotic heart in his breast, failed to feel sincere sympathy with these old soldiers, who had fought for the Union and were going to fight for it still. A special train was engaged for the transportation of those who had been invited; and there arrived about eight o'clock, The Young Men's Democratic Centennial Legion of Elizabeth. This handsomely uniformed battalion—numbering upwards of one hundred men—was accompanied by the Zouave Band; and their magnificent appearance deserves the following mention of their suit and officers:

The uniform consists of red zouave cap, white shirt with a shield front lettered "C. L.," red zouave pants with a white stripe, white leggins, and a blue and white web belt, every man except the officers carrying the Union torch. The field, line and staff consists of twenty officers, including the captains and lieutenants of the two companies forming the battalion. The major carried a sword, captains red lanterns, lieutenants blue lanterns, non-commissioned staff green lanterns, and sergeants of companies, white lanterns. The uniform of the non-commissioned staff consists of a red cap, elaborately trimmed with gold braid, white double breasted frock coat, faced with blue, black pants with a gold stripe, and red sash around the waist—by far the handsomest campaign uniform yet paraded in this State.

The officers of the command are as follows: Major, Henry J. Stratemeyer, Jr.; Captain and Chief of Staff, Horace F. J. Drake; 1st Lieutenant and Aides, John J. Smith, Zerman Nevman and Thomas Keller; 1st Lieutenant and Adjutant, Ira J. Hall; 1st Lieutenant and Quartermaster, Frederick Forsyth; 1st Lieutenant and Paymaster, George W. Sackett; 1st Lieutenant and Assistant Surgeon, John W. Whalen; Captain and Inspector of Battalion, John A. Bagel; Captain and Judge Advocate, Frederick C. Marsh; Sergeant Major, Charles Callman; Quartermaster Sergeant, Victor E. Value; Commissary Sergeant, Wm. H. Ryan; Hospital Steward, A. B. Thompson; Color Sergeant, Robert Trembly, and Banner Sergeant, James Beatty.

The line of march followed was quite an extended one; and the procession as it passed through the principal streets of this city and North Plainfield, was continually greeted with perfect ovations in the way of cheers. Numerous residences were illuminated in honor of the occasion, among which were notable the houses of County Clerk Vosseller, E. C. Morse, and D. J. Marshall, Esq. THE CONSTITUTIONALIST building was decorated in the upper part by many colored lanterns, while in the office window was prominently observable a portrait of Gen. Hancock draped in an American flag and lighted up by a semi-circle of Japanese lamps. In the way of appropriate decorative art, nothing seen in this city for some time surpassed the tasteful and handsome, yet not flaring or gaudy, ornamentation expended about the stage in Van Deventer Hall. Those who had the matter in charge displayed great judgment and exquisite ideas of the beautiful.

AT VANDEVENTER HALL.

Meanwhile the public hall was rapidly filling with our intellectual and educated citizens of all parties; and at the hour of beginning the meeting every seat was occupied. Later, however, even the aisles were thronged with those who seemed determined to hear under any circumstances, no matter how uncomfortable was a standing seat. The meeting was called to order by James E. Martine, Esq., and the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson was chosen President. The following Vice Presidents were then selected:

Hon. Nathan Harper, Hon. Joseph W. Yates, Gen. William H. Sterling, James Clark, Esq., John Simpson, Esq., James Merritt, Esq., William H. Voorhees, Esq., Daniel J. Marshall, Esq., Samuel O. A. Murphy, Esq., Ephraim H. Depew, Esq., Jacob Manning, Esq., Henry E. Dalzell, Esq., William Swaim, Esq., Lawrence O'Neill, Esq., Walter L. Hetfield, Esq.

Secretaries—Col. B. F. Onderdonk, Richard Merritt, J. A. Demarest.

Mr. Maxson said: "Gentlemen, we are about entering upon a campaign to secure an administration for the next four years over the length and breadth of this land. From Maine—where Plaisted is not yet counted out—to Sacramento; from Florida to the extreme North, we are banded together; and although often defeated and counted out, the Democrats will never surrender. In this State we have entered the contest with an honored name at the head of our ticket. So it is my pleasure and pride to introduce to you this evening, your next Governor, the Honorable George C. Ludlow."

When the enthusiasm of the mass of people in the hall had been quieted sufficiently to allow the speaker to be heard, Mr. Ludlow addressed them eloquently as follows:

"Fellow-citizens of New Jersey, coming as I do before you a comparative stranger, I cannot but feel most sincerely grateful for the kind and courteous manner with which you have received me. We are now engaged in a contest of vital importance to the people at large—wherein that contest relates to our own State, there are a few questions that will interest you. Our friends on the other side claim to be the especial guardians of its interests, but they forget that it is the Democratic members of the Legislature that have always voted for the protection of those interests. Take men's actions instead of their words and promises. For many years past this State has been under the control of a Democratic Governor and Senate. During that time a debt of over $2,000,000 has been paid off excepting a few thousands, and the State tax entirely done away with. There is no record of a single dollar of the State's money that has ever been lost through the misdeeds of a Democrat. That same policy has been carried out by the Democratic party all over the United States. Consequently, to the citizens of a town that never is in [illegible] of debt and owes not a dollar, I feel that this policy of honesty, economy, care and prudence will appeal to them for their approbation and claim their support. It is to them, also, a matter of extreme importance that we should have a change in the administration and the government of the country. Even if for no other reason than to secure that right dear to every American citizen—a free ballot. If force and fraud is to change your and my decree, then this country is doomed to a government of violence and imposition. The contrivances of the Republican party in 1876, based upon wilful deception and trickery, were successful and they retained their power for four years longer. But their action has left in the breasts of honest thinking people a feeling of unrest and disquiet. I am well aware that the final result was the joint legislative action of both parties, but it was that arraignment that is the evil we complain of and object to. When in addition to all, the perpetrators go forth laden with offices and spoils, it is time that the people should wake up and cry—stop! This election is the time. When I remember that the candidate on the other side is one of that very electoral commission, I feel that the people will arise for Hancock the good and the brave, and show by an overwhelming vote their disapproval of that action."

One of the audience at this point arose and asked the speaker if he would please state his views on the convict labor question. Mr. Ludlow courteously responded:

"I do not know whether the gentleman has read my letter of acceptance. If he has not, I have no objection to state my views on the subject. The formation of such a system as will prevent the convicts being a greater burden upon the people than is absolutely necessary, and at the same time prohibit an unjust competition with the honest free labor of our State, I shall always hold myself in readiness to enforce."

The Plainfield Cornet Band, which occupied the orchestra, followed with inspiring national music played, in their usual excellent manner. The President then introduced the next speaker,

HON. ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN.

"Fellow-citizens," he began, "if I had not been told that I have also the honor of addressing a few of your Republican residents, I would have begun my address —'fellow Democrats'; but in the midst of all campaigns there is one thing greater than all partisanship—it is citizenship. In that spirit I shall endeavor, during the brief period I shall address you, to continue. There has been called to my mind by something your chairman said, an incident. It will be remembered that at one time during our struggle for liberty, General Taylor and his little band were slowly and steadily advancing from point to point. As they advanced they erected behind them hospitals for their sick and dying. The gallant General was challenged to surrender, by the enemy—his reply was, 'my wounded are behind me and I will never pass them alive.' In this campaign the Democracy occupy just such a position. They have their wounded behind them—a great wrong to redress. The wounds of the ballot box, that guardian of your interests and mine, must be healed; until then we will never give up. Four years ago the Republican party had already held power for sixteen years, and grown fat with plunder. Its members had become insolent and arrogant, and thought the federal offices should be handed down to their sons and other relations. At that time, when the air was full of stories of Babcock, and Belknap, and post-traderships, and whisky-rings, and Boss Shepard pavements—the people of the country came to the ballot-box and recorded their decree that the administration should change hands and that Samuel J. Tilden was their choice for President. They recorded it by a popular majority of a quarter-of-a-million, and an electoral majority of twenty-seven. And the Republican party knows it! The judgment of the Almighty will come upon them with great shame! Our outraged ballot-box is behind us and we will never surrender until protection is accorded it. Some one says, 'what has this to do with the present campaign?' Just this—the Republican party challenges us by nominating a man who not only was a member of this commission, but did more to work the plot into shape than any other one man. You remember four years ago, and that for weeks after the election all the newspapers and private telegrams stated that Louisiana had gone for Tilden as certainly as New York or New Jersey—and every one believed it. But the Republican Committee at their headquarters in New York, began to plan and plot, and among other of the contrivances they conjured up, a number of 'visiting statesmen' were sent South by Gen. Grant. One of these statesmen—James A. Garfield—called upon that political saint, Madison Wells, found out from him who were the members of the Returning Board and entered into the business of conferring with them. In the New Orleans Custom House, where the headquarters of the Board were situated, an inner room was secured by this same Garfield, where the returns were submitted to him and the affidavits set before him. He then saw that if the returns from West Feliciana and other parishes were accepted as received, Louisiana would be counted for Tilden. 'Now, gentlemen,' he said, 'you want some affidavits of a certain kind.' Witnesses were then brought to his inner room and conferred with him before being examined. After which, affidavits were made out and answers given merely to such questions as were drawn up by Mr. Garfield. (All this is a matter of record. I am not stating anything you cannot find contained in the examination.) Having got his affidavits in a shape to answer the purpose, Mr. Garfield returned to his seat in Congress. There he opposed a bill in relation to the matter that was presented, because why?—because it gave the Electoral Commission power to investigate the matter itself. We claim that those affidavits were lies. Seven voted 'aye, we will permit an examination and if fraud is proven we will give the State to Tilden.' Seven voted nay! There was one man then called upon to give the deciding vote. Remember who that man was! The man who arose to give that vote, and by it denied the right of the people to investigate fraud, was James A. Garfield. Why did he so vote? Because he was afraid to allow an examination of a plot of his own connection.

"Let us pass along to other considerations of great moment that justify our earnestness in this campaign. During the year of 1868 there was nominally a State government in the South—the people were subject to the will of the officers in command. These were ever willing to use their powers arbitrarily (always in favor of the carpet-bagger's demands) and to declare the bayonet supreme, in answer to appeals to shut the courts and suppress the newspaper that criticised. Such demands and appeals were made to Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, and it was given in that supreme hour by Providence, that there should be one wise man, one great soldier who would arise and dare to do right. He said, 'I will not listen to any appeal to make the civil law subordinate to the military. You have your laws, the courts are open, the right of free speech is yours, and the bayonet is merely to protect such rights and privileges.' You would like to have it said that everyone was pleased, but there was one in Congress who was not—that one was James A. Garfield. I do not wonder that you all hiss at the mention of his name. That action of his in endeavoring to expel Hancock from the army, will one day be considered as infamous as the attempt of Benedict Arnold to betray his country. I say, as high as Mount Blanc raises itself above the hills of New Jersey, so Hancock's statesmanship rises above that of Garfield. We find Hancock standing by the constitution and enforcing its provisions —we find Garfield attacking him for so doing."

Again the malcontent in the audience arose and with some difficulty stated that he was not satisfied with Mr. Ludlow's answer to his question, and would like to have Mr. Sullivan's ideas relating to convict labor.

"I am not your candidate for Governor," replied Mr. Sullivan; "although I wish I was. But I have certain views on the question which I will express. I am one of those who believe always in making the convict work; but in such a way as will least compete with the honest workingman."

"The man who don't advocate that is a defeated man," said the questioner.

"I do not care," continued the speaker; "I would advocate it if I was a defeated man.

"The Democratic party is the guardian of the rights of all, first, last and always. Its heritage and history is the recognition of the highest and the lowest. Though for a time, at the close of the war, the Republican party were able to poison the minds of our colored people with the belief that their enemies were the Democracy—yet I now know it to be a fact that one-third of the entire colored population, north and south, will of their own choice vote for Hancock. They say that we will overturn the prosperity of the country, and repudiate the government bonds. Will a man burn down his house with his children in it? Two hundred and fifty millions of dollars are laid up in the saving's banks of this country and by them invested in Government Bonds. The owners of those savings are laboring people and—Democrats! Trust us then to take care of our own, and conduct the affairs of the country as we always have, with justice and economy. But, my friends, if I talked as long as your kind faces and attention encouraged me to, I would talk until morning. So now, I am going to [illegible] these [illegible] for [illegible], Hancock, unless you want [illegible] speech."

The building rang with hearty applause as the speaker retired, followed by cheers for Hancock, Sullivan and Ludlow. The President then introduced

COL. C. M. ZULICK.

"Gentlemen," he began, "to attempt to tell any political truths to this audience after the speech of our friend from New York, would be like carrying coals to Newcastle. I wish our questioning friend in front had remained, for although I did not intend to refer to the convict labor question, I feel called upon to say a few words in relation. The matter was first brought up, three years ago, to the Legislature, in the form of a bill to prevent the manufacture of hats in the State Prison. The Democratic candidate for Governor voted for that bill, because he did not desire to see another industry given into the hands of the convicts that would act against the rights of the workingman. Then a bill was brought up to stop the manufacture of shoes by the convicts. If that bill had been passed a tax of $60,000 would have been placed upon the people on account of the consequent abrogation of the contracts already made. Mr. Ludlow voted against that bill—acting for the good of the people, always. A commission was formed to decide upon some industry at which the convicts could support themselves, and at the same time come into the least possible competition with the honest workingman. George C. Ludlow voted for the appointment of such a commission. But as to Mr. Potts' connection with the matter—he voted for the very law itself that gives the awarding of contracts to the State Prison, and thereby allowing the competition with other labor. The letter of acceptance of Mr. Ludlow deals with this question, thoroughly. Mr. Potts' letter evades it. There stands on the statute books of this State, to-day, the thanks of the Senate to George C. Ludlow for his faithful and impartial labors as its chairman. As to Mr. Potts—your candidate for Governor would not desire that I should say anything against him; but I will say that Mr. Potts would never have been the candidate of his party to lead it in its forlorn hope, had he not been a millionaire." This eloquent beginning was followed by a wonderfully scathing review of the false pretenses of the Republican party, its sins of omission and commission, and a dissection of its past that exposed to view the fallacy of its statements and claims. "The Republican press in 1872 branded Mr. Garfield as a liar and bribe-taker; so there is no need," said the speaker, "of my adding anything. Now the same organs claim that he is everything that is pure and good. They either lied at one time or the other."

The enthusiasm of the audience that was held suspended and in bounds, to a certain extent, for fear of losing a single word of the orators, broke forth, however, continually during the speeches; and at the close of the meeting the hall fairly shook with the sincere cheers of hearty approbation that arose from the throats of all present. Many a doubting one who had heard for the first time arguments of common sense on the leading questions of the campaign, expressed themselves as satisfied at last of the false reasoning of the Republican party, and how little it deserved support when its claim upon the people was based entirely on sectional and bloody-shirt issues. Even the Republican—who had been induced by his former party to attend the meeting and endeavor to disconcert and interrupt the speakers by his questions—came to Col. Zulick after the meeting and stated that he had been misinformed, lied to is the better term, but was now satisfied that Mr. Ludlow had acted at all times in the interest of the working people. Let us hope that the plan of the Republican party to send its emissaries to Democratic meetings, will not be discontinued on account of this converted voter. If the party in a body would attend and hear the truth just once, their majority in Plainfield would be a thing of the past—unregretted, but to be ashamed of.

While the meeting in the Hall was in progress a movable stand was stationed on Front street, from which the hundreds who could not get into the packed room were addressed by James E. Martine, Esq. and Hon. John T. Dunn. Even in spite of a slight shower that came up, the assemblage was held interested listeners to the instructive exposition of the principal features of the campaign; and the loud evidences of their agreement with the speakers' arguments were heard even in the Hall above. It is an undisputed fact that there has seldom before, upon a similar or any other occasion, been seen as many people on our streets. Their attendance plainly showed the drifting of the tide of public sentiment to the cause of Hancock and reform; and was a forecast of the overwhelming victory that he will achieve in November.

At the dismissal of the in-door and out-door gatherings, the uniformed companies gathered on 2d street, near the Mansion House, where Governor Ludlow was receiving the congratulations of his friends and supporters on his prospects. At this point the two bands serenaded that gentleman, and salutes were fired in his honor. After escorting the visitors from Elizabeth to the train, the Veterans were dismissed, the cannon housed, and everything that had been so auspiciously successful quieted down until the next time, when the further attempts of the Republicans to arouse sentiment in their favor will again be as thoroughly rendered ineffective.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The coming men of Somerset County are not far behind those who are already men, in the way of political organization and demonstration. The boys over the brook have formed a Hancock, English and Ludlow company of Light Guards numbering twenty-six. Captain George Stewart and Lieutenant John Uisinger are in command, while a very admirable drum corps march at the head. Their uniform consists of red caps and red shirts. Jacob Vochl, the treasurer, reports the finances in a flourishing condition.

A bell was recently placed in the tower of Freeman Shotwell D. D.'s church on Emily street. The cares of a congregation seem to rest lightly on the shoulders of this young pastor, and his interest in his church is unfailing.

On Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the same day and time thereafter during the coming season, will be resumed the Mother's meetings in the Warren Mission chapel. All interested in the intent and purpose of these meetings, are earnestly invited to be present.

The Hancock and English Club shows itself to be up and doing. At its regular meeting held on Wednesday evening it was decided to raise a banner and hold a mass meeting at their headquarters, Blatz's Hotel, on the evening of Wednesday the 29th inst. Henry S. Harris, Esq., their nominee for Congress, has been invited to be present and address the meeting, and other prominent speakers are also expected. The Hancock Clubs of Plainfield will probably join with their colleagues "over the brook," and participate in a torch-light procession. The Plainfield Cornet Band will furnish the music on the occasion. All are cordially invited.

The executive committee of the N. P. Hancock & English Club is composed of Messrs. Augustus Mobus, William Pangborn, Horace J. Martin, James Randolph, Charles M. Westerfield, Stephen Staats, Charles Ridgeway and George Stewart.

FIRE MATTERS.

The annual parade and inspection of the Orange Fire Department will take place this year on Monday, October 11th.

On Tuesday afternoon last, sparks from the furnace at Mr. Darius Martin's Iron and Brass Foundry, corner of Richmond and Third streets, set fire to the roof of the building inside and soon made its appearance on the outside. With the aid of a few buckets of water the flames were extinguished; some incautious person, however, gave an alarm of fire, which speedily brought the entire department out.

Some mischievous boys set fire to a quantity of corn stalks piled in close proximity to Mr. Isaac Pangborn's barn on Park avenue last Wednesday morning, and but for the fact that the fire was discovered in time and extinguished by Mr. P. and neighbors, a serious conflagration would have ensued. Such thoughtlessness on the part of boys is reprehensible and an example should be made of them when caught.

A new law compels every exempt fireman to file a certificate of his exemption in the County Clerk's office of the County wherein he served his time. Our Fire Commissioners are having printed the blank forms. Exempts should remember this fact. Here is the law:

CHAPTER CCXVII.

An act exempting firemen in cities from serving as jurors.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any person who has served or who shall have served [illegible]

[illegible]

The approaching Firemen's Parade continues to be an all absorbing topic among the members of the Department and preparations are being made by them to make the occasion, Oct. 14th, a grand one. We would again urge our citizens to assist them in making the day a gala one for Plainfield by decorating their residences and places of business with bunting and appropriate mottoes.

Niagara Eng. Co. No. 2, of Morristown, has accepted Eng. Co. No. 2's invitation to participate with them in the parade. They will dine at Miller's Hotel. Pfiffermann's Band, of Trenton, will furnish music for them.

Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1 of Morristown, will be the guests of "Alert Hose Co. No. 1," as will also Chief Hendricks and officers of the New Haven Fire Department. Mr. Crawford will cater for Alerts in Flagg's Hotel building, on North Av. They have secured the services of Voss' celebrated band, of Newark.

Winkler's Band, of Trenton has been engaged by Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1 for the parade. This Company will dine with their guests at the Mansion House.

The Plainfield Cornet Band will play for "Watrun" No. 3 boys on the occasion of the parade.

The Zephyr H. & L. boys will entertain friends, and are having their truck and ladders repainted in handsome style. Good Will Band of New Brunswick will lead their Company.

The New Jersey State Firemen's Convention was held at Paterson on Wednesday. Chief Voorhees and Mr. Hugo Weigmann attended from this city; and nearly every department in the State was represented. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Col. Bird W. Spencer, Mayor of Passaic. Vice Presidents—Charles W. Eliot, of Trenton; Cornelius W. Schuyler, of New Brunswick; Samuel E. Elfoth, of Camden; Peter McGavick, of Hoboken, and Horace S. Brown, of Newark. Secretary—George A. Allen, of Burlington. Corresponding Secretary—W. W. Slack, of Burlington. Financial Secretary—Francis Becker, of Newark. Treasurer—John McKiernan, of Paterson.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association was held in "Alert's" parlor last Monday evening and much important business transacted. All the members were present. Treasurer Shaw presented his quarterly report, which showed that the receipts from Insurance Companies from December 30 to June 30, last six months, was $162.[illegible] Relief has been afforded by the Association to two members during the last quarter to the amount of $77. A communication was received from the State Firemen's Relief Association, requesting that delegates be appointed to attend the State Convention of members of Firemen's Relief Associations, to be held at Paterson, Wednesday, Sept. 22d. The following delegates were appointed to represent the Plainfield Relief Association at the Convention—Chief Voorhees, Messrs. A. L. Force, D. W. Rogers and Hugo Wiegman, Chief Voorhees being ex-officio member of delegation. The Association is in a flourishing condition and has a snug sum to its credit, placed in good securities. An important feature of the meeting was the following amendment to the By-Laws:

The various Companies of the Plainfield Fire Department must make quarterly reports to the Association of the names of such members of their Companies whom they recognize as belonging to the Firemen's Relief Association, said list to be used by the Board of Trustees, as a guide in affording relief, and in case of any member joining the Association between the quarterly reports, his name and one quarter's dues, must be forwarded immediately to the Treasurer of the Association, and in the event of relief being given to any member who afterwards proves not to have been such, the amount of relief paid will be charged to the Company in whose said member belongs.

This amendment is an important and necessary one, and every fireman in the city should study its provisions. The Relief Association are determined that only deserving members of the Department shall receive relief at their hands. The cost of becoming a member is slight, and the one dollar per year dues is a small sum for any fireman to pay, in comparison to the benefits derived. Let every fireman read the amendment to the By-laws.

A Plainfielder among the Alps.

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE,
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND,
September 5th, 1880.

These Alpine regions are certainly charming to a weary soul, and a person who needs rest and wants to cross the Atlantic, this section beyond all others is the place to see nature in her beauty and breathe in the inspiration of God's workmanship.

The great event of the past week was my ascending the famous Glacier, which was, like going up to Vesuvius, a dangerous undertaking, but, I am happy to say, I have seen the great natural sights in Europe—the volcano and glaciers. The seven Alpine lakes are all very beautiful, my preference is Lake Maggiore, on account of its charming climate and splendid mountain surroundings. A person may spend a summer through these regions and find the cost no more than going to some of the fashionable resorts in America. My intention is to come here again, if I live long enough, and take more time, without going over so much territory as we have this summer. When we examine the map of Europe and note the places visited, it shows that we have done a great deal of sight seeing and very systematically, and thereby acquired a vast amount of valuable information.

Switzerland, as you are aware, is a Republic. Its government consists of a Federal Assembly of 135 members, (one for 20,000 population) a Council of States of 44 members (two for each Canton) a Federal Council or Executive of seven, nominated by the Assembly for three years, and under a President and Vice President elected annually, and a Judiciary nominated for three years, all seated at Bern. This Government is not unlike our own. It is a Union. Some of the Cantons or States once made an attempt to secede, like the Southern States of America. The doctrine of State Rights is known here as well as it is with us, but not deemed practicable. The other governments in Europe cannot show as much contentment among their people as do these intelligent Swiss, who are industrious, frugal and happy. Where peace prevails amid a people it gives them more time to consider their own interests and despotism has but little opportunity to prevail. The other European governments are, as it were, on a Vesuvius, likely to be plunged into war at any moment.

We leave for Paris to-morrow evening and remain in that city until the 12th or 13th, and from thence we go to London. After mingling with friends and relatives, and making one or two Liberal speeches near Birmingham, I shall embark for home on or about October 14th.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

DEAR SIRS:—Republican papers and orators declare with great solemnity that theirs is the party of free vote and fair count. Recent events however have led independent people to think that their claim is somewhat invalid. As an illustration of that party's tactics, the following will serve as an instance:

The Republican Ex. Com. of this city through its chairman, sent an agent to collect one hundred dollars from the people of Netherwood for help to save the party from impending defeat. This request was accompanied with the threat, that if Netherwood people refused to subscribe they would not be allowed a representative in the Common Council next year. Some subscribed, others more upright and independent, refused to be a party to bribery; the threat on the latter did not have the desired effect, for as one gentleman remarked—that to be without a representative the people of Netherwood would be no worse off than if they would again be afflicted with a re-election of the present board.

Full proof of the above can be furnished if desired.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

DEAR SIR:—A striking illustration of the stampede of respectable men from the Republican ranks: Mr. Henry Winship, is a member of the firm of I. B. Barnaby & Co., the largest Clothiers down East, a gentleman who has a large influence in Providence and controls over a thousand votes. He has supported the Republican party for years, but the despotism and arrogance of its leaders have alarmed him, and he now has declared for Hancock & English, stating as his reasons for such a course, that if the Republican party has another lease of power with its present leaders, there would be disastrous results. Their bitter fight at Chicago for a renewal of Grantism shows how desperate these men were. The nomination of Garfield was but a [illegible] until they would [illegible] for a more [illegible] in 1884, and [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] our Republic.

By Universal Accord,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by Physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them, and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual they are specially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild, but effectual cathartic is required. For sale by all dealers.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A HOMEOPATHIC REMEDY.

A question to which no satisfactory answer has yet been returned is how to get rid of book agents. We constantly find in the columns of those newspapers which make a point of answering all sorts of questions the earnest request, "Please give me a good receipt for book agents," but the request is never complied with. The reason is obvious. No effective receipt exists, and until one is found book agents must be endured with as much resignation as the victims can muster.

We are often cheered by reading in the rural press stories of noblemen who have killed book agents. Investigation always shows that these stories are the substance of things hoped for and not the record of actual events. It is, of course, consoling to read of the shooting of a book agent, but when we learn that the story is not true the reaction which follows is peculiarly painful. Under our present laws a householder is not allowed to protect himself by acts of violence against the man who asks him to buy books. The laws are undoubtedly bad, but until more enlightened legislation wipes them from the statute-book we cannot gratify the holiest instincts of our nature with a shotgun without suffering the legal penalty.

Many intelligent men have tried to thwart the attacks of the book agent by pretending to be unable to read, to care nothing for books, or to be suffering from weak eyes. These pretenses are in all cases unavailing. The agent is never deceived by them. The moment he perceives that an attempt is being made by his victim to escape his toils by false pretenses, his determination to succeed in his wicked purpose grows stronger than ever. Moreover, he indulges in a series of skillful insults which the man who has tried to deceive him finds it impossible to resent but under which he writhes with suppressed indignation. He feels that he has lowered himself by stooping to deception, and that he has thus given the enemy a moral advantage over him. The result is that he invariably yields to the attack and never afterward fully recovers his self-respect.

Equally futile is the assumption of deafness. Numberless men, when attacked by book agents, have fancied they could escape by feigning to be stone deaf, but the effort always fails. The book agent either calmly ignores the pretense and talks right on in his usual tone of voice, as if he regarded the attempt to deceive him as totally unworthy of his notice, or he makes a few remarks as to the ugliness, vulgarity, and intolerable stupidity of his victim, which the latter, in his assumed character as a deaf man, is compelled to hear in silence, and he then proceeds to recommend his books in a voice that can be heard for half a mile and that threatens to break all the crockery in the house. To silence the wretch at any cost then becomes absolutely necessary, and statistics show that the man who pretends to be deaf never in any circumstances escapes without buying at a larger price than the book agent ordinarily charges.

Perhaps the most promising attempt that was ever made to formulate a receipt for book agents was made by a leading homeopathic physician of this city a few months ago. He was an ardent disciple of HAHNEMANN, and held that the famous dogma "similia similibus curantur" was not only the law of medicine, but the great central law of the universe. He constantly endeavored to apply this law to every exigency, and in many cases he met with remarkable success. Years ago he successfully withstood the assaults of the Spanish beggars of Gibraltar by the help of his great homeopathic formula. When a beggar accosted him and whined a request for charity, he made the same request to the beggar in the same tone, and thus utterly discomfited him. Naturally it occurred to this physician that the same system faithfully applied to book agents would be equally successful, and he was so confident of the truth of this theory that he was really anxious to meet a book agent and in the interest of science to test his professed remedy. Last July he was visited in his own house, and out of office hours, by that most dangerous variety of book agent, a young and pretty girl. When such an agent appears, the boldest man has hitherto instantly surrendered, and there is not a case on record where a book agent of this particular species has ever been successfully resisted. The over-confident physician received the young woman with courtesy, and listened with apparent attention and with wonderful fortitude to her address. The book agent spoke for half an hour before her breath failed and the doctor was able to have his innings. He then began an eloquent speech, in which he fully admitted the truth of everything that the young woman had said, conceding that her book was one of unique merit, and that no man of any self-respect could afford to be without it. At the same time, he begged to call her attention to a book written by himself, for which he was an agent. This book—a profound and interesting work on "The Nature and Functions of the Back Hair of Women"—he urged her to buy, using all the arguments which the enemy had made use of when urging him to buy the "History of Patagonia." In spite of her efforts, the book agent could not manage to interrupt him, and he spoke for fully three-quarters of an hour before hoarseness compelled him to stop.

At this point, according to his theory, the enemy should have fled; but, to his astonishment, she returned to the attack with a smiling face. She admitted that the great work on the back hair was of absorbing interest, and announced her purpose of buying it then and there. Accordingly, she paid the reluctant physician $5 for his book, and then pointed out to him that, in the circumstances, he could not possibly refuse to buy her history, the price of which was $7. The unhappy physician was at the end of his resources. His remedy had been tried and had disastrously failed. He hurriedly bought the "History of Patagonia" and bowed the young woman out. The net result of his experiment was that by paying a bonus of $2 he had changed a really valuable book for an utterly worthless one, and had demonstrated that in the case of book agents the Hahnemann method of treatment is worse than useless.

No, there is no remedy for book agents. They are as yet as incurable as hydrophobia, and we can only hope that the progress of science will ultimately give us some method by which the greatest scourge of the human race can be successfully met and conquered. —N. Y. Times.

Young man be careful what you do or say. Keep your record clean. You may get a chance to run for President some day.

MARK TWAIN ON BLUE JAYS.

Mr. "Mark Twain's" two volumes of European travel entitled "The Tramp Abroad," contain his estimate of the blue jay. With his well-known proclivity for modesty the author presents this estimate in the words of a certain "Jim" Baker, a California miner. "There's more to a blue jay than any other creature. He has got more moods and more different kinds of feelings than any other creature; and mind you, whatever a blue jay feels he can put into language. And no mere commonplace language, either, but rattling, out and out book talk—and bristling with metaphor, too—just bristling! And as for command of language—why you never see a blue jay stuck for a word. No man ever did. They just boil out of him! And another thing I've noticed a good deal—there's no bird, or cow, or anything that uses as good grammar as a blue jay. You may say that a cat uses good grammar. Well, a cat does; but you let a cat get to pulling fur with another on a shed, nights, and you'll hear grammar that will give you the lockjaw. Ignorant people think it's the noise fighting cats make that is so aggravating, but it ain't so; it's the sickening grammar they use. Now I've never heard a jay use bad grammar but very seldom, and when they do they are ashamed as a human; they shut right down and leave.

"You may call a jay a bird. Well, so he is, in a measure—he's got feathers on him, and don't belong to church, perhaps; but otherwise he's just as much a human as you be. And I'll tell you for why. A jay's gifts and instincts and feelings and interests cover the whole ground. A jay hasn't got any more principle than a Congressman. A jay will lie, a jay will steal, a jay will deceive, a jay will betray, and, four times out of five, a jay will go back on his solemnest promise. The sacredness of an obligation is a thing which you can't cram into no blue jay's head. Now, on top of this there's another thing; a jay can outswear any gentleman in the mines. You think a cat can swear. Well, a cat can; but you give a blue jay a subject that calls for his reserve powers, and where is your cat? Don't talk to me—I know too much about this thing. And there's yet another thing; in the one little particular of scolding—just good, clean, out-and-out scolding—a blue jay can lay over anything, human or divine. Yes, sir, a jay is everything a man is. A jay can cry, a jay can laugh, a jay can feel shame, a jay can reason and plan and discuss, a jay can gossip and scandal, a jay has got a sense of humor, a jay knows when he is an ass just as well as you do—maybe better. If a jay ain't human, he'd better take in his sign, that's all."

LOOK AT THE FIGURES.

Republicans are apt to boast that it was soldiers of their party who fought for the Union and put down the Rebellion. Here are a few figures which Judge Trumbull, of Illinois desire such Republicans to read:

Official documents show that the whole number of volunteers enlisted during the war was 2,678,967. Does any sensible man suppose that the 1,866,352 persons who voted for Mr. Lincoln furnished 2,678,967 volunteers, or that his supporters alone could or did suppress a rebellion entered into, as Republicans pretend, by 2,810,501, who voted against him? Illinois in 1860 cast 172,161 votes for Lincoln electors and 160,532 for electors of Presidential candidates opposed to him. Lincoln's majority over Douglas in the State was only 11,946, and over all only 5,621, and yet Illinois sent 259,147 troops into the field. What think you, my countrymen, of a party which, to maintain itself in power, can thus belie history, and like the unworthy son of a noble ancestry, seek to cover up its corruptions and crimes by the halo which surrounds those from which it claims descent?

But I have not done with this false claim of the Republican party. I propose to-day to bury it so deep by facts and figures that only the dupes of demagogues can longer be gulled by it. The Democratic State of Missouri alone, in which Mr. Lincoln received but 17,028 votes in 1860, furnished 190,111 men to the Union army—a greater number than the Republican States of Vermont, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Kansas put together."

Here also is what a correspondent of the New York Sun, signing himself "A Republican Volunteer" says:

To the Editor of the Sun—SIR: Gen. Butler's reply to the "Solid South" yell, "My friend you have forgotten the history of your country," is an excellent one. But perhaps New England may want to forget it. Let us see what five New England States did to maintain the Union, and what five States of the "Solid South"

Here are ten loyal States. They furnished a total of 565,275 volunteers for the Union; and they cast 215,139 Republican votes. If every Republican who voted for Lincoln in these ten loyal States enlisted in the Union army, the Republicans only furnished two men to the Democrats three—215,139 Republicans to 350,136 Democrats. In ten loyal States, at least, the Republicans did not "fight the war."

A REPUBLICAN VOLUNTEER.

The following is an advertisement in a Vineland, N. J., newspaper:

"I hereby warn all persons from stealing any more of my chickens. I have had thirty-seven stolen out of forty that I was trying to raise for my own benefit. I have three left, which I propose to raise. I shall watch them all the time, and shall shoot the first man who attempts to take them. If I kill him, which I hope I may, I am prepared to take the consequences."

The Republicans are now flooding Indiana with Ben. Harrison's attempted reply to Governor Hendrick's arraignment of General Garfield's connection with the electoral fraud of the last general election.

Being compelled by the increase of business to have an assistant, I have taken in my employ Mr. A. J. Mills, a mechanical specialist, his first preceptor for five years being the celebrated Norman W. Kingsley, M. D. D. D. S., of New York city, and for six years with Dr. Kingsly of Elizabeth. I feel confident I can recommend him to my patients and the public as a competent mechanical operator in every particular. I will therefore take this method of proving to those that wish to take advantage of the lowest cost price that a first-class set of teeth can be made for, viz: for 3 months, commencing June 1st, I will make whole sets of teeth on celluloid for $10, and guarantee them to be made of the best material that can be produced. Satisfaction guaranteed in every respect. We would strive to do only first-class work, and hope by so doing at the end of 3 months to secure favor and patronage by perfection in operations, rather than by cheap competition.

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the said two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Assembly cause to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made as aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS, Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS O. COOPER, Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year;" after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and every second year thereafter;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only;" and insert in lieu thereof the following words:

"The senate meeting of January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be into two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially;"

ARTICLE IV., SECTION V., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

POETRY.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

'Tis now the hour when rays decline
From withered leaf and broken vine,
When birds fly homeward from the hill,
And leaves drop darkly on the sill,
Oh, leaves, that vernal days recall,
Why do you fall—why do you fall?

Across the roof of dusk and shade
The tawny elves disport and fade;
While whispers, swathed in love's command,
Would lure me hence to fairy land.
Oh, leaves, that once old friends recall,
Why do you fall—why do you fall?

The moaning winds bring thoughts to me
As lonely as the leafless tree;
Like autumn leaves, my day is past,
And pathless night is overcast.
Oh, leaves, that life's proud hopes recall,
Why do you fall—why do you fall?

I know, alas!—now that I am old—
To me the world is strange and cold,
What higher joys it will renew
To join my friends beyond the blue!
Oh, leaves, that lesson friends recall,
Why do you fall—why do you fall?

Come, silent death, and take your toll,
For it is something to be free—
An element of sky and sea
In all my soul's eternity.
Oh, leaves, that dreams of heaven recall,
Why do you fall—why do you fall?

Oh, joys of youth and tears of age,
There never yet was priest or sage
That could return without regret
To where his youth and manhood met.
Sleeping on my head the dead leaves fall,
And the winds whisper—"God is all."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SAVED FROM DEATH.

One of two young men came out of the Academy of Music when the opera was over, and lingered in the lobby to watch the passing of the crowd. Young Fred Saulter came up to them while putting his lorgnette in his case.

"Nice house, eh?" he said, languidly. "Very well dressed. See Fanny Swan? Wretched taste for young girls to wear diamonds! What d'ye think of the new tenor, eh? Miserable, I say."

The older man answered him civilly and walked on, leaving him with some lads of his own age.

"What would Miss Swan say if she heard the cub criticizing her?" said Dr. Pomeroy. "The most insufferable creature in the world to me is a conceited boy, assuming the tone of a man, when he has not yet proved his right to be alive."

"I thought young Saulter had money," said one of the party. "He drives a fine horse, wears clothes made by a better tailor than I can afford, and lunches at the best restaurant."

"Money!" said the doctor, angrily. "Why, his father is head book-keeper for Smith & Son with a family of six. He strained every nerve to educate this boy, who now looks upon every practical way of earning his living as plebian. I'll warrant you that the fellow never has twenty cents in his pocket of his own earning. His restaurant and livery bills come into his poor old father at the end of the month."

Meanwhile young Saulter stood complacently twirling his opera hat and watching the pretty girls as they passed. He caught a glimpse of his dapper little figure in a mirror—the waxed mustache, lavender gloves, wired roses in his buttonhole, and looked pityingly after the doctor and his friends.

"How those fellows must envy us!" he said. "Wine, with life in its sparkle and dregs, eh? Oh, by the way, I saw a curious thing to-day. Dick Knight—you remember Knight in our class, who took the scientific course to fit him for a civil engineer? Well it appears that, times being so hard, he could find no proper work to do, so he has taken to improper. Instead of laying by, as I have done, waiting quietly for an opening for an educated man to step into, he actually—is—I'm ashamed to tell it."

"What? What is he?" asked his listeners.

"Driving an engine on the Central road!—fact! I saw him all grimy with smoke in his little caboose to-day. 'Good heavens!' I said 'Knight, are you mad?'"

"'Not mad enough to starve,' he said, laughing."

"I asked him why his father did not support him and keep him from such degradation?" Then he was mad.

"Does you think I, with my big, strong body, will be a burden on an old man?" he said, and began to talk nonsense about laziness being degrading; that no man was ever degraded by honest work, with more of the same sort of bosh, all very ridiculous and very disgraceful. You'll see him to-night if you'll take the 11 p. m. train."

"Tut! tut!" the lads said, and "Poor Knight, he was a good fellow!" precisely as if he were dead.

Indeed, from the light and brilliancy of the scene about them—the music, the beautiful, low-voiced women, themselves daintily attired, that gay and happy part of the world—there was a gulf-like death to the grimy engine-driver in the dark depot—a gulf which none but a madman, they thought, would willingly cross.

They sauntered out of the opera house, and a few minutes before 11 reached the depot, in time for the train that ran off to the suburban town where they lived.

"There he is!" whispered Saulter. "He took our train out; but the engine is not put to it."

The engine was on a siding, puffing and spitting little jets of steam, and Dick Knight, a tall, manly young fellow, was coming at the moment from the Superintendent's room. He caught sight of his old classmates, laughed, hesitated and raised his hand to his hat.

"Going to speak to him, hey?" said little Billy McGee, anxiously.

The young men grew red and embarrassed. Some of them nodded to Knight awkwardly, and seemed inclined to go and meet him.

"I say no!" said Saulter, peremptorily. "If he chooses to leave the companionship of gentlemen, I shall not follow him. I talked to him! I talk to mechanics and that sort of people who never had a chance to be anything better, but Knight is a social suicide, sir!"

Knight saw that the young men wished to avoid him, and turned aside with a bow and heightened color, while they hurried into the train.

It was just five minutes until the time of starting.

The train of passenger cars was on the main track (the engine still being detached), and the people were hurrying in, most of them coming direct from the theatres and other places of amusement. Inside the cars and in the depot there was a great deal of jest and gayety between acquaintances meeting on their way home, the train being a local one and running only through suburban villages.

Just then, a short distance up the track, there was a hiss and a cry, and a voice shrieked out in horror: "A runaway train on the main track! Get off the cars! out of the cars!"

[illegible] the purpose of taking it into the freight depot. By some accident, before it had left the main passenger track, the man had stumbled as he was at his work, and had fallen nearly upon the ground. Half stunned he had jumpt up, but could not catch the moving engine, which was gaining speed every second.

It so happened that the switch-tender through fright or some unexplained cause, did not move the switch to run the train off the main track, and now the huge machine, with its train behind, rushing toward the train in the depot with a speed that promised fatal disaster.

The new officials who were near had time but to gasp with horror. At the moment when the cry of danger was shrieked out upon the night, Dick Knight was attaching his engine to the passenger train. From the cars and platform rose a yell of frantic terror. Death seemed rushing upon the people, who had no time to get out of the cars before the driving train would be upon [illegible]

The officials in the depot watched Knight with blanched faces.

"He'll be crushed to atoms!" muttered one stout old man, standing by Dr. Pomeroy.

But Dick had put up steam upon his engine. Apparently he did not think of leaving his post. There he stood with his hand on the lever, calm and determined.

His huge machine sprang forward. It met the coming locomotive with a crash that threw both monsters upward, as if they had risen to wrestle and throw each other.

Then Dick's engine was thrown one side but the force of the runaway train was overcome, and the machinery of the engine so injured that all movement was stopped. Dick was hurled, senseless, several feet from the place of collision.

The stout old man and Dr. Pomeroy, with all other men in the depot, ran to Dick, picked him up and carried him into the washing-room, where he was left with the physicians.

"Well, well", said the old man impatiently, as Dr. Pomeroy came out, how is he? will he live?"

"I think so. God forbid that I should have to take him home to his old father!"

"You know him then? Who is he? Why, do you know what I owe him?" and his voice broke. "My girl is on the train."

Dr. Pomeroy told Knight's story, briefly informing the old gentleman that he was thoroughly educated, but he looked upon any work as better than dependent idleness.

"He's the true grit sir," was the animated reply. "There's no work so humble that he cannot show the best qualities of manhood in it, as we have seen to-night. It is not the daring courage I approve of in him so much as the presence of mind, the keen eye to see, what to do and how to do it. Request Mr. Knight, if you please, to call on me at 10 to-morrow," he said to the station master."

"Who is that?" asked Fred Saulter, breathlessly, of the official.

"The President of the road. Dick Knight if he lives, has an open road to fortune now, and he deserves it."

Fred Saulter crept into the car to go home. His lavender gloves were soiled, and his wire rose in his button-hole was falling to pieces with a sickly, decayed smell. Life itself was sickly and decayed, he thought, with a yawn, and he threw the withered rose out of the window. Yes; and to all conceited effeminate natures like his, it is likely to prove what Saulter's imagination pictured it that night.

JOURNALISTS IN OFFICE.

A few weeks ago it was announced that John Lemoinne and M. Tible, two writers on the Journal des Débats—one of the best known and most influential Paris newspapers—had been appointed to serve France as diplomats abroad. M. Lemoinne was chosen to be minister to Switzerland, and M. Tible to Constantinople. About the same time M. Leon Say, formerly a journalist, but now one of the most eminent living French statesmen, was sent as French ambassador to London.

It was somewhat remarkable that two men should be selected at the same time, from the same newspaper sanctum, to fill offices so honorable; but the trust was in each case fully justified by their character and ability.

We hear a great deal said in these days about the "power of the press." That power, however, is rarely exaggerated in the praises awarded to it. It is felt everywhere, through every department of public and private life. It carries truth—and too often error—into the remotest corners of the earth.

Those who control this mighty engine are, in one sense, the rulers of men. They shape opinions on every class of subjects; they promote legislation; they advance men to positions of influence and honor, or prevent them from reaching such positions; they penetrate into the most secret movements of statesmanship and even into the privacies of domestic life. The eyes of the press are ever sleepless and ever watchful; nor can any party, class, or even individual, hope to remain entirely concealed from their keen scrutiny.

The journalist, therefore, who makes his mark by his writings in the press, is always in the line of public advancement. His very occupation—the study and the shaping of public opinion in public matters—is a good training for him, as a candidate for office; while the influence he wields, by reason of his pen, and the power of the press to which he is attached, give him specially good chances to obtain political positions.

So it is that we find, especially in more recent years, that journalism has been the stepping-stone of many an ambitious young man from obscurity to political eminence. In France this has been notably the case. The greatest statesman that France has produced during the present century, he who served her better than any of her most brilliant military chieftains—Adolphe Thiers—won his early reputation as a newspaper writer, and passed almost directly from the sanctum to the cabinet. Victor Hugo's first entrance into politics was through the narrow staircase of the editor's office; and Louis Blanc, now the leader of the extreme Republicans, who was a minister thirty years ago, became first noted on account of his articles in the radical papers of his youth. The same may be said of Esquiros, Pelletan, Paul de Cassagnac, and other French political characters of the present day.

The English have been most chary in bestowing political honors on journalists. But they have lately been more free than formerly to recognize editorial talent. John Walter, the editor of the Times, has twice been elected a member of parliament; Henry Labouchere, editor of Truth, has just been chosen to the same trust; and Charles Dilke, long the active editor of the Athenæum, has become a member of the new liberal ministry, and bids fair some day to be prime minister.

In the United States many journalists have been honored by public positions. Horace Greeley, Erastus Brooks, Henry J. Raymond, and many other editors, have sat in Congress during the past thirty years. John Bigelow, a former writer on the New York Times, was for some time our minister to France; and Whitelaw Reid, now editor of the Tribune, has been offered, but declined, the mission to England.

The journalists who have thus served in high political trusts have, in nearly every instance, justified their promotion, by well fulfilling the duties imposed upon them; and it is likely that, as in the future, the press still continues to wax in power, editors and writers will continue to enjoy political honors won by the labors of their brains and pens.—Youth's Companion.

DANDIES.

PHASES OF SOCIAL AND LITERARY DANDYISM.

To be a dandy is to outrage the vanity of everyone who has not the energy to be wakefully attentive to details of deportment and costume. The great dandies of old days, Brummell, Lauzun and the rest, were everywhere welcomed, because they made themselves disagreeable to so many people. There is a kind of popularity which is acquired by an attitude provokingly unpopular. Men and women are attracted by the courage which despises and disregards their feelings. People whose minute perceptions and sense of their own merits make them detested, become notorious, and consequently are sought after. A sage might say to aspiring boyhood, "Young man, be a puppy." In this respect, as in others more important, the prizes of the world go to the impudent. Society truckles to people who can consistently display their superiority. The very magnitude of their insolence and the calmness of their importunity excite curiosity and welcome analysis. People are anxious to judge for themselves as to whether a conspicuously conceited fellow is in earnest, and a supreme fool, or whether he is quietly playing a part. Thus the eccentricity of imperturbable vanity which declares itself in peculiarity of dress and manner, is rather a good introduction into society. A famous living statesman was remarkable for his canes and waistcoat even before he was admired, or feared for his wit or eloquence. Dandyism was to him only a stepping stone, as it usually is to young people of high ambition and real strength of character. They learn very early in life that to be remarked is the first thing necessary for success, and social success is of course more readily attained than literary or political notoriety, and may lead on to those higher prizes. It would probably be a mistake to suppose that "the higher dandyism" is entirely a matter of speculation. The most distinguished dandies in the history of society have been men of great power and ambition disguised as fops. They have thus disguised themselves, not only because the distinction gained by impertinent perfection of dress was necessary to their projects, but because they could not do anything by halves, and because they were supremely vain. Vanity, a quality much decried, is really necessary for some sorts of success. Without vanity there could scarcely be any ambition.

A young man is never more certain of social success than at the moment when most other young men never mention him without saying that they "would like to kick him." As Thackery observed in the case of Pendennis, that desire is the result of envy, and the conscious humiliation awakened in manly bosoms. To provoke people so much is a token of superiority and a prize, of nonchalance. Nor is social dandyism alone which thus irritates the rabble of decent fellows who have neither the vanity, nor the impudence, nor the strength of resolution to win distinction. Literary dandyism is also excessively annoying to the rugged hodmen of letters, the rapid picturesque writers, the half or quarter educated persons who crowd the press, and carry their farrago of ill-assorted observations to an uncritical public. These industrious persons detest the literary dandy, the man who minces his periods and regards the cadence of its sentences, and shuns stock illustrations and old quotations, as the social dandy avoids dirty gloves and clumsy boots. This antagonism naturally breeds more excess in literary dandyism. Both parties are hardened in their ways; the rough-and-ready pressman becomes careless even of grammar, and trots out his quotations from Macaulay's essays more vigorously than of old. The prose of the exquisite begins to die away in cromatic nonsense, and his great genius tires itself to death in hunting for rare exotic adjectives.—London Saturday Review.

A "FRIENDLY" DEBATE ON POLITICS.

Grandfather Lickshingle and Deacon Eadspinner, two patriarchs in the community, were walking down the street one day last week. It was remarked that two such venerable men were seldom seen together, and people raised their hats to them as they passed along and spoke to them reverently.

"There's entirely too much bitterness in this campaign, Deacon," said Mr. Lickshingle, "and I regret it exceedingly. Now, when we was young men an' took an interest in politics, we had none of this 'ere everlastin' cathawlin'."

"That's a fact, Deacon," said old Lickshingle, "but between you an' me I never thought much of Jackson."

"He was a mighty good man, Lickshingle."

"He was small potatoes compared to some men we have now, Deacon."

"Who do you mean?" demanded the Deacon.

"Well, there is Garfield," said Lickshingle.

"Garfield be hanged! You know well enough, Lickshingle, that he couldn't hev been 'lected hog-reeve in a hill-town in Jackson's day."

"He's a darned sight better than old Hancock!"

"Go slow, Lickshingle, go slow!" said the Deacon, somewhat agitated.

"Oh, I know what I'm talking about," retorted Lickshingle, as he stabbed the pavement spitefully with his hickory cane. "Hancock's a [illegible], that's what he is."

"Ah! what's Garfield? Great guns! what's Garfield? Didn't he lay a cheap [illegible] sort of a pavement around the Capitol and charge the government a million dollars for it?" and the Deacon's eyes blazed with indignation.

"See here, Deacon, look at your man Hancock's letter to Sherman. Didn't he try to blow up Washington with glycerine? Say, didn't he? Oh, I read the papers, old man, an' know what's goin' on, I do."

"Hancock's a good and pure man. An' didn't he fight like a bull dog in the war of the rebellion? Where was Garfield skulking in the time of disaster? In the [illegible], by thunder, in [illegible]?"

"What was Hancock doin' with a stiletto in his boot the night Lincoln was murdered? Answer me that! If Booth had failed, this Hancock was ready to finish the job. Don't talk to me! Don't talk to me!"

"It's a lie," howled the Deacon, as he whirled around and faced Lickshingle savagely.

"It's as true as holy writ, an' any man's a liar that says so," retorted Lickshingle, too much wrought up to be particular as to his phraseology.

"You're a bald-headed old scoundrel," yelled the Deacon.

"You're an old leper, an' I can wipe the ground with you," howled Lickshingle, grasping his cane and advancing.

Friends jumped in and the two furious old men were dragged away in opposite directions. The deacon squirmed around in the arms of his captors, shook his cane at Lickshingle, and hissed:

"Your man Garfield would never have got into the army if he hadn't been drafted, and he wouldn't went then only he thought he'd be able to desert—the ornery son of a gun!"—Petroleum World.

A LUCKLESS TRAMP.

Some time ago a tramp got into the firebox of a stationary engine that was being shipped on a flat car to the Pacific coast from Denver. By some freak of misfortune to him a careful brakeman closed the furnace door on him, and the solitary pilgrim was alone with his conscience and a few friends that had come along to represent the National Bug Bureau.

At first he thought it a joke, and he laughed a smothered hysterical laugh, but as the hours dragged on and he didn't know whether it was day or night or whether it was the Fourth of July or eternity, he concluded to attract the attention of the outside world, so he pounded on the inside of his cage till his arms ached. He might as well have tried to get out of a fire and burglar proof safe with a corkscrew.

One day, through curosity, a railroad boy opened the door of the engine furnace and looked in. The broad sole of an old boot was turned up at the door, and the breakman took hold of it and snatched it out. It was followed by an attenuated piece of humanity, that rattled around on the car like an old umbrella.

The bystanders reviewed him and asked him if he didn't feel hungry. He said he did feel a kind of goneness in the gastric regions.

An old man, who was then acting treasurer of the Irish Relief fund, took the job of filling him up. That is the reason why Ireland missed the beneficial effects of the relief fund for several months, at a time when she needed it worst.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

The defects of the American girl may be done away with by giving less prominence to the purely intellectual or purely practical side of her education. For while one class of men are trying to solve the problems of life by educating women intellectually, there is another class which is shouting for education in domestic matters. While the professors at Hartford are rejoicing over some girl who can take their philosophies or their mathematics, the newspaper editor sings the praises of her who can roast a turkey, bake bread, or make her own dresses. Neither gives the poor girl any chance to exist, but only to work, with either hand or brain. No one says to her: "You are not only yourself, but possibly the future mother of other beings. Do not, therefore, allow yourself to be driven by either school of apostles beyond what you may do easily, comfortably or pleasurably. The healthy balance of your nervous system is far more important to you and your future family relations than all the mathematics or dress-making, or even roasting of turkeys. Occupy yourself steadfastly, but without strain, without hurry, and without emulation. As the apostle said (and it must have been meant expressly for American girls) 'avoid emulation.' Find out first what you can do best, and even if it doesn't come up to somebody else's standard, learn to content yourself with that."—Atlantic Monthly.

329.

The Garfielders in an Indiana village were recently startled at seeing chalked on doors, gate posts, fences, boxes and barrels the dread numbers

329.

They knew what the figures meant. Credit Mobilier, Oakes Ames, and that odd $329 loan came before them like a legion of ghosts.

They were fearfully excited.

Soon a gang armed with buckets, brooms and brushes were at work eradicating the terrible combination 329.

Order reigned, and they fondly supposed the record was forever blotted out.

Alas!

Ere long again appeared, more conspicuous and wide expanded than before, the hateful 329.

Then they madder grew, harder scrubbed, and wagged not saintly tongues.

At last accounts the strange device was cropping out all over the Hoosier State—329.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is. We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

BULLDOZING A PREACHER.

A clergyman certainly possesses the free privilege of entertaining such political opinions as he thinks proper and of appropriately expressing them. No man has any rightful authority to interpose objections and no honorable man will. Religion condemns the preaching of politics from the pulpit, and we know of nothing more detrimental to personal influence and usefulness than to exchange the sacred desk for the political rostrum.

A Baptist minister living near Utica, New York, the home of Sectionalist Conkling, having been shamefully "bulldozed," made public the following letter:

UNADILLA FORKS, N. Y., September 8, 1880.
To the Editor of the Utica Observer:

As is known to everyone I trust by this time, I have made up my mind to renounce the Republican party and vote a straight Democratic ticket. As a minister of the Gospel my reasons should be known to all. I consider Mr. Garfield a tainted man, to draw it mildly, and Mr. Hancock an honest man. Again, I believe the country is menaced in the hands of hereditary office-holders, grown up under twenty years of [illegible] rule. I have expressed my opinion once, but never in the pulpit. I spoke some simple verses which I trust embodied in plain language my views. For this I have been threatened in public and private. I have been driven from my regular duties, and the mails have been flooded with anonymous and obscene letters, pictures and postal cards. I ask now, in all fairness and sincerity, if this had occurred in Louisiana would it not be called bulldozing?

Again, I would like to ask if this is the Christian Republican party which I fought three years for to keep in power? Is this the moral reform I used to shout for in my halcyon patriotic days? If my verses were too pungent I am sorry, but as they were truthful I will not retract one word. I never held an office in the gift of the people, nor ever expect or desire it, but I do expect such treatment from Democrats or Republicans as one gentleman or Christian expects from another. I inclose you a postal card from a brother minister, and [illegible] in publishing this, as it was sent on a postal card, for the convenience of postal clerks or any wishing to read it.

Yours, A. T. WORDEN.

That is the right kind of talk, and as Mr. Worden's parishioners stand by him, Messrs. Conkling and Company won't realize any profit from their vindictive hostility. They woke up the wrong passenger.

HANCOCK AND UNION.

Nearly twenty years ago the thunder guns of Beauregard opened fire upon the old flag as it waved in sovereignty over the walls of Fort Sumpter. The news of that hostile act thrilled like an electric shock the men of the North, who, irrespective of political names, sprang to arms and in battle array marched Southward. So began the war of 1861 between the North and the South, and for what purpose was it commenced on the part of the Federal Government? It is an important question even at this late day. We will answer it in the exact language of Congress as adopted in July of that year: "Resolved, That this war is not waged on our part in any spirit of oppression, nor for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, nor for the purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of those States, but to maintain and defend the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality and rights of the several States unimpaired; and that as soon as these objects are accomplished the war ought to cease."

That was the official declaration of war. For that avowed purpose, and that alone, fighting men were enlisted, officers commissioned, regiments mustered into active service and money raised. For the accomplishment of that end the war was waged and finally ended by the surrender of Lee to Grant, followed at once by the peaceable dispersion of the entire Southern soldiery to their homes, and the total abandonment of the Confederacy as a lost cause. On the 2d of April, 1866, the President of the United States formally proclaimed the existence of peace throughout the entire Union and that all the States "were equals as to political rights, immunities, dignity and power."

Out of the war grew certain amendments to the Constitution, the prohibition of slavery, the granting of negro suffrage, and the positive repudiation of all disloyal claims and debts. So stands the Constitution to-day, and as amended, it is loyally obeyed by the people of every Southern State. There is no evidence whatever, let opponents assert what they may for partisan effect, that the South, either within its respective States or through representatives in Congress, has, since the war terminated, shown aught else than honest allegiance to the Constitution and Union. The Southern people have local interests to care for and so have the people of New Jersey and California. They have the undisputable right to think and vote as they please, and if such be contrary to the political ideas of Mr. Conkling, it is American citizenship nevertheless.

Now, fifteen years since hostilities entirely ceased between the North and South, a stranger to the true history of our country, hearing what Republican orators say and reading what Republican editors write, might reasonably conclude that the war was still raging and secession on the point of becoming victorious.

The leaders of the Republican party know well that their constant defamation of the South is partisan falsity from beginning to end, but, however disparaging to common intelligence, it serves to keep bitterness alive among unthinking followers at the North, and therefore pays better, politically, they think, than substantial facts.

It is time truth dominated falsehood, charity displaced hate, and the unwarranted stigma of rebel ceased to be flaunted against citizens who have long ago atoned for the crime of rebellion, and are striving to live loyally and advance the welfare of their country and our country.

The people are becoming more and more disgusted with the sectional animosity of political Republicanism. Popular feeling yearns for Peace and its blessings, not for War and its bloody memories.

The good of all, irrespective of class, condition, nativity or color, calls for the supremacy of confidence and brotherly kindness between the North and the South. That is the richest boon possible to confer upon our country, and it can only be attained through the election as President, of the patriotic

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

WORDS OF TRUTH.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, the eminent New York lawyer, says:

The perpetuation of our institutions as they have been delivered to us from the fathers is imperilled by the predominance of the Republican party, by which I mean, not the Republican party of old, but the party of to-day, which, however respectable may be many of the followers, must be judged by its leaders.

These Republicans and the Democrats are as wide as the poles asunder.

The Republicans hold at this hour the Presidential office by a fraud, which they would have us forgive and forget, but which we shall continue to remember and denounce as an unpardonable sin against the government of the people.

The Republicans, sneer at State rights, because the think, as is to be presumed, that the States have no rights, but only privileges which the United States may at pleasure annul.

The Democrats insist that the States are as indestructible as the United States, for while there might be States without United States, there cannot be United States without States, and if the latter disappear the former must disappear also.

The Republican administration is punishing State officers for violating State laws.

The Democrats insist that the States are masters of their own servants, and that the Union has as much as it can do to punish its own delinquents.

The Republicans enacted that a debt payable in gold and silver might nevertheless be paid in depreciated paper, then prostituted the judicial office to maintain the enactment, and now boast that they have raised the currency to the coin of the Constitution.

They have crippled our foreign trade and driven a great part of our shipping from the sea.

They are upbraiding the South for being solid in defence of the rights which they forced it to resume.

They are now seeking to supplement the war of arms, ended fifteen years ago, with a war of hate, of crimination and of proscription, social and political.

It is high time that the Government were taken altogether out of their hands.

GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN, New Jersey's distinguished Governor, says:

What does Democratic success mean?

It means a decided and lasting check to those pernicious doctrines of centralization and the falsely so-called "Strong Government," of which we have heard so much.

It means a return to that reverence and respect for the Constitution so necessary to secure the permanence of our institutions.

It means the impossibility of the Government of "one man" for generations to come.

It means that from the St. Lawrence to the Rio Grande, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, we shall once more—nay, more than ever before—be a united people, all—South and North, West and East—loving our Government and flag.

It means that national legislation shall be in the interest of all the people—not for the benefit of particular sections or classes.

It means that economy shall once more prevail and taxation be reduced to the narrowest limits compatible with the efficiency of the Government and the maintenance of our honor at home and abroad.

It means that our trade shall again revive and our commercial marine once more show our flag on every sea and carry our products and manufactures to every port.

It means that honest money shall be our currency.

It will show that the great Democratic party, who have maintained their opinions and organization through long years of adversity, will, when called to power, so conduct themselves as to falsify all the malevolent predictions of their enemies, and increase once more the lustre of the American name, so tarnished of late years by the misconduct of too many in power.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

The dawn of a better day is seen in the East. Have you heard from Maine?

If Ingersoll and Kilpatrick will only take the stump again in Maine the majority there for Hancock will be overwhelming.

What the country wants is peace and reconciliation everywhere, and an end at once and forever to the partisan howl of sectional hate.

The Republican United States Minister to Turkey, the Confederate General Longstreet, is violently opposed to General Hancock. So he was on the field of Gettysburg.

General Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, who has been for years acting with the Republican party, now joins the army of patriotism and supports Hancock for President.

The Garfield Republicans base their hopes on the passions of a war long since ended, and seek to deprive the country of the fruits of victory, unity, peace and prosperity.

A Republican orator in Chicago threatens if Hancock is elected they will get up another war. That don't scare a penny's worth, but will serve to increase the Democratic vote.

Hiram Barney, one of the originators of the Republican party, and President Lincoln's Collector of the Port of New York, openly declares himself in favor of the election of Hancock and English.

"It is a significant fact," as Mr. Belmont, the intelligent Banker, says, "that only in 1879, with the House and Senate both Democratic, were we enabled to float our four per cent bonds at par."

Through all the carnival of roguery from 1869 to 1875, when a Democratic majority in the House put an end to the lobby and Congressional plunder, James A. Garfield never raised his voice or cast his vote for honest reform.

Mr. Blaine says Maine will be all right in November. He promised she would give 8,000 Republican majority in September. Mr. Blaine is a poor prophet this season. The people are against him. Truth is mighty even in Maine.

The South is solid for the Constitution and Union, for honest government, for a pure and economical administration of public affairs, and for the election of that man whose character is spotless, and loyalty undoubted —General WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

Judge Black, of Pennsylvania, knows Mr. Garfield thoroughly, and while giving him credit for good personal traits, declares distinctly that with Garfield "treachery to his country is fidelity to his faction." Such a man is unfit to be trusted with the Presidency of the United States.

The Garfielders in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the purpose of showing the "canal boat and tow path" qualifications of their hero in a procession, stole a pair of mules from the stable of a Democrat. Well! Well! Who can now doubt the magnitude of moral ideas? Bring forth Beecher!

What has become of Bob Ingersoll? It is stated that Ingersoll's positive infidelity, coupled with Garfield's professed piety, proved more than the hardy fishermen and wood-choppers of Maine could stand. They rushed to the polls and voted for Plaisted. So they will for Hancock.

The bright light of public scrutiny and the hostile lens of party animosity have been turned upon the character of Winfield Scott Hancock and not a flaw or stain can be discovered. He towers in reputation above his political opponent for the Presidency as Mount Washington over-tops the hills of New Jersey.

When corruption and extravagance ran riot in Washington City, when Boss Shepherd and his crew were drawing millions from the peoples' treasury to lay rotten wooden pavements in the streets with false measurements and at double prices, James A. Garfield was the pliant Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Before the Democrats gained possession of Congress, gigantic monopolies appropriated the public domain, lobbyists drove an unblushing and prosperous trade, whiskey rings defrauded the Government of millions, and Black Fridays, DeGolyer pavements and Credit Mobilier investments played their nefarious pranks.

Before the election, Senator Logan, the fierce Copperhead of 1861, profanely remarked—"We will buy Maine," and Bob Ingersoll, the renowned infidel, urgently proposed the raising of two million dollars for the purpose. The money no doubt was furnished, but the independent voters of the Pine Tree State were not purchasable cattle.

The Democratic party hold that the Southern States are integral parts of the American Union, and not conquered provinces to be ruled by despotic power from Washington. Enemies in war, when peace came the Democracy of the North recognized and treated the Southern people as citizens of a common country. That just and generous action on the part of Northern Democrats is why the South is solid.

The Republican party, because of its neglect to pursue a proper policy after the war, was responsible for the ruin and distress brought upon the country by the financial collapse of 1873. The industry and economy of the people since then, with the aid of a Democratic Congress, and the blessings of abundant crops, have brought about signs of returning prosperity, with gold at par. John Sherman had precious little to do with it.

A number of colored men in Toledo, Ohio, have signed a paper, expressing their belief that the best interests of all the American people demand the election of Hancock and English, and avowing their determination to "shake off Republican shackles and no longer be pack horses for that party." That is the right course to take, and it must be followed by the colored voters in New Jersey and all over the North, if they desire to enjoy the dignity and benefit of citizenship.

That Southern Bugbear!

General Hancock will veto any attempt at paying Rebel claims. "When Rebellion was crushed the heresy of secession in every form went down forever."

"CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 21, 1880.

"DEAR SIR:—I inclose slips cut from the Gazette and Commercial of this city, both of them newspapers of large circulation and influence in Ohio and Indiana, referring, as you will see, to the much harped-upon subject in our politics of rebel claims. These newspapers and Republican stump speakers are constantly asserting that if you are elected President the claims of disloyal people of the South for losses sustained in the war will be allowed and paid by the United States. They further direct special attention to the fact that this charge has been made against the Democratic party, and that you, its candidate for President, have not denied it. This warfare is made in all seriousness and maintained with great earnestness, and repeated day after day in the press and in speeches. You are known to the country as a frank, honest soldier, now the representative of the Democratic party, and having a right to speak for it. Whatever you may say the people will hear and believe. I submit the matter to your good judgment as to what you should say or whether you should make any public utterance at all. Very respectfully yours,

"THEODORE COOK."

The following is General Hancock's reply:

"GOVERNOR'S ISLAND,
NEW YORK, Sept. 23, 1880.
To Theodore Cook, Esq., Cincinnati, O.

"DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 20th inst., has been received. I regret that you are disturbed about the effect of this bugbear, 'Southern war claims.' The people cannot be misled by it. To suppose that 'Rebel Claims,' or claims in the interest of persons who were in rebellion, can in any way or in any degree be countenanced is an imputation of disloyalty such as used to be made against Democrats even when they were in arms defending the country. So far as it touches me, I denounce it. The Government can never pay a debt or grant a pension or reward of any sort for waging war upon its own existence; nor could I be induced to approve or encourage payment of such debt, pension or reward. Nobody expects or wants such unnatural action. To propose it would be an insult to the intelligence and honor of our people. When rebellion was crushed the heresy of secession in every form and in every incident went down forever. It is a thing of the dead past. We move forward, not backward. If I were President I would veto all legislation which might come before me providing for the consideration or payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in rebellion, whether pardoned or not.

"In relation to 'Union War Claims' the Government's obligations to its defenders come first. They are lasting and sacred. The public laws of civilized nations do not in general recognize claims for injuries to property resulting from the operations of war. Nevertheless our Government has treated with great indulgence the claims for losses and damages suffered by Union men from the military operations of the war of the Union. But as hostilities were closed more than fifteen years ago, claims of that nature—now mostly in the hands of brokers or persons other than the original sufferers—are becoming stale and in my judgment might fairly be considered as barred by the lapse of time, and if hereafter entertained at all, should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny. Yours very truly,

"WINFIELD S. HANCOCK."

If elected I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union, and see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.—[General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

New Jersey Congressional Nominations.

The Democratic Congressional Convention of the Seventh District of New Jersey (Hudson County) met at Odd Fellows' Hall Hoboken, on Tuesday last and nominated ex-Congressman A. A. Hardenburgh on the first ballot. The clerks announced his vote as 126, against 48 for ex-Mayor Traphagen.

The Third District Republican Congressional Convention met the same day at Library Hall, Elizabeth, N. J., and nominated Judge Chilion Robbins, of Monmouth County. These two nominations complete the New Jersey Congressional ticket.

District.	Democratic.	Republican.
1	Joseph Carter.	George M. Robeson.
2	Hezekiah B. Smith.	J. Hart Brewer.
3	Miles Ross.	Chilion Robbins.
4	Henry S. Harris.	Judson Kilpatrick.
5	Augustus W. Cutler.	John Hill.
6	Edward Balbach, jr.	Phineas Jones.
7	A. A. Hardenbergh.	Lewis A. Brigham.

POLITICAL CLIPPINGS.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, is out in a letter announcing his desertion of the Republican party.

The Republicans are trying to throw the Democrats in Indiana off their guard by declaring that they do not expect to carry that State, while they are in fact increasing their exertions.

The Congressional nominations in the Philadelphia districts of Pennsylvania are now complete. Speaker Randall has been again nominated, for the tenth consecutive time.

If Mr. Garfield still insists that the $329 was a loan, why does he not pay it back to the heirs of Oakes Ames!

Gen. Hancock's letter on Southern war claims carries consternation to the pocket of many a wealthy Republican patriot whose nests has been feathered in manipulating claims of this character at Washington.

If the Tribune were a newspaper it would publish Judge Black's expose of Garfield's character. But as it is merely a Republican campaign document it will doubtless ignore it entirely. Yet Judge Black has been quoted as the chief indorser for Garfield's honesty.

General Stokes is now followed by General Butterfield. So one by one the distinguished generals and leaders of the Republican party as it was, file out and take their proper positions in the ranks of the people who support the hero of Gettysburg.

The N. Y. Times says—A Hancock and English flag, suspended over Chapel street, opposite the rooms of the Jeffersonian Club, a Democratic social organization of New Haven, Conn., was hauled into the rooms of the Sigma Epsilon, a Yale Freshman secret society, occupying the floor above the Jeffersonian, last Friday evening and torn into shreds.

A grand torch-light parade was held at Portland, Maine, on Saturday night in honor of the Union victory which was participated in by Democrats of that city and companies from Cape Elizabeth, Saccarappa, Gorham, Bath and other cities. About 1,800 men were in line.

Ex-Congressman William Walter Phelps of Bergen County, N. J., was one of the speakers at the Republican gathering of the Fifth District Campaign Club at Library Hall, Jersey City, on Friday night. To the consternation of the Republican leaders the speaker deprecated the continued waving of the bloody shirt by his party workers [illegible]

One day recently a seine was drawn in the Delaware river, near Lambertville, and among a number of black bass and other fish were taken six salmon, about half grown. One of about the same size was taken with a rod and line, the only one that we have heard of being captured in the Delaware in this way. The law makes the shooting of game birds before Oct. 1, punishable by a fine of $5 for each bird shot, and the constable making the arrest is entitled to one-half of the fine recovered. The priest is accordingly liable to $260 fine.

We Can't Talk

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them, let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

THEY don't like it—$329.

THIS is the season of the year when it is proper to cut Robbin's wings. It will be done in a certain case, Nov. 2d next.

THE next Convention for nominating a candidate for Assembly honors in the Third Democratic Assembly District of Union county, will be held in Plainfield.

THE Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church, will hold its first sociable of the season in the parlors of the church, on Friday evening of next week.

WE found $329 in front of our office this morning. We don't know who left it there, but it is not ours. We never received such a loan. We would make it even figures if we were going to borrow.

PROF. Burnham will again assume command of the scholars in the Plainfield Athletic Club's Gymnasium Oct 16th, for the season of 1880-81. Under his instruction we may expect to chronicle renewed success to the Club and its pupils.

THE ominous figures, $329, have been very prominent in our city the past few days. On fences, posts, door steps, pavement, and other available spots, appear these cabalistic figures. As a rule they appear suddenly before the vision of those who support Garfield for President.

THE banner raised by the Democrats of North Plainfield, on Wednesday evening last, makes eight now to be seen in our city and the above place. Four Democratic and four Republican. We will put Plainfield against any city of its size in the State, for a larger number or finer looking lot of political banners.

THE season having arrived for gathering Autumn leaves, clematis and ferns, too much care cannot be taken, not to gather any five leaf ivy, the leaves of which are now tinted in beautiful shades. It will be found on fences, trees and entwined among the bushes with the clematis so much sought after just now. The leaves are poisonous.

THE Democratic State Executive Committee rooms at Hotel Hudson, Jersey City, have a large number of visitors daily, and the reports received from the different quarters of the State are becoming more and more encouraging. Those who need documents for distributing, will receive them by specifying what kind they desire, by letter addressed to the Committee.

THE "John Dunn Hickory Guards" is what they call them now. They meet in Flanigan's building, too, which is sufficient to inform the intelligent reader as to how the "Guards" are intended to be voted. "Johnnie," we are thinking that the "Spaniards" in your company will want more than "taffy" when the appointed time comes. The John Dunn Hickory Guards! Whoo — — — !

THE Second Annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association, will be held in the basement of the First Baptist Church, Monday, Oct 4th, at 3 o'clock p. m. An election of officers will be held. All persons who have rendered services or contributions of any kind will be entitled to a vote.

A full attendance is earnestly desired.
By order of the Board of Managers.
Mrs. H. D. Burlingham, Secretary.

A LADY, residing near Newton, on entering her bedroom a few evenings since, noticed a black object lying on the floor, and thinking it was her belt that she might have dropped on a previous visit to her room, she leaned forward to pick it up. As her hand touched it, she noticed it was very cold, and also felt it move, which frightened her, and calling for help it was found to be a large blacksnake that had crawled in at a lower window and taken up quarters for the night.

THE Fall business is now in full operation, and will be the largest for many years. The leading merchants in New York report a trade of thirty to fifty per cent. in advance of last year. In fact there is a general revival of business in all parts of the country, and confidence is being restored since the nomination of Hancock and English, and with their election, which is as certain as that the day of election falls on the 2d of November, there will be a greater advance in trade, and factories that are now idle will be started up and the country will be once more prosperous and happy.

THE State Fair held last week at Waverly Park, was an exhibition of unusual interest. All the departments were filled to overflowing with the works of nature, art and science. On Thursday there was an uncomfortable rush of visitors. Probably thirty thousand people passed through the gates on that day. Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow, Hon. Frederic A. Potts, Senator Blaine, of Maine, and other prominent personages were present. The trotting was excellent, although we are sorry to record, Plainfield horses carried off no honors. The officials having the Fair in charge are to be congratulated upon the success attending the same this year.

THE University Singers gave two concerts in Plymouth Church to the great delight of the people. I was not able to be present, except for a single song, but the testimony which I received from men of good judgement and taste was strongly commendatory, and I hope that they may have an open field and successful tour, at home and abroad.

HENRY WARD BEECHER,
Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I WOULD rather listen to the University New Orleans Singers than to any Company that has visited this city."
WM. G. FISCHER, Prof. of Music, Phil.

"I've heard many Jubilee Singers, but these are decidedly the best."
Rev. G. S. HARE, D. D.

"Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot."

John H. Murray, who for many years enjoyed an enviable reputation in the East for presenting a circus of unexceptionable excellence, has again taken the road with a bran new show, his old one having been shipwrecked on a voyage to the West Indies. By reason of indomitable energy, he has retrieved his fortunes and been enabled to build up a new enterprise, which bids fair to outrival his old ventures. With a new outfit and many original features in his ring, he appeals to his old patrons, who will not fail to respond to one who has furnished them so much amusement in days gone by. One of his new departures is the presentation at the afternoon performance of a juvenile circus troupe, in addition to the full regular show, wherein the performances of the little boys and girls on the Shetland ponies are said to be very interesting, especially to children. All the little people should be given an opportunity to see them. In many places where Mr. Murray has visited the public schools have been dismissed, that they might enjoy such opportunity. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and a half holiday from the books will give a new zest and interest in studies when they are resumed. It will exhibit in North Plainfield on Friday Oct. 1st.

HANCOCK RALLY!

THE DEMOCRACY OF NORTH PLAINFIELD TURN OUT FOR HANCOCK—BANNER RAISING AND AN ENTHUSIASTIC SPEECH MAKING—TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION AND PYROTECHNIC DISPLAY—ELOQUENT HARANGUES—THE GREATEST ENTHUSIASM EVERYWHERE.

One of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings held in this vicinity for years, was that which took place in North Plainfield on last Wednesday evening. The immense gathering of the most prominent and influential citizens was called together by the raising of a Hancock & English banner on Somerset street, and the ratification by eloquent speeches and appropriate endorsement of the nominations made by the Democracy at its National, State and Congressional Conventions. Between seven and eight o'clock the Plainfield Veteran Corps formed in front of its rooms, and headed by the Plainfield Cornet Band and followed by the Artillery Company with its gun, marched through Somerset street towards the place of meeting. At about Chatham street a break in the line was made to admit the Hancock & English boy club and the completed procession proceeded.

Upon the arrival of torch bearers at the head-quarters of the North Plainfield organization, a scene of vivid beauty burst upon the darkness of the sky. Crimson, golden and emerald fire flashed its reflection to the heavens, while colored candles and flaming rockets lit up the surroundings. While this brightness spread over everything, and during the inspiring strains of the band, a magnificent banner was gracefully unfurled to the view, bearing the portraits of Hancock and English, their names as well as those of the Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow, and Henry S. Harris Esq. It was the first banner in the county that displayed the name of the latter, and undeniably one of the handsomest. Too much praise cannot be given to the Committee who had its construction in charge, nor to its lady friends who so kindly and efficiently contributed their valuable assistance. The portraits of the presidential candidates are remarkably fine likenesses, and in size the banner is not inferior to any other in the neighborhood. An outburst of overwhelming enthusiasm joined with the artillery salute in making the adjacent mountains echo willing cheers for the cause of Democracy and its leaders.

President John Bodine then introduced to the assemblage Judge J. L. Wheeler of Red Bank, who spoke a few words of welcome and sympathy from the porch of the Blair Hotel—closing his remarks by an invitation to all to enter the hall prepared for the meeting. Here a scene of tasteful decoration was to be observed; the room being draped and otherwise adorned with the national colors and such beautifying attributes as the untiring exertions of Mr. John Vetterlein had brought into requisition. In a few minutes the interested gathering had filled the hall to overflowing; but the front seats were vacated for the occupancy of the large number of lady members of our prominent families who were present and remained earnest and appreciative listeners during the entire meeting.

From a raised platform that had been erected in the forward part of the room, eloquent arguments, appeals, comparisons and other points bearing upon the coming election, were presented by E. V. Wright, Esq., of Princeton; Henry S. Harris, Esq., County Prosecutor of Warren County, and the Congressional nominee of the Fourth District; Judge J. L. Wheeler; Capt. James Brady of New York; and His Honor Mayor Harper, and James E. Martine, Esq., of Plainfield. Among even such a fine gathering of talent, the easy flowing but powerful words of Mr. Harris, were bound to leave in the heart of each one of his hearers a sense of admiration of the admirable personal qualities and depth of mind and thought, displayed.

During the in-door meeting the clubs in line marched to the residence of Eugene A. Gross, Esq., the President of the Hancock & English Veteran Corps, at which point an artillery salute was fired and a serenade given by the Band. Among the many residences illuminated were to be especially observed those of Messrs. John Woodland, Hilair Obitz and the late James Verdon, Esq.

And so again does a rally for honesty in the affairs of the government, call out the better class of citizens; and they unite in unbounded enthusiasm for the cause.

The Fair of 1883.

The preparatory work of the International Exhibition of 1883, necessitates immediate information as to how much space is likely to be demanded by exhibitors in the buildings to be erected by the Commission for exhibition purposes. To that end the Executive Committee deem it advisable that every prominent manufacturer and producer in the country should be communicated with; and in pursuance of that intention, circulars and preliminary applications for space will be sent such persons as would likely participate and make creditable exhibits of their own particular productions.

A Worthy Entertainment.

The following is only one of the many such flattering criticisms of the Richmond and Von Boyle Company, which have been accorded it by the entire press of the United States. A reference to our advertising columns will show the date of their appearance in Plainfield.

The performance at the Opera House last night by the Richmond and Von Boyle Comedy Co., was a delightful surprise. The performance literally took the house by storm. People who seldom or never laugh actually roared—they could not help it. The Company came to Quincy unknown; they leave, as favorites.—Quincy Herald, Nov. 21 1879.

Funeral Obsequies.

The funeral of the late Mrs. L. A. Dunn, from the Seventh Day Baptist church, last Friday, was attended by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The services were conducted by the Rev. T. A. K. Gessler of Brooklyn, N. Y., assisted by Rev. Mr. Stockton of the M. E. church, this city. The Reverend gentleman based his remarks on the 23rd Chap. of Job, 10th verse, speaking particularly of the afflictions brought upon us, which are intended to make us purer; continuing in a beautiful and solemn manner on the life of deceased, alluding to her as the dutiful, religious and instructive mother, the loving wife and beloved daughter. Rev. Mr. Stockton followed with an impressive prayer. The remains were interred in the family burying plot in the Seventh Day Baptist Cemetery.

Our New Pastor.

The Trinity Reformed Church organization is to be congratulated upon the securing, as its pastor, of the Rev. W. H. Gleason. This popular clergyman resigns a flourishing pastorate in Newark—the First Reformed Church, on Broad street—to accept a smaller remuneration as a laborer in the much larger field that Plainfield offers. His late congregation refuse to accept the resignation; and as Mr. Gleason declines to withdraw it, the matter will be finally settled by the Classis in charge. Notwithstanding this, however, he will enter upon his duties in this city very soon, and on the morning of Sunday, Oct. 17th, will administer communion to his new charge. Those desiring to join by letter upon that occasion, may do so by communicating with either of the Elders—Messrs. Van Emburgh and Lindsley.

The Bound Brook Malaria.

The Bound Brook Board of Health have ordered the Lehigh Valley R.R. Co., through Robert H. Sayre, to abate and remove the tract of land, consisting of about 40 acres, known as the Bound Brook mill pond, on the east side of the town, and owned by that company. Mr. Sayre is notified that the pond and dam must be abated or removed between the 1st and 10th of November next, or upon failure to do so, the Board will at once remove them and charge the expenses on the land, according to law. The reason advanced for the removal is "that, in the judgment of this Board, the said mill-pond is a grievous nuisance, and that the same and every part thereof, is filled with soil, water and putrid vegetation, converting it into a vast marsh covering the whole of said tract and corrupting and infecting the air with malarial poisons to the great injury of the neighborhood and the endangerment of life and health."

Honors at the State Fair.

The following named exhibitors at the State Fair, held at Waverly, last week, from this city, received premiums:

John Wilson, Johnston Farm. Durham bull Dinwiddie, 1st premium, $25.

J. G. Cortelyou, Berkshire boar, under 1 year, 1st prem., $15; do., Berkshire boar over 1 year, 1st prem., $15; do., Berkshire sow under 1 year, 1st prem., $10; do., Berkshire sow under 1 year, 2d prem., $5.

H. C. Randolph, seckle pears, 1st prem.; do., beffum pear, 1st prem.; do., orange quince, 1st prem.

J. A. Hetzel, pigeons, $2.

George Moore, Fanwood, Delaware grapes, 2d prem.; do., Salem grapes, 1st prem.

W. B. Woodruff, Westfield, plants, 1st prem.

Letitia Miller, Westfield, quilt, $2.

W. French, Westfield, riding wheel sulky harrow, $2.

Second Annual Fair!

UNION AND MIDDLESEX COUNTIES' DISPLAY—AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS, CROPS, STOCK AND FRUIT—THE HANDIWORK OF THE LADIES—EXCITING COMPETITIONS AND CONTESTS—INTERESTING RACES—UNEQUALLED ATTENDANCE. PROMINENT VISITORS.

If the clerk of the weather had been a stockholder of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, he could not have favored it with a more beautiful and appropriate meteorological condition of the atmosphere, than that upon the occasion of its Second Annual Fair. Monday last was devoted to the receiving of entries, and from morning to night exhibitors crowded together at the windows of the several departments, standing ankle deep in the dust under the rays of a mid-summer sun. The road leading to the grounds from both counties, presented a sight that is seldom experienced by our country neighbors. All kinds and descriptions of vehicles, loaded with every product of nature and ingenuity, formed a continual procession towards the Fair; while occasionally was discernable, through the thick dust, bulls, heifers, colts and other perambulating live stock. Although opportunity was afforded all to make their entries previous to the opening day, yet it is human nature to leave such matters to the last moment. In consequence, Monday was hardly sufficient to receive all the competitive articles that were presented. All departments were kept busy issuing exhibitor's tickets—that having in charge the specimens of ladies' fancy work, being especially rushed. Work as rapidly and faithfully as they could, however, at 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon there was no noticeable lessening in the crowd waiting to make their entries. In all departments the number of articles greatly exceeded that of last year; and when it is remembered that the quality displays the same improvement as is shown by the quantity, there is every reason to claim for the exhibition of '80 a much greater success than was achieved by that of '79. The interior of the grounds on Monday was a scene of bustle and active preparation. Stock owners were occupied in backing their Cheshire and Berkshire and Yorkshire swine into their respective pens, and tying up their native and grade bulls by their ringed noses. Chickens of all sizes, sorts and colors, from the Cochin as large as a turkey to the Sebright as small as a quail, were being arranged under a tent erected for the occupancy of the poultry display. In the main building innumerable papers of pins were attaching variegated specimens of silk embroidery, worsted work, crewel productions and a thousand other constructions and combinations of female fancy, to the many tables and show counters furnished for their exposition. The newly erected quarters for the comfortable and convenient lodging of the trotters present, were extensively patronized, and a visit among its roomy box-stalls showed the presence of many of the State's speediest horses. Refreshment stands, cigar booths, hot-sausage kitchens, peanut roasters, lemonade wells, soda fountains, rifle ranges and many other adjuncts of county fairs, were awarded places inside the enclosure, and their proprietors spent Monday staking out their claims and building their canvass, pine and hemlock sheds.

Although the Common Council had appropriated a certain sum to be used in laying the dust between this city and the Fair, it was impossible to succeed in any such undertaking; so it was earnestly hoped that Providence would take the matter in hand and furnish a sufficiency of rain on Monday night. But the storm failed to arrive until Tuesday morning. At about the time set for the athletic contests, the gathered clouds began to shed their condensed vapor in sheets of extremely wet rain; but to an able-bodied athlete such unpleasantness was no draw-back. With Mr. J. H. Platt as starter, H. I. Webb judge at the finish and Otis G. Webb, referee, the races were called at about eleven o'clock. The first event, a 100 yard dash, brought to the scratch Messrs. E. F. Foster of this city and Perrine of Amboy, as contestants. When the start was made by pistol fire, only Foster got away—Perrine considering that it was not a fair send-off. There being no recall, however, after the pistol firing, Mr. Perrine's claim of a false start was not allowed and the first medal was awarded to Foster. To afford satisfaction to both parties, a subsequent dash was contested by these athletes for a medal furnished by the Webb brothers, which was won by Perrine in 11 seconds. The mile-run brought together Messrs. E. Foster and H. P. Moore, and was won by the former in 5 minutes and 8 seconds. A mile bicycle race, that followed, was secured by "Champion" Gavett, with Dr. Fred Saillie a good second; time 5 min. 4½ sec. The winner afterwards rode an exhibition race against time; making the mile in 3 min. 30 sec. On the whole, the sports were very satisfactory—every competitor winning a handsome medal—but we would suggest that in future, associations that devote their attention so especially to agricultural matters, should place their athletic contests in the hands of an organization that makes a specialty of such affairs. A larger entry list, and consequently more interesting competitions would result.

Horses for all work, mares and colts, matched teams, family roadsters, stallions, mules, and any other such animals under Division A were subsequently shown upon the track for the convenience of the judges in their respective classes. This display was a most satisfactory one, and decidedly creditable to the association. The number of entries in the department was a flattering witness of the high favor already reached among owners by by county organization. The awards made were universally gratifying, and proved the efficiency and experience of the selected judges. At the Secretary's office, the separate classes had been placed in the hands of competent gentlemen and ladies, and the day was spent in a thorough examination of the articles and stock exhibited. The entries selected to receive premiums will be published in our next, but it is to be regretted that special diplomas were not issued to those who had expended time and labor in making displays for which no mention was specifically accorded. The most prominent exhibit of the Fair, on account of its value and beauty, was made by Mr. Auguste Saltzman of this city and Maiden Lane, New York. This gentleman, whose time-keepers are being universally carried by the conductors and commuters on the C. R. R., as well as many of our private citizens, displayed a collection of Swiss watch movements and cases of his own manufacture. The goods shown embraced all styles of engraved and engine-turned cases, with porcelain and carved portraits inserted; while the works were of every quality, with all the latest attachments of chronographic perfection. The exhibit attracted great attention and was awarded a premium and "honorable mention" by the judges in the Miscellaneous Class. Its money value aggregated about $4,000. Mr. Wm. Sebring's display of shirts also received flattering commendation. With it was a garment built for Uncle Joe Edwards of Westfield, a gentleman weighing 340 pounds, who claims he can only secure a satisfactory fit by patronizing that manufacturer. Mr. C. M. Vermeule the hatter of Front street, was represented by an upright show case of furs, hats, caps and such other articles as are included in his line of trade. Among our prominent merchants who had entered creditable exhibits, were Messrs. Kissall & Price, Honeyman & Co., Green & Co., and Curtis & Griffen.

The entries in Division D., so far as they included fruit, vegetables and grain, were arranged according to their class heads in the rooms under the Grand Stand. Here were to be seen plums as large as apples, apples as large as musk-melons, musk-melons as large as pumpkins and pumpkins—as one old lady expressed her opinion—"as large as all out doors." Other States may well look tremblingly at the laurels they have won as growers of farm products. We feel safe in asserting that no finer exhibition, in consideration of its quality, was ever made at a fair of its kind; and the two counties represented may well be proud of their crops and challenge competition on their particular merits. Mr. James E. Martine's proficiency as a farmer, was shown by an exhibit of corn-stalks, 13 feet in height.

Division E., embracing classes 54 to 62 inclusive, covered what is called "ladies work;" and the unexpected number of entries of such described articles, must have combined to form for its judges an arduous task. Plants and flowers, both wild and tame—if we may use the latter word—lent a beauty to the building that contained the above class of exhibits; which pleasant appeal to the taste experienced thereby, upon entering, was kept alive by the continued attractions that other features of the Division presented. Not only was the sense of [illegible] taste delighted by beautiful embroideries, [illegible] and artistic combinations of worsted, silk, wool and [illegible]; but the material eye was arrested by preserved fruits [illegible], transparent jellies glistening in crystal jars, golden butter and savory biscuits, layer cakes and jumbles, pies and waffles and every conceivable temptation to the palate known.

The collection of sheep, swine and poultry that was gathered together in [illegible]

Division C., probably, was as specially attractive as any subject of the exhibition. The thoroughbred and native swine, by the universal improvement in their appearance, plainly showed how great a success had been realized by our stock raisers. The poultry which occupied a tent to itself, far exceeded in variety, quantity and quality, the show made the previous year. Entries were made in pairs, and included almost every known variety of birds of the kinds classified. Judged from a high standard of excellence the stock displayed was unexcelled. Under this head came all varieties of pigeons and rabbits.

Division F., did not limit the competition for premiums in its department of agricultural implements and farm utensils, to any county or state. The exhibition, in consequence, was a most complete and thorough one; covering all branches of farm machinery and articles for dairy use. The display of carriages was most praiseworthy—a Surrey wagon and phaeton from the manufactory of Mr. L. H. French, showing admirable taste and efficiency in their construction. Manufactured articles in the way of household goods were not very extensively shown.

To the live stock entered under Division B., too much praise cannot be accorded. From John Wilson's Durham "Dinwiddie" and Mr. W. F. Williams' "Golden" down, it has never before been our good fortune to inspect so remarkably admirable a collection of cattle. From the Holly, Little and Johnston farms, thoroughbreds, with pedigrees as long as a Republican politician's face after the Maine election, were on exhibition. One almost wished he was a prize cow, to have so many soft hands stroking his forehead, and so many bright red lips open and say "isn't he pretty!"

Although the afternoon of Tuesday brought quite a gathering to the Fair, it was not until the next day that an opportunity was furnished for the country folks to see a crowd. The presence of the Hon. Miles Ross and Frederic A. Potts naturally attracted many; but the universal excellence of the many features of the occasion, could not but induce a large attendance. It is safe to fix the total number of people present at any point from six to twelve thousand, with an addition of about ten thousand to cover the quantity of vehicles.

Not only were the grounds and buildings crowded in consequence but the Grand Stand, from whence an uninterrupted view of the track and speed contests could be had in comfort, contained all its ample proportions would accommodate. A competent band had been secured, and its pleasant notes lent interest to the long pauses between heats and tedious waits caused by an unusual amount of false scoring.

The lists of starters in all the classes were well filled by some of the most prominent trotters of the country, and the contests were remarkably close and interesting. On Tuesday the 2:30 race was finished, and the 2:50 class began and carried over until the next day on account of darkness interfering. In the former contest, an accident occurred that appeared at the time to be more serious than it was. The chestnut gelding, Paralto, had won first place in two heats; when on the fourth of the race his driver tried to crowd between a leading horse and the fence. This risk resulted in overturning Paralto's sulky and pitching the driver underneath, as well as throwing the horse down. The judges immediately placed Mr. Lew Dunham in the slightly disabled driver's place, and Paralto who had only suffered to the extent of a cut heel, was sent to the front and gained the race. The following is a summary.

SUMMARY.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th 1880.—Purse $250 for horses that have never beaten 2:30; $150 to the first, $75 to the second and $25 to the third. Mile heats; best three in five, in harness.

On the same morning, a three-year-old colt race brought to the front Mr. I. Ten Eyck's black gelding "Chas. Crusoe," driven by P. Osborne, against "Sadie Forest" who was distanced, "Mary" and "Tramp." Mr. Ten Eyck's colt won in two straight heats, "Mary" and "Tramp" securing third and second, and second and third, respectively.

Some of the afternoon's races possessed quite a local interest, but want of space precludes our giving aught but a recapitulation of the heats. The defeat of the trotting pair, Adelaine H. and Augustus, after its uninterrupted career of four years duration as unconquerable, was quite a feature.

WEDNESDAY.—Purse $100, for gentlemen's roadsters, owned in Union and Middlesex counties or in the Township of North Plainfield since August 1, 1880.—Owners to drive. Mile heats, best three in five to road wagon.

Owing to darkness coming on the remaining part of this race was adjourned until half-past ten a. m. of Thursday, when Monmouth Chief took three straight heats, winning the race.

Besides the purses offered in the different contests, $250 is to be gained by the horse beating 2:25, to harness on the track during the meeting. Messrs. I. M. French of this city also presents a whip, and John Thompson of Rahway a bridle, to the horse making the fastest time.

To-day (Thursday) the Fair was honored by the presence of Gov. Geo. B. McClellan, Hon. Geo. C. Ludlow, Hon. B. Lee, Judge [illegible], Gen. [illegible] Clark, Jr., Hon. Miles Ross, [illegible], John R. McPherson, Hon. [illegible], Phineas Jones, Col. [illegible] Martin, and other dignitaries, upon [illegible] grounds of uncommon proportions.

Had it been possible, we would have published in this paper the entire premium list; but we are compelled from lack of room to omit it until next week.

As we go to press the races of Thursday afternoon in the 2.37 and 2.45 classes are unfinished and postponed until Friday at 1:30 p. m. They stand as follows:

An Athlete for Sure!

During the past month honors thick and fast have fell upon the modest shoulders of Mr. J. W. Gavett. That gentleman has won no less than six handsome medals for speed in bicycle riding, during a period of less than three weeks. These include the club championship of the P. A. C., the championship of Union and Middlesex counties and the vice-championship of America.

Something Worth Seeing.

We are pleased to announce the appearance at VanDeventer Hall on next Monday evening, Oct. 4th, of the popular actor and champion Rifle Shot of the World, Mr. Frank I. Frayne, supported by a first class company of Dramatic Artists, who will appear in C. W. Tayleure's dramatic success entitled, "Si Slocum, or the Trapper and his Dog." During the representation of this wonderful picture of California life in "49," Mr. Frayne will introduce a number of his marvelous rifle shots, including his celebrated double shot; also the mechanical wonder, the robbery of Wells, Fargo & Co. stage coach. Mr. Frayne's reputation as an actor is of the highest type, and we can assure our citizens of a first class entertainment. The piece is abounding in fun, thrilling situations and sensational novelties. Mr. Frayne has a very valuable dog actor called "Jack," for which he was offered $3,000 by Lord Salisbury, at London, England, during his engagement there one year ago. Secure your seats at Millgore's drug store, for 50c.

Personalia.

We omitted to mention the attendance of Mr. David W. Rogers as one of the delegates to the Firemen's Convention, held at Paterson, recently.

Mr. Joseph C. Ohl starts on Saturday for Louisiana, where he will take charge of a sugar plantation, expecting to make the South his home for several months at least.

Mr. Edward Higgs is the next to honor General Hancock. The gentleman has just raised a hickory pole on the mountain near Washington Rock, from which is unfurled a Hancock & English flag.

Mr. Walter Stewart, the well-known and popular sample-room proprietor of John Street, N. Y. City, was a guest of mine host Geo. Miller, of Laing's Hotel, for several days last week. Mr. S. is a genial companion and likes Plainfield.

We received on Wednesday last, a call from Mr. Bachman, brother to our fellow citizen, G. Bachman, who is a resident of Pennsylvania, and were pleased to hear him speak so confident of his State for Hancock & English. His opinion in that direction is the same as ours.

Prosecutor Henry S. Harris, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Fourth District of this State, in company with Judge J. L. Wheeler, of Monmouth County, honored our office with their presence on Wednesday evening last. Both gentlemen made stirring speeches at the Democratic Mass Meeting in Blair's Hall the same evening.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

There are now two Hancock & English Clubs organized here. One is styled the "Scotch Plains Hancock & English Club," and is officered as follows: President, C. W. L. Martine; Vice Presidents, Benj. Connett and James Middleditch; Secretary, John T. Pattinson; Ass't Secretary, Wm. N. Pangborn; Treas., James A. Baker. There are 80 names on the roll, and the Club meets in Dean's Hall, next to Talmadge's Drug store.

The Young Men's Hancock & English Club, number 24 members, and is officered as follows: Pres., John G. McNair, (formerly Greenback); Vice Pres., Fred. Marvin; Sec., James Moulton; Treas., Thos. Pall, Jr. Among the members of the Club are six former Republicans. They meet next to Cook's building.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Mr. George Hartfelder has opened a saloon for the sale of Liquor, Ale and Wine by the glass, and bottled liquors by the quart, he having obtained a license at the present term of court. Mr. H. is incapacitated from performing his regular business on account of the loss of nearly all his right hand in his father's planing mill some months since, which accounts for his choosing the above business. He proposes to keep an orderly house and solicits the patronage of the people of the township.

The regular meeting of the Hancock & English Club will occur next Wednesday evening. A full attendance is requested to transact important business.

The jury in the case of Somerset county against John G. Veghte, indicted for embezzlement, brought in a verdict of guilty, recently. The jury in the case against Messrs Cory and Jones, after being out for some hours, announced it could not agree and were consequently discharged. The numbers stood, ten for acquittal and two for conviction.

FIRE MATTERS.

Have you prepared your mottoes for the parade Oct. 14th? An appropriate motto makes a visiting fireman feel that the people are interested in the welfare of their home firemen, and that their guests are welcomed to our town.

The parade and inspection of the Plainfield Fire Department, with Resolute H. & L. Co. of Morristown and Niagara Engine Co. No. 2 of the same city, with many other guests, will take place Thursday, Oct. 14. The line will form on Front Street, right resting on Somerset St., at 1:30 p. m., where the department will be inspected by the Fire Board. The march will proceed on Front street to Richmond, to 6th, to Park avenue, to Front, to Somerset, to Green Brook ave., to Duer, to Mercer, to Grove, to Central ave., to 6th, to Plainfield ave., to 7th, to Park ave., to a point and countermarch to 4th street, to 3d Place, to Crescent av., to 7th, to Park av., to 2d, to Madison av. to Front, to Plainfield ave., 4th to Madison ave., Front and Park avenues and dismiss.

WM. H. VOORHEES,
Chief Engineer.

Last Friday morning Mr. Button, the maker of the Union Fire Company's engine of Trenton, fulfilled his promise by throwing a stream over the finial of the spire of St. Mary's R. C. Church, in this city, a height of 244 feet 6 inches from the ground. A large tank filled with water was placed in the street, and two sections of hose were used to convey water from the fire plug to it. Two sections of hose were likewise attached to each outlet, and were coupled with what is called a Siamese coupler, from which a 25 foot section of hose was attached, having a branch pipe at the end. The stream was then thrown with 240 pounds water and 140 pounds of steam pressure.

About midnight of Saturday last, the old grist mill belonging to the estate of the late Phineas Randolph, situated just off Front Street, below Washington Avenue, was discovered to be on fire. An alarm soon brought to the scene the Fire Department, with the exception of "Desoto" Steamer No. 1, which was off duty in consequence of re-painting her wheels. "No. 2" and "No. 3" steamers soon had four powerful streams on the burning structure, which in consequence of its being built of hard wood, burned slowly. In a short time the fire was out, although but a shell of the old building is left. The fire was evidently of incendiary origin. There was but a small quantity of grain in the mill. There is an insurance of $2,000 on the building, $1,000 in the London Assurance and $1,000 in the Manhattan. The structure was one of the oldest in the city. It is not likely that it will be rebuilt. Now is the time to do away with the "Sylvan Lake" nuisance.

The "[illegible]" are not so fortunate as we thought they were. Instead of their whole apparatus being painted, as it deserved to be, for the approaching parade, and their wheels repaired, by the Commissioners, it is only their ladders which are being touched up and repaired. The "[illegible]" are thinking of [illegible] a new truck, after being [illegible] with their present one.

Letter from Europe.

Guise, France,
September 11th, 1880.

You will perceive that I am at the great Institution of "J. Godin Familistere," where he has practically demonstrated to the world for twenty years the feasibility of uniting Capital, Labor and Profits, and also all the social advantages in one great enterprise. In all my eight months in America and Europe, there is nothing in the past and present civilization that has done or is doing so much for humanity, in the way of every blessing that mankind needs in this world, as may be found in this institution. For particulars of this enterprise see Harper's magazine April, 1872, and the Herald of July.

*According to decision of Electoral Commission.

NOTE—Jefferson, in 1800, was elected on the 36th ballot. The popular vote is not given until 1824, because the electors were chosen by the State Legislatures up to that period. In 1820 James Monroe had but one electoral vote in opposition. In 1824 J. Q. Adams was elected by House of Representatives.

We gladly call the attention of all who buy children's shoes, to the advertisement of the American Shoe Tip Co. in another column. As a black tip that is a perfect protection to the toes of costly shoes, while adding to their beauty, is of the first importance. Such the A. S. T. Co. Tip has proved to be.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operation, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous. For sale by all dealers.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

PARISIAN CRIME.

While we cannot, as true patriots, admit that Paris is larger, cleaner, or better governed than New York, or that it has any buildings to be compared in beauty of architecture with the Tribune or the Western Union Building, we may concede that in point of crime Paris has, in certain directions, fairly surpassed our Metropolis. There can be no doubt that plumbing, for example, is carried to greater lengths, and is characterized by more daring and originality in Paris than it is in any other city. This fact is conclusively shown by the report of a recent trial before a Parisian criminal court, and it is earnestly to be hoped that our native plumbers will not feel impelled by a spirit of emulation to follow the example set them by the plumbers of Paris.

It appears from the facts brought out in the trial in question that the Parisian plumbers are accustomed to paint the faces of casual drunkards whom they may meet on the street, and that in case any man interferes with a plumber when so employed he is usually killed. Some time ago a plumber, while walking through one of the streets of Paris, noticed a drunken man lying on the pavement, and after leisurely examining the man, decided that his face ought to be painted red. He thereupon went back to his shop for his tools, and returning, began to paint the drunkard's face with a promptness wholly unlike the usual practice of New York plumbers. To him while thus engaged appeared a young man, who appealed to the better nature of the plumber and begged him to desist from his job. Of this young man very little is known, but the fact that he undertook to remonstrate with a hardened professional plumber proves that he must have been either very young or very inexperienced. The plumber, resenting this interference, kicked the young man to death and then went home to dinner, intending to return and finish the job and then to devote the evening to making out his bill. An over-zealous policeman arrested him on the charge of murder, but at his subsequent trial he was quickly and honorably acquitted.

We learn from this curious history a number of facts in relation to the Parisian plumbers. Evidently they are accustomed to perpetrate their crimes unsolicited and unprovoked. In this city the plumber, bad as he is, never practices his nefarious profession without provocation. He is, in all cases, admitted into a house by the householder himself before he commits any overt act, and it is an unheard-of thing for a New York plumber to force his way into a house and to violently commit a job. But this particular Parisian plumber, who is doubtless a fair example of his class, proceeded to seize on a prostrate and unconscious drunkard and to paint him with unprovoked brutality. Undoubtedly, a similar course is pursued in other branches of French plumbing. When a Parisian plumber feels an unholy thirst for jobs he probably enters the first house that appears to be comparatively unprotected, and proceeds to cut off the water and to "make repairs"—to use the professional slang—among the water pipes. Such bold and aggressive villainy is, happily, unknown in our more favored land, and may it be many years before our plumbers gain the courage to imitate it.

It is also evident that the Parisian plumber employs paint as one of his favorite weapons. With us painting is a separate branch of crime, and though our painters constitute a dangerous and destructive class, they certainly lack the audacity of the plumbers. The French plumber, when he saw the helpless drunkard, went back to his shop for his tools, and from the quickness with which he found his paint-pot and brush we can assume that they were constantly kept in readiness for use. We can hardly exaggerate the destruction which would be wrought in this city were the plumbers to be in the habit of painting as well as plumbing. The injury which they would inflict upon carpets and walls would be enormous, and their bills would rival the best efforts of lawyers engaged in settling an estate.

Furthermore, the Parisian tragedy proves that such is the terrorism exercised by the French plumbers that no jury ventures to convict them, even caught red-handed, or, at all events, with pots of red paint in their hands. It was conclusively proved that the plumber who painted the drunkard had received no previous provocation, and that he had also kicked a well-meaning though by no means cautious young man to death. In spite of the lawlessness which we are so often told characterizes our city, no one imagines that a New York jury would have been afraid to convict a painting and murderous plumber. Over private citizens who have the misfortune to own houses, our plumbers terrorize in a manner that might cause angels to weep, but when a plumber is brought before a court, justice is dealt out to him with unflinching severity, and without the slightest fear of what he or his fellow-criminals may do. There is, apparently, a reign of terror in Paris which secures immunity to plumbers, and the recent judicial decision establishes the precedent that any man who interferes with a plumber in order to prevent the commission of a job does so at his peril, and will not be avenged by the law if he falls a victim to the infuriated passions of the criminal.

We may thus console ourselves with the thought that Paris is in a far worse condition in respect to plumbers than we are. Very possibly our plumbers will grow bolder and more skillful with years of comparative impunity. Possibly during the approaching Winter, which promises to be one of unusual severity, affording frequent opportunities for plumbing, we shall hear of more and bolder jobs than we have ever yet heard of, but in any event we can comfort ourselves by thinking of the sufferings of the Parisian householder, and reflect that our condition might be vastly worse than it is.—N. Y. Times.

"MILLIONS IN IT."

To the Editors of the Evening Post:

I have just seen your despatch from San Francisco, in Saturday's Evening Post, about "Gold in Solution" in the Calistoga Springs, and about the proprietor's having "extracted $1,000 in gold of the utmost fineness from ten barrels of the water" during the past fortnight, by a process known only to himself. This will surprise many of your readers, but it does not surprise me, for I once owned those springs myself. What does surprise me, however, is the falling off in the richness of the water. In my time the yield was a dollar a dipperful. I am not saying this to injure the property, in case a sale is contemplated; I am only saying it in the interest of history. It may be that this hotel proprietor's process is an inferior one—yes, that may be the fault. Mine was to take my uncle—I had an extra uncle at that time, on account of his parents dying and leaving him on my hands—and fill him up, and let him stand fifteen minutes to give the water a chance to settle well, then insert him in an exhausted receiver, which had the effect of sucking the gold out through his pores. I have taken more than eleven thousand dollars out of that old man in a day and a half. I should have held on to those springs but for the badness of the roads and the difficulty of getting the gold to market. I consider that gold-yielding water in many respects remarkable; and yet not more remarkable than the gold bearing air of Catgut Canon, up there toward the head of the auriferous range. This air—or this wind—for it is a kind of a trade wind which blows steadily down through six hundred miles of rich quartz croppings during an hour and a quarter every day except Sundays, is heavily charged with exquisitely fine and impalpable gold. Nothing precipitates and solidifies this gold so readily as contact with human flesh heated by passion. The time that William Abrahams was disappointed in love, he used to step out doors when that wind was blowing, and come in again and begin to sigh, and his brother Andover J. would extract over a dollar and a half out of every sigh he sighed, right along. And the time that John Harbison and Aleck Norton quarrelled about Harbison's dog, they stood there swearing at each other all they knew how—and what they didn't know about swearing they couldn't learn from you and me, not by a good deal—and at the end of every three or four minutes they had to stop and make a dividend—if they didn't their jaws would clog up so that they couldn't get the big nine syllabled ones out at all—and when the wind was done blowing they cleaned up just a little over sixteen hundred dollars apiece. I know these facts to be absolutely true, because I got them from a man whose mother I know personally. I do not suppose a person could buy a water privilege at Calistoga now at any price; but several good locations along the course of the Catgut Canon Gold-Bearing Trade-Wind are for sale. They are going to be stocked for the New York market. They will sell, too; the people will swarm for them as thick as Hancock veterans in the South.

Four States have held general elections thus far, viz.: Alabama, Arkansas, Vermont and Maine. The Democracy have gallantly carried three out of the four by majorities ranging from 1,000 to 60,000 votes. Only five more States are numbered in the list holding "early elections." They are enumerated below:

Colorado will elect State officers and one Representative in Congress on Tuesday, October 5.

Georgia will elect State officers on Wednesday, October 6, and Representatives to Congress on November 2.

Indiana will elect State officers, Representatives in Congress and Legislature on Tuesday, October 12. The Legislature will choose a United States Senator.

Ohio will elect minor State officers and Representatives in Congress on Tuesday, October 12. The Legislature will elect a United States Senator in the event of Senator Garfield's election to the Presidency.

West Virginia will elect State officers and Legislature on Tuesday, Oct. 12, and vote upon two proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State—one relating to courts, and the other to the right of trial by jury in certain cases; Representatives in Congress on Tuesday, November 2. The Legislature will be called upon to choose a United States Senator.

All the States will elect Presidential Electors on Tuesday, November 2. All the Territories will elect Delegates to Congress on the same day.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State; and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Assembly be directed to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX. "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS,
Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS O. COOPER,
Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year," after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and every second year thereafter."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be in two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 7. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

WOODCOCK.

Bogardus, in his work on "Field, Cover and Trap Shooting," says that to make a good bag of woodcock is a feat the sportsman may well be proud of. To meet with success in woodcock shooting, one must be an excellent snap shot and possess a tireless nerve and muscular organization, besides, he must be familiar with the habits of the bird. To an experienced eye, woodcock ground is easily recognized. This dainty little bird is an epicurean in its habits, and a voracious feeder. The fat angle and other worms which inhabit the rich, soft and wet ground, are considered by the woodcock as the most dainty morsels, and form its sole diet. Among the lowland and marshy places where the ground is soft and loamy, the woodcock loves to dwell. It is nocturnal in its habits, spending its nights in feasting, and then at the break of dawn retires to a favorite retreat among the willows or tangled underbrush, and gently dreams the daylight hours away. It is a hard bird to find, and a sportsman without a staunch dog with a good nose, may almost tramp on a bird before it takes to its wings, and it is seldom seen until it flies. Occasionally the sharp eye of an experienced sportsman catches sight of a bird in its cay retreat. The woodcock obtains its food by means of a long-pointed bill with which nature has furnished it, and on account of its resemblance to the snipe it is often mistaken for this bird by farmers who occasionally flush it while making tours through the marshy portions of their estates. The bird while searching for food, probes his bill deep into the mucky spots where worms are plenty, and his sensitive prober soon detects the presence of the woodcock's tempting morsel. For hunting woodcock a dog is almost absolutely necessary. Man does not like to penetrate the marshy places and spots overgrown with briars and tall weeds, where the bird is found, to raise him from his hiding place, and not having the necessary olfactory requisites to detect the presence of the bird by scent may walk within a step of his intended victim without flushing him. On account of its tender feet and hide, it is almost wicked to use a pointer in woodcock shooting among the marshes, though in hunting the bird late in the season among the cornfields, a staunch pointer is used to good advantage. For general woodcock shooting the setter is much used. His coat of long hair and feathered feet protect him from the cutting swamp grass and poisonous briars, but the thoroughbred Sussex and St. Charles cockers are fast growing in popularity for cover shooting. They are merry and active workers, and when properly broken and handled afford the shooter excellent sport.

Generally speaking the woodcock is a hard bird to hit. Josh Billings, in an article on birds, says of the woodcock that the first that is seen of the bird is a "whiz," and the last we see is a "whirr." In shooting among the saplings the shooter must follow the dog and take his chances with snap shots. In low underbrush and later in the season among the cornfields, some open shots are obtained. The uncertain flight of the woodcock as he rises in his zig-zag flight tends to distract the aim of the shooter, and the success of the novice is very uncertain.

THE WILLOWS AT ST. HELENA.

The willow which overshadows the first Bonaparte's grave is the second planted since the interment of the Emperor, and is 26 years old. Willows at St. Helena, it would appear, rarely attain a greater longevity than 30 years, and shoots are carefully preserved for planting. The ex-Empress Eugenie brought away some young shoots and a few violet and geranium plants from the tomb, some for presentation to Her Majesty the Queen, and some for herself and her friends. This floral culter has been going on for nearly sixty years. Writing to Lord Bathurst, immediately after the interment of Napoleon, Sir Hudson Lowe said: "I shall cause a railing to be put around the whole of the ground, it being necessary even for the preservation of the willows, many sprigs of which have already begun to be taken by different individuals who went down to visit the place after the funeral." This is the incident which, as Mr. Forsythe has well pointed out, was afterward so ludicrously yet so malevolently distorted by Antommarchi, who described Sir Hudson Lowe as turning pale and foaming at the mouth with rage when he witnessed this "spontaneous manifestation of feeling." "Hudson," as the Italian surgeon styled Sir Hudson Lowe, "endeavored to check the 'manifestation of feeling' by 'anger and threats,' but the guilty were numerous, and of all classes of people and he could not, therefore, punish. When a new History of Political Lying comes to be written (and is not the time almost ripe for such a publication?) a special volume should be devoted to the various narratives of the captivity of Napoleon I.

WATCHWORDS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

"The right of trial by Jury, the Habeas Corpus, the Liberty of the Press, the Freedom of Speech, the Natural Rights of Persons, and the Rights of Property must be preserved."—Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

"I will maintain that the entire freedom of thought and speech is consistent with the noblest aspirations of man and the happiest condition of his race.

"Power may destroy the forms but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword."—Letter of General Hancock, March 1, 1868.

"Military interference with elections is prohibited by law, and no soldiers will be allowed to appear at any polling places unless, as citizens of the State, they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting."—Order of General Hancock, December 18, 1867.

"Nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right.

"The great principles of American Liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and ever should be."—General Order of General Hancock, November 29, 1867.

THE PURPOSE.

With Winfield Scott Hancock in the Presidential chair, and the able statesmen he will call around him as a Cabinet, we are sure to realize the blessings of fraternity, and the advancement of the American Republic to a point of grandeur and prosperity, both moral and material, never before reached in the history of any country.

It is a noble realm we have the good fortune to call our country, fairer than any other the sun greets upon the revolving globe. Stretching from ocean to ocean and from lakes to gulf, it embraces a mighty area of mountain, valley and plain, boundless in the elements of wealth, and fitted to be the happy abode of hundreds of millions of freemen, but above and beyond that it is rich in the possession of a representative form of government, a Union of States, sovereign for local legislation, and nationally sovereign for the honor and protection of all under the provisions of a distinctly worded and beneficent Constitution.

To preserve that system of government in its original purity, to defend it from any and every assault, whether domestic or foreign, and to make the United States, in fact as in name, a bond of unity for the benefit of every section and all the people, is the purpose of the Democratic party.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.
For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

THE FOUNDATION.

The Democratic party is founded upon principles, and in spite of long continued and malignant hostility, it remains a compact and conquering power in the land.

It consistently upholds the sovereignty of organic law and the civil and religious rights of every individual.

The star gemmed flag is its emblem, not a blood stained rag.

Its creed is national brotherhood, not sectional hatred.

It has no delusive shams to offer, but preaches what it practices in the broad sun-light of truth.

It is the only Union party.

The party of the people and for the people.

Equal and exact justice is its foundation.

THE GUIDE.

The Democratic party is national. It knows no territorial animosity. It is the same in South Carolina as in Massachusetts, in New York as in Illinois, and everywhere and under all circumstances the Constitution is its guide.

The Democracy to-day, as they have ever done from the very establishment of our government, eye the Constitution with the same fidelity that the mariner does the pole-pointed needle.

Only by rigid observance of the Constitution can the ship of state be saved from disaster.

No other chart is reliable, and none other will be consulted by Winfield Scott Hancock when at the helm.

That is the only safe guide.

He will prove a trustworthy pilot.

Vote for Hancock!

THE MISSION.

There cannot exist genuine and lasting prosperity with one portion of the country arrayed in political bitterness against another.

As well look for happiness in a wrangling family, as expect business success from a Board of Directors that are constantly fighting among themselves.

To be prosperous the country must be harmonious in feeling and united in aim.

To secure that most desirable result is the mission of the Democratic party.

Those figures 329 mean more than the Republicans like. They are a silent, but powerful argument against the Credit Mobilier record of Mr. Garfield.

The Spanish Government has forbidden priests to preach politics. Some Protestant congregations in the United States would advance the cause of religion by following the prohibition example in that particular.

It matters little how Ohio and Indiana go at the October State elections. General Hancock will run largely ahead of his party everywhere, and honor both of those States with a place in the Democratic electoral column.

It was a most remarkable financial co-incidence, that in borrowing money from Oakes Ames, several Congressmen, including James A. Garfield, should all have been short the same sum and that the oddly combined figures 329.

A large number of Mr. Garfield's constituents who protested so strongly against him as a candidate for re-election to Congress, because of his Credit Mobilier and De Golyer transactions, are now as decidedly opposed to voting him into the Presidency.

Mr. Plaisted, the anti-Blaine-Garfield candidate for Governor in Maine, is elected beyond the shadow of a doubt, yet signs portend that the Republican Returning Board meditate counting him out. That "counting out" game will be played once too often in this country.

The President of a National Bank in Cincinnati, a rabid Republican, ventured the assertion that United States four per cents would drop to 90 if Hancock was elected. A Democrat of the same city offers to take the $1,000,000 four per cents held by the Republican's Bank at par the day after Hancock is elected. He wont sell. Of course not.

The Assistant Secretary of the National Greenback Labor Committee charges General Weaver, the Greenback candidate for President, with being in the service and pay of the Republican National Committee. It don't surprise us a particle, as that is the way the "moral idea" party manipulate.

The New York Tribune continues to wave the bloody shirt with the agony of despair, which the Evening Post and some other sensible Republican journals pronounce to be the surest way to secure defeat, the people, as they truthfully declare, being sick and tired of sectional bitterness. On that ground tens of thousands of independent Republicans will vote for Hancock and English.

The latest dodge of Garfieldism is the silly endeavor to alarm business men by predicting mercantile trouble and disaster in the event of Hancock's election. That won't amount to a row of pins, because men of trade possess practical sense and are not idiots. At a Republican meeting recently held in Cleveland, Ohio, such an appeal was made to the business community of that city by a man notorious of record as the go-between in the De Golyer wooden pavement contract. A beautiful specimen he is to lecture honest tradesmen. We shall expect to hear Bob Ingersoll sounding the key-note of impending ruin to Christianity unless Garfield is installed President.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is! We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful.—[Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

POLITICAL CLIPPINGS.

The "solid South" threatens to send 6,000,000 bales of cotton to market this season.

The number of the Union Pacific Railroad Company on Broadway is "329," another instance of the writing on the wall.

The Democratic County Convention of Morris county, has nominated John F. Stickle, of Rockaway, for Senator by acclamation.

General Weaver expects to carry forty-three out of thirty-eight States in the Union. The other one hundred and seventeen will probably vote for Neal Dow.

The cabalistic number "329" annoys Postmaster James considerably. It stalks in daylight and dark, and notwithstanding the greatest vigilance breaks out all over the Post Office.

No explanation is yet offered how it happens, if, as the Republican papers say, Mr. Potts is a resident of New Jersey, and a man "of large property," he has paid such a small tax in the State. The people want to know.

The Sixteenth Ward Republican club, of Chicago, Ill., one of the largest and most influential in the city, met last Saturday night and formally repudiated the Republican State ticket, and resolved to give their united and hearty support to the Democratic ticket.

The World says when a Hancock flag is torn down at New Haven it is, according to the Times, a "frolic," but when a Garfield poster is defaced at Bayonne it is the act of "Democratic rowdies." These fine distinctions are only within the reach of journals which keep philologists on tap.

As the organizers of the approaching Republican parade expect to marshal 35,000 men in line, may we be permitted to suggest a strikingly impressive plan of formation? Equalize the commands into 329 companies of 100 men, which will dispose of 32,900. The remaining 2,100 will embrace field and staff officers and musicians.

Garfield received $329 as a dividend on Credit Mobilier stock. He has had his reward. From the looks of things at present Hancock will also receive 329—not dollars but votes in the Electoral College as his reward for faithful services to his country. Garfield will probably get the Electoral votes of Vermont, Iowa, Kansas, Rhode Island, Michigan and Colorado—in all, 39; Hancock will have the remainder—329. Hancock's 329 will be worth a great deal more than Garfield's $329.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 4.—D. D. Lum, formerly Assistant Secretary of the National Greenback Labor Committee, arrived here from New York to-day. He has in his possession a letter purporting to have been written by Marshall Jewell, requesting him to come to New York, to hold a consultation. Lum says the object of the consultation was to secure the co-operation of the Greenback leaders with the Republicans. He stoutly adheres to his charges that General Weaver, the Greenback Presidential candidate, has sold out to the Republicans, alleging that Mr. Weaver has received from Mr. Jewell $10,000 of the $25,000 promised him for deserting the party in the interest of Republicans. Lum's statements are pronounced false by Greenbackers here.

MR. ROSS AGAIN ENDORSED.

The Republicans who are continually seeking to manufacture capital in the interest of Judge Robbins, and against Hon. Miles Ross, should read what is going on in the district. At the Second Assembly District Convention, held at Colt's Neck on Saturday, when David A. Bell, of Matawan, was nominated for the Assembly, Mr. Hamilton introduced the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Rumors have been circulated by our political opponents to the effect that dissatisfaction exists among the Democrats of Monmouth in regard to the Congressional nomination, the said rumors being more especially pointed at portions of the Second Assembly District, and whereas, the Second Assembly District cherishes with pride its reputation as the mainstay and bulwark of the Monmouth Democracy, having ever maintained in this respect the same honorable relation to the rest of the county as Monmouth herself occupies toward the remainder of the Third Congressional District; now, therefore

Resolved, That this convention, sensible of the supreme importance and solemn obligations of party fealty and interest, and determined to perform their whole duty in this crisis, hereby ratifies and approves, with the most explicit, positive and cordial endorsement, the nomination for Congress of the Hon. Miles Ross.

Resolved, That this convention, recognizing in their Democratic candidate a true and tried public servant, who has repeatedly attested his fidelity to Democratic principles, and who, in the dark hour of 1876, was counted among the staunchest champions of the rightfully-elected President, hereby assures and pledges to the Hon. Miles Ross the loyal, hearty and unanimous support of the Democratic party in the Second Assembly District.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

The Trenton True American has very pertinently raised the question of the eligibility of ex-Senator Potts to the Governorship of New Jersey, even in the improbable event of his election. The Constitution requires seven years of continuous residence in the State to immediately precede an incumbency of its chief chair. Mr. Potts's residence is located as New York city by successive directories of that city; and the American further finds that Mr. Potts has only made return of and paid such taxes in Union Township as the law imposes on non-residents who might have personal property there.

This is a very serious question; and if Mr. Potts's advocates are seriously seeking his election to the Governorship they will find that they must give the people a clear and explicit answer to it.

Has Mr. Potts been really a resident of this State these few years past?

If so, why has he not paid his personal property taxes, as the law requires, in the township where, if anywhere in the State, he resides.

General Grant utterly repudiates an alleged interview reported by the Cincinnati Gazette and the New York Times, as having taken place between himself and the Rev. C. H. Fowler, of New York, in which General Grant is represented to have reflected on General Hancock's conduct after the nomination of General McClellan and during his command in Louisiana. General Grant denies having had such an interview at all, either with Dr. Fowler or any other person.

When John O'Brien was brought before Justice Kenna, in Brooklyn, Saturday, on a charge of having disturbed a political meeting in Greenpoint on Tuesday night, at which Gen. Judson Kilpatrick was a speaker, he said that he was one of the audience, and as Gen. Kilpatrick asked questions of the audience he volunteered an answer.

"What was said?" asked the Justice.

"The General, yer Honor," said O'Brien, "axed if rebel Brigadiers were to be trusted."

"And what did you say?"

"I said, says I, 'How about Longstreet and Mosby?' and before I got me answer I was on the way to the police station."

As there was no disturbance, further than talk, the complaint against O'Brien was dismissed.

LOCAL POLITICS.

An adjourned meeting of the Democratic Association will be held in their rooms at headquarters next Tuesday evening. All who favor the election of Hancock & English and the whole Democratic ticket are invited to be present.

The Democratic Association rooms are filled every evening with intelligent voters who peruse the campaign documents and newspapers of the day laid before them there. They will render their verdict from the knowledge gained, Nov. 2d.

The Republican campaign organization known as the "Plainfield F. A. Potts Mounted Guards," made their first appearance in public at the Wigwam meeting last Thursday evening. They presented a fine appearance and are efficiently officered.

The "Hancock Veteran Association" meet regularly each night at their headquarters, Somerset Street, and are increasing in membership. Although not making any great display in uniform upon our streets, like our Republican friends do with their organizations, the "Vets" will be found at the polls Nov. 2d. in full force with their ballots for Hancock, English, Ludlow, Ross and the whole State ticket.

The Republican Campaign Clubs of this city intended to participate in the demonstration for Garfield & Arthur at Bound Brook last Monday evening, but the rain interfering with the programme, a telegram was received from Bound Brook announcing that the parade was postponed, consequently the "Mounted Guards," "J. F. D. H. Guards," "Lincoln," "Morris" and other Clubs, who had appeared upon our streets in uniform, returned to their homes to await the next "call."

The Young Men's Democratic Association are active in the campaign. They are daily adding recruits to their organization. They have good workers in their midst and will see that Hancock, English, Ludlow, Ross and the whole Democratic ticket poll a large vote in the Republican city of Plainfield. They have leased rooms over Maple's Jewelry store, North avenue, (near the depot) and all the latest periodicals and papers, together with campaign documents, will be found there. This (Thursday) evening as we go to press, Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., is delivering an address in their rooms.

There was a large and enthusiastic Hancock & English meeting held at Mt. Bethel, N. J., last Thursday evening, which was presided over by Geo. Tergill, Esq., and addressed by our fellow townsman Jas. E. Martine, Esq., in his usual eloquent and impressive manner, leaving upon the minds of his hearers an impression of the true, sound principles of Democracy. The Democrats and friends of good government in Mt. Bethel are united and earnest in their determination to assist in the election of Hancock & English. Mr. Martine is doing yeoman's service in that cause, by visiting and speaking to gatherings in the country districts, or wherever he is called.

We Can't Talk

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them, let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

GENUINE GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. apr9y1

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption,
THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

Dr. Holman's Pad is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no [illegible] hodge-podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title-word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of valuable ingredients of newly-discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, Dr. Holman has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

This great improvement gives Holman's Pad (with its Adjuvants) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Disease of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning. Holman's Pads have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poison of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fevers to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhoea, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of Holman's Pads has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

FOR SALE BY ALL FIRST-CLASS DRUGGISTS, Or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

ELECTION three weeks from next Tuesday.

INDIANA and Ohio State elections next Tuesday.

SALEM has voted for water works 319 to 121.

THANKSGIVING is beginning to agitate the barnyards.

THERE was quite a severe frost last Friday morning.

A MAN who bets on the election loses his vote, if challenged.

THE October term of the Union County Courts began on Tuesday.

MONDAY was more like a November day—chilly and blustering.

WINTER is coming sure enough—the Central Railroad has sent out its train with stoves, and men to put them up.

THE dread disease to horses, "Epizootic," has again made its appearance in this State and city, although we have not learned of any serious cases resulting thus far.

THE billiard room recently attached to Laing's Hotel, Col. Miller proprietor, is liberally patronized by lovers of the game. The room is neat and commodious and the tables of improved pattern.

WE are indebted to Hon. Henry C. Kelsey, Secretary of State, for a pamphlet copy of the "Annual Returns of General Elections, commencing 1876," compiled from the official returns on file at Trenton. This is a valuable document.

IN a few weeks young women who have not opened the family Bible for months will begin to display a great interest in the sacred volume. They will gaze into it a dozen times a day to see how their autumn leaves are pressing.

THE qualifications requisite to constitute a man a voter in New Jersey are, that he shall be a resident of the State for one year next preceding the election, and of the county five months. These are the only requisites for the native-born.

A SLIGHT change was made in the Central R. R. time table on Monday last, affecting principally the Long Branch Division. Plainfield is benefited by the order for the stoppage at this depot of the 9:30 A. M. Philadelphia train for passengers on signal only.

THE Iron Era establishment of Dover, was sold on Saturday last to Mr. Isaac B. Jolley, for $6,900. The paper will hereafter be published by a joint stock company which has been formed under a charter obtained several years ago, as a Republican journal. Mr. John S. Gibson is the present manager.

MESSRS Watson & Co., the popular clothiers of Newark again place their goods before the public for the Fall season, this week, through the medium of our advertising columns. This firm has secured many customers in our city during the past by its liberal dealing with all, and the satisfaction its patrons unfailingly secure.

THE Misses Humphrey and Bissell residing on Second street, near New, have set a most commendable example by causing the trees opposite their premises to be well trimmed up. That is the very thing Plainfield needs throughout the settled limits. If the trees were properly trimmed, it would not only add greatly to the beauty of the streets, but be promotive of good health.

THE employees of the Standard Oil Company, who guarded the pipe-line at the Centreville bridge against the New Jersey Central Railroad have been withdrawn, and the 100 special policemen of Centreville have been mustered out, the railroad company having promised not to attack the bridge as long as the oil traffic is not given to the Erie or Pennsylvania Railroad. Pipes have been laid across the Hackensack River in spite of the opposition of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

EX-CITY Judge Good expects to sail from Glasgow for America about the middle of the present month. A letter recently received from him bears this testimonial to our Public School—"Among all the schools that I have visited on the Continent and in England, there were none that began to compare with yours in Plainfield. I do not state this boastingly; my endeavor has been, in all observations abroad, to look at every subject impartially and then make comparisons and try to reach proper conclusions."

WEATHER prophets, on Monday last, predicted that the "Equinox" had come sure when the gathering and overhanging clouds in the sky betokened the approach of a storm. A difference of opinion was at once observable among all interrogators as to "what do you think; will we have rain?" Some said, "yes; but I feel sorry for the Somerville Fair;" others thought it would interfere with the Firemen's parade next week, but all agreed that the earth needed moistening. The rain came all the same, and has done good.

THE next business meeting of the National State Hancock Veteran Committee, of which Gen. Wm. H. Sterling is Secretary, will be held in this city Tuesday, October 12th. Previous meetings have been held at Newark and Trenton, the last one being held on board of the yacht "Julia," on the occasion of a short cruise given by invitation of the owner, Mr. Edward Balbach, Jr., candidate for Congress in the 6th District. The Committee report affairs as highly favorable to the election of Hancock & English and the State ticket.

A MERRY party of New Brunswickers enjoyed themselves at Col. Miller's (the well known Laing's) Hotel last Friday evening, the occasion being a game supper gotten up by him in their honor and by their solicitation. Among those present were Messrs. Jno. C. Howard and C. Meyer, E. H. Johnson, E. Bushmore, H. A. Taylor, H. A. Perry, Chas. Aiken and ladies Mrs. Dr. P. A. Shannon, Misses S. and L. Fisher, Meyer, Green, Polk, Garretson, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Saunders. It is needless to say that mine host Miller did all in his power to make every one of his guests feel at home and gave them an unequalled repast.

THE high wind of Monday morning last caused the sheers, over which passed the wire cable sustaining the Hancock & English banner in front of the Democratic headquarters, to its anchorage on top of Berry's building, to topple over, the cable striking the top of a chimney and sweeping the bricks off to Compton's lane below. In their descent, with the sheers, a brick struck a large plate glass window in the side of Compton's Confectionery and Bakery building and shivered it to pieces. Pedestrians passing beneath narrowly escaped being struck by the flying debris of the chimney. The anchorage was to another chimney, which stood firm, and the banner continued to swing in mid-air, although one end was lower than the other. It was drawn in later in the day, the cable placed in proper position and the banner again run out, where it now swings as gracefully as before.

THE Republican Wigwam was well occupied Thursday evening of last week to listen to the remarks of Rev. Dr. Vincent, who had agreed to speak politically before the assemblage that should listen to him on that occasion. While we are not advocates of the doctrine displayed by the eminent divine in question, as to the propriety of a [illegible] in his [illegible] addressing a political gathering, we [illegible] acknowledge, from the stand point he took on the occasion that he is not a success as a political orator, for the reason that he takes, (especially on this occasion) as his objective point an exploded subject of twenty years standing—slavery. The Doctor's main object seemed to be to instill into the minds of his hearers that the colored voter of the South is not allowed the privilege to exercise the elective franchise by casting his ballot freely and fearlessly. He claimed that the former master stood over and intimidated the negro with threats and violence when he went to the polls to vote. Of course he meant that the master was a Democrat and the colored man a Republican. It is unnecessary for us to reproduce the gentleman's remarks in full as his hearers [illegible] remember it all. The Doctor's speech was preceded by a [illegible] from Judge Chilion Robbins, the candidate for Congress in the 2d District against Hon. Miles Ross. The Judge's remarks were principally [illegible] to the ladies of the audience, [illegible] Mr. Ross. Very well, Judge, but you will have to look somewhere else for your votes, if you want to beat Miles Ross—which you will not do.

SEE Council Proceedings. They are interesting.

THE premium list of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair appears on the first page of this issue.

VANDERVEER, the well-known hatter, of course took a premium at the Fair for his beautiful display of latest styles.

IT now appears to be a settled fact that Mr. J. L. Miller of Westfield will receive and accept the Republican nomination for Assemblyman from this district.

THE Republicans say that [illegible], which is the number of Southern States that the Republicans will lose in the coming election. But what does it mean?

MR. DAVID Runyon exhibited a beautiful specimen of his skill in sign writing at the Fair. He displays fine taste in that direction, as the many handsome signs painted by him in this city attest.

DON'T bet on election. You will thereby lose your right to vote.—Central Times.

And—that journal might have advised its Republican friends—you will also lose your money.

TWO images that beat as one, went up for thirty days each (and both) last Monday. Judge Runyon is doing himself honor and the city a favor, by thus dealing out justice where it will do the most good.

VANDERBEEK, the Park avenue dealer in musical instruments and sporting goods, made his name still further famous last week, by his exhibit of a show case of beautiful goods in his line, for which he received a premium.

AMONG the many novel and ingenious exhibits at the Fair last week, was a complete set of ladies' jewelry, made from fish scales, the handiwork of Mrs. C. B. Rogers, of this city. The entry was awarded the premium it deserved.

THAT John H. Murray's ability to place before the public a moral and interesting circus well worth attending, still exists, was proven to the inhabitants of Plainfield on last Friday afternoon and evening. That ever popular manager retains his popularity.

MESSRS. Curtiss & Griffen, our Front street merchants received first and second premiums for goods displayed by them at the Fair last week, one being for best reaper and another for plow. They deserved the honor accorded for the display they made.

AWAY with the mill ponds. Bound Brook will have to succumb to the inevitable by ridding herself of a nuisance in the shape of a malaria breeding mill pond, and so will Plainfield. The sooner it is done the better for health and fewer doctors bills.

DEMAREST, the grocer, still continues to be a favorite with families desiring to purchase good goods at low prices. One would judge from the manner in which his delivery wagons drive away from the store, heavily loaded with ordered goods, that he was doing most of the trade of the city.

THE universal remark of the ladies who gazed upon the beautiful watches displayed by Mr. Augustus Saltzman at the Fair last week, was—"Oh! isn't that a darling? How I wish I had it!" Husbands, beaus, cousins, etc., will find Mr. Saltzman at his place of business No. 15 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

PROFESSOR Fowler's "Amazon" composed entirely of roots, herbs and barks, is claimed to be a positive cure for diphtheria and malarial fevers. Those who have used it speak very highly of its curative powers, and we heartily recommend all who are afflicted to give it a trial. R. J. Shaw is the sole agent.

MESSRS Curtiss & Griffen are placing on the market one of the most original and useful of cooking attachments. It consists of an enclosed broiler which catches all the escaping juices of chops and steaks, prevents any smell from passing into the kitchen and cooks everything to perfection. Call and see it.

AT the annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association, held on Monday afternoon, the following officers were elected: Mrs. Dr. C. H. Stillman, president, Mrs. E. A. Ginna, vice-president, Mrs. Dr. Burlingham, secretary, and Mrs. Jos. M. Myers, treasurer. A board of twelve directors was also chosen.

THE low prices and stylish make of Colyer & Co, the Newark clothier's, suits and overcoats, cannot fail in the future to secure that firm a continuance of the patronage they have obtained in the past. They justly claim to furnish as handsome and serviceable goods, at as reasonable a price, as any of their competitors.

THE original New Orleans University Jubilee Singers entertained a select audience of music lovers at the Methodist Episcopal Church on Friday evening last. All who were present expressed themselves as pleased and charmed with the vocalists, and we trust that the managers of the affair reaped as large a benefit as was deserved.

THE Lincoln Glee Club persist in singing—"Give us a man whom the right will pursue. Garfield's the man!" Every one is acquainted with this fact, and also that the right will keep on pursuing "General" Garfield all his life to command have no better luck in catching him than it ever had. But it is hardly policy for the Republicans to give it away.

THE many customers of Mrs. P. Dunn on Front street, who remember kindly the always willing services and courteous attention of Miss Gussie Winans, will unite in sympathy with the many personal friends and relatives who are called upon to mourn the young lady's demise. She died on Tuesday morning last, of nervous fever.

THE Local Circle of the C. L. S. C., held its first meeting of the season on Tuesday evening last. Miss K. Kimball favored the attendance with an interesting paper, and the Rev. J. L. Hulbert gave a review of past and present history. Appropriate remarks by Messrs. L. V. F. Randolph and Alexander Gilbert, followed.

THE ever willing services of Mr. Geo. Lissigcole, tending towards the amusement of the young, were kindly contributed on Saturday last in the Church of the Holy Cross. A large party greeted Mr. L's always enjoyable Punch and Judy show, and the scholars of the Sunday School were favored with an afternoon of continuous pleasure and amusement.

THE work shown at our public schools during the past month (the first of the term), is most encouraging and decidedly flattering to their principal and teachers. Let us hope that this result is not occasioned by the fact of its being a change to get back to school again, but that the scholars will continue to retain a high standard of excellence.

A DRAMATIC entertainment, for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital Fund, will be held in Vandeventer Hall, the evening of Oct. 26. The play—Buckstone's Comedy, entitled "Married Life," will be rendered by amateur talent, well instructed and qualified to act their respective parts. The entertainment will be one well worth attending, while the object is a charitable and worthy one.

THE Newark Daily Advertiser and other prominent State papers speak in glowing praise of the success of the Second Annual Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, held near this city last week, and accord due credit and praise to President John I. Holly, Secretary Vosseller and the whole Board of Directors for their untiring efforts in making the Fair the success it was. We heartily endorse their sentiments. The gentlemen mentioned are justly entitled to the encomiums showered upon them by the press and the public generally.

She was One Ahead.

A prize was offered for the mother who presented the greatest number of her own children at the Indiana State Fair. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Line were each accompanied to the Fair by nine, but Mrs. Line gave birth to a tenth on the grounds, and so took the prize.

THE firemen's parade next Thursday, will excel all previous efforts in magnificence and numbers.

Seasonable.

Birdie, get my flannels ready,
For the summer winds are dying,
And in dells by birds deserted
Poplar leaves are chilly sighing.
All the little flowers are faded
And the woods are dark and sere—
Ah, my soul is chilled and jaded—
Bring my flannels, Birdie dear.

Moral.—Go to Laing's Gents' Furnishing Store.

The Y. M. C. A. Lecture Course.

The Lecture Committee is actively engaged in arranging the Annual Course of entertainments which will be given in the [illegible] Episcopal Church instead of the customary place, which is not available this season. The list will embrace Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, John B. Gough, Archibald Forbes, the famous War correspondent of the London News, (just arrived in this country) the Mendelssohn Quintette Club of Boston, Miss Nellie F. Brown, who stands at the head of the list as a reader, and Hon. Wm. Parsons. Arrangements are in progress for a first-class instrumental and vocal concert in addition to the foregoing. Due notice will be given of date for sale of Tickets and reserved seats.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

Mr. R. G. Miller, Republican City Collector, of New Brunswick, against whom a bill of indictment for embezzling $47,000 of the city money was found by the Grand Jury on Monday, was on Wednesday last arrested and placed under bonds in $10,000.

Coming!

Our readers remember with so much pleasure the past visits of the New Orleans Minstrels, that we publish the following merely to show that that combination has been holding its own ever since. They perform here again at Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday evening next!

"Last Tuesday evening the New Orleans Minstrels gave an entertainment at Union Hall which surpassed anything of the kind ever given in town. The music especially was very fine, and the "Gold Band" was heartily applauded by the large audience present. The feats of L. F. Benjamin on the cornet were wonderful, and superior to anything we ever listened to. We hope this company may again visit us in the near future.—Littleton, N. H., Republic, June 17."

A Sneak Thief.

While the Seminary boarders were at supper on Saturday evening last, a bold sneak thief entered the rooms of Mrs. Marsden and her daughter in the upper part of the house and appropriated several articles of jewelry. The amount at which the stolen articles are rated is $200, which figure is estimated upon a consideration of their value as keepsakes and gifts of friends; in consequence, a reward of $50 which has been offered for their return, may be the means of the recovery of the articles. The thief was seen crossing the hall of the building by a lady inmate, but no clue as to the direction he took was obtained. Officer Randolph was notified and Captain Dodd was placed in possession of the facts; but, up to this time nothing new in relation to the affair has transpired.

Trotting at the Fair.

The closing races at the U. & M. C. M. A. A's Fair of last week, resulted in victories for C. E. Colwell's (Philadelphia, Pa.,) brown mare Doris and T. Grady's (Albany N. Y.) chestnut gelding Fred Casey. The former won in 4 races for those who had never beaten 2:40, $120 to first, $60 to second and $30 to the third. The latter (Fred Casey) in the 2:35 class, defeated J. W. Johnson's (Plainfield) Sciola and T. Pyncheon's (Brooklyn) Parole, in three straight heats on Friday afternoon. The race was carried over from the day before, at which time both Parole and Sciola had gained first place in two heats each. Contrary to the expectation of everybody, except Casey's driver and backers, the horse won in the fastest time of the meeting, and considerable money was "dropped." The bridle and whip offered for the best heat was presented to Mr. Grady at the close of the race.

P. A. C.

The Plainfield Athletic Club will inaugurate the Fall opening of their Gymnasium on the 16th of October, under the management of their last year's tutor, Prof. Burnham, who will have charge of the instruction of classes in the Club's Gymnasium the approaching season. It is only necessary for our readers, or those desirous of patronizing this really beneficial institution, to turn to the files of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and learn what was said of him by that journal during his reign as instructor of the classes of the Gymnasium last year, to acknowledge that the officers and members of P. A. C. have acted judiciously in re-engaging this well-known and proficient instructor in gymnastics for an ensuing season. The Club is prosperous and is officered by gentlemen who will make the institution a still greater success than that which they have enjoyed since its inception.

Giving up all Hope.

Said a resident of our city to a Republican, one day recently, during a political discussion. "My friend if you had a very sick child what would you do?"

"I would call in a doctor," was the reply.

"And if after such action there was no improvement in its health, what course would you then pursue?"

"Call in another."

"If the child in spite of their abilities sank still lower, what then?"

"I would get together the most prominent members of the medical profession and have a consultation held."

"Then, supposing they gave up all hope and said it must die?"

"I would call in a clergyman," replied the Republican.

"Ah!" said the questioner "that's what you did at the Wigwam on Thursday evening last."

Union County Courts.

The October term of the Union County Courts commenced on Tuesday morning last. There are several important cases pending on the Court calendar, both criminal and civil. Especial interest is manifested in two Plainfield cases, one of which is that of John Johnson charged with the murder of Samuel Williams in this city a few weeks since, another that of "Hot," or Wm. Slater, charged with shooting at and wounding a white man named Keefe some months since. Both culprits are colored men. The following is a list of the Grand and Petit Jurors:

DECORATE your dwellings in honor of the firemen next Thursday.

Sentence of Hart Moore.

In the Middlesex County Courts last Monday, before Judges Scudder, Cogswell, Scott and Newton, came up the matter of indictment against Hart Moore, former Collector of the County, for embezzlement of County funds. Prosecutor Cowenhoven, on the part of the State moved for sentence to be passed upon the accused. Counsel for defendant, A. V. Schenck, Esq., in a few remarks, touching many of the important points in the noted trial, stated that his client should have the benefit of the Court of last resort, and it seemed unjust that this Court should send a man to prison when his case is being discussed in the Court of last resort. Prosecutor Cowenhoven, in reply, said that the defendant had been shown every leniency. He had never shown any defence, and all responsibility of his conviction should rest upon his own shoulders. He asked that the Court should remember the crime and not the man; justice must follow the criminal and sympathy should follow for his crime afterward. Prosecutor Cowenhoven was deeply affected throughout his remarks. Mr. Moore was then commanded by the Court to stand up and receive sentence, Judge Scudder addressing him as follows:

"Mr. Moore, it becomes my duty as Presiding Justice to pronounce upon you [illegible]"

REMEMBER our gallant "fire laddies" by [illegible] your premises on the occasion of the annual parade of the Department next Thursday.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EV'G, Oct. 4, 1880.

Council met in regular session.

Present—Darling, Dunlap, Flanders, Finch, Potts, Redfield, Rushmore, Ryder, Whiton. Absent—Cornell, Lidgway.

Pres. Potts in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Flanders presented com'n from St. Com'r Geo. M. Angleman calling the attention of Council to the bad condition of some of the streets in the city. Ref'd to the Com. on Sts.

A com'n was read from Wm. H. Voorhees, Chief of Plainfield Fire Dep't, inviting Council to inspect the Department on the occasion of the parade, Thursday, Oct. 14.

On motion, the Clerk was instructed to make the necessary arrangements in compliance with the invitation.

Mr. Finch presented com'n from [illegible] of Alert Hose Co., for permission to erect a floral arch over Madison ave., from the Hose Co's. house, on the occasion of the parade of the Plainfield Fire Dep't, Thursday, Oct. 14. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps.

A com'n was read from Jas. Donohue, asking the payment of his claim, $7, killing dogs, etc. Ref'd to Law & Ord. Com.

Mr. Finch presented petition from Gilford Mayer and others, for the erection of 1 or 2 lamps on Park Ave. near the residences of the petitioners. Ref'd to Com. on Lamps.

Mr. Ryder presented the following claims; H. Runyon, $75; Geo. F. Raydam, $65; Henry Hamilton, $20 50; O. H. Leonard, $75; J. S. Collier, $79 [illegible]. Ref'd to Salary Com. Also, corrected claim of John M. Schorb, $173. Ref'd to Alms Com.

Mr. Whiton presented claims as follows: J. VanWinkle, $75; Lewis S. Clark, $165. Ref'd to Salary Com.

Mr. Redfield presented the following claims: T. J. Gillies, $30; A. M. Runyon, $83; L. A. Rhenage, $12 [illegible]; A. T. Shotwell, Ag't, $30; David Hand, $225 19; A. V. Searing, $74 50. Ref'd to Alms Com.

Mr. Flanders presented the following claims; Geo. M. Angleman, St. Com'r, $31 25; S. C. Ryder, sprinkling Park Ave. to city line, during the fair, $[illegible]. Ref'd to St. Com.

Mr. Rushmore presented the following police claims for month of September: Chas. W. Dodd, $58 [illegible]; R. Hegeney, $43 42; M. Conway, $3 25; Edward Vorhy, $7 75; Geo. W. Grant, $4 50; Chas. W. Dodd's bill for August, $26 [illegible]. Ref'd to Police Com.

Mr. Whiton presented quarterly report of City Treasurer J. VanWinkle, which on motion, was read and filed.

The Clerk then read St. Com'r Geo. M. Angleman's claim for filling up the much-talked of "Gravel Pits," (1,000 cubic yards) $400. Also, a statement from a civil engineer as to the correctness of the claim, and a com'n from the Board of Health, as follows:

To the Common Council.

GENTLEMEN:—The Board of Health take pleasure in informing the Common Council that the long existing and deleterious nuisances known as the "gravel pits" have been abated.

In compliance with the requisition of this Board, the Land Improvement Company promptly filled in the pit located on their premises. The owner of the larger pit (Voorhees) failing to respond to a similar requirement, proposals for doing the work were publicly invited, and a contract awarded in due course to George M. Angleman, he being the lowest bidder.

Members of the Board have personally inspected the work of filling in and are well satisfied with the result.

We submit herewith the contract claim of Mr. Angleman, $400, and ask that a warrant be ordered drawn therefor, in conformity with the action of Council of February 16th last, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Board of Health be and hereby are authorized to expend such an amount, not exceeding four hundred dollars, to abate the nuisance known as the Gravel Pits in this city, the expense of so abating such nuisance to be assessed upon the owners or occupants of the premises whereon such nuisance exists."

Measures will be taken by the Corporation Counsel to collect from the parties liable, in pursuance of law, the amount expended under the foregoing named resolution.

Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 4th, 1880.

NATHAN HARPER,
W. ROCKHILL POTTS,
GEO. P. SUYDAM,
Board of Health.
H. H. LOWRIE, M. D.,
Secretary.

Mr. Ryder moved that the report of the Board of Health be received and the recommendation of the Board be adopted. Carried. All aye.

City Clerk read com'n stating that he had given receipts for licenses to parties running stages during the fair, to the amount of $63. Report received and licenses granted according to the report of City Clerk.

Mr. Whiton, from Select Com. on Water, reported progress in reference to Plainfield Water Supply Co.; the absence of Mr. Lithgow prevented a written report being made.

Mr. Redfield, from Alms Com., reported the following claims as correct: H. S. Ayres, $36; T. J. Prudon, $30; Wm. C. Ayres, ag't, $12; S. R. Young, $1 50; W. W. Connoly, $16; H. McAlister, $24; David Hand, $225 19; A. T. Shotwell, $30; T. J. Gillies, $30; John M. Schorb, $73; Plainfield Relief Ass'n, $44 13; A. V. Searing, $72 50. On motion, ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Whiton, from Finance Com., presented his monthly report of the city's finances, which shows a balance in the Treasury to the credit of the General Fund of $4,681 16; to credit of Poor Fund, $1,223 09. On motion, report received and placed on file.

Mr. Darling, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported favorably for one lamp on Park ave., as to the petition presented this evening. On motion, report received and recommendation adopted. All aye.

Mr. Rushmore, from Law & Ord. Com., reported as correct claim of Jas. Donohue, $7. On motion, ref'd to Aud. Com.

By the same—The two petitions relative to New street sewer assessment, and also matter of refunding money to hackmen, would make no report, but asked their reference to the Corporation Counsel. On motion, so ref'd.

By the same—The petition of Hotel Netherwood for a license, they find conforms to the Ord., and would recommend that the license be granted. On motion, report rec'd and license granted by the following vote: Ayes—Darling, Finch, Potts, Rushmore, Redfield, Whiton—6. Nays—Dunlap, Flanders, Ryder—3.

Mr. Finch, from Police Com., reported as correct the Police claims presented this evening. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Rushmore said that the Police Board held a meeting last Saturday evening, and would report the Police in good working condition.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections, reported the following claims as correct: J. VanWinkle, 3 bills, $150; O. H. Leonard, $75; H. Hamilton, $20 50; H. H. Lowrie, $62 50; J. A. Hubbard, $161 25; Morgan Bird, $4 50. On motion, referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Ryder presented a res. that the following polling places be designated for holding the election Nov. 2d, 1880: 1st District, Laing's Hotel; 2d District, Hoagland's Express Office, North Ave.; 3d District, Seaman's Livery Stable, 6th St., near Park ave. Adopted.

By the same—A res. that the City Clerk be instructed to give proper notice for holding election Nov. 2d, 1880. Ad'pd.

Mr. Ryder arose and asked for some information in regard to the payment of the salary claims of City Judge H. Runyon. He said he did not think he was performing his duties as the Council requires.

Mr. Finch was of the same opinion.

Mr. Redfield thought that the claims should be paid; impeachment was the only [illegible], and would therefore move that the claims be endorsed by the Com. as correct. So agreed to. Mr. Finch voting in the negative.

Mr. Flanders reported as correct the claims of St. Com'r Angleman and S. C. Ryder. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Flanders asked for an appropriation of $500 for putting the streets in good condition for the approaching Winter, which will include the laying of cross-walks on 7th and 8th Sts.

Mr. Darling moved that the sum of $300 be appropriated to the Com. on Sts.

After some discussion, Mr. Flanders said he would ask that the appropriation be made $500. Which on motion, was adopted. All aye.

On motion, the rules were suspended and the following claims from the Salary Com. were presented; Judge H. Runyon, 2 bills, $150. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Considerable discussion was had at this stage of the meeting in reference to the Green Brook and other nuisances. A majority of the Council were of the opinion that [illegible]

Mr. Finch moved that the Board of Health be requested to co-operate with the St. Com. So agreed to.

Mr. Darling, from Aud. Com., reported the following claims as correct: [illegible] Ryder, $22; Geo. E. Angleman, [illegible] bills, $31 25; Geo. F. Raydam, $75; O. H. Leonard, $75; J. VanWinkle, 4 claims, $150; H. Hamilton, $20 50, and the police claims presented this evening. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

Mr. Finch moved that when Council adjourns it adjourn to meet two weeks from to-night. Agreed to.

On motion, Council adjourned.

Westfield Awake!

The Democrats of Westfield had a splendid meeting last Tuesday night at their headquarters. R. A. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, spoke for over an hour, and his able argument was frequently interrupted with applause. It would be well for the Democratic party of Union county if they would see more of Mr. Lindabury. The Westfield Glee Club entertained the meeting with several excellent campaign songs, which were sung with good taste and spirit, and added to the enthusiasm of the occasion. Westfield will give a splendid exhibit for Hancock in November.

Familiarity.

Mr. Chilion Robbins the would-be Congressman, proved himself to be on Thursday evening of last week, a most peculiar man. Not only was his appeal to the ladies to persuade their husbands to vote for him, because Mrs. Chilion Robbins wanted him to be elected, a peculiar style of electioneering bosh; but his statement for the benefit of his "Irish friends," to the effect that if Hancock was elected the Queen of England would rule this country also, was a peculiar kind of a bug-a-boo. Many a Republican leader on the Wigwam platform was noticed on the ragged edge when Mr. Robbins held up for derision the Cobden Club, but as reading one-sided campaign literature had prevented the audience from knowing the fact that "General" Garfield was a member of that club, this peculiar argument against the Democracy was harmless in its result.

MANY strangers will be in town next Thursday to witness the Firemen's Parade. Give them a right royal welcome by decorating your places of business.

1873 vs. 1880.

We are indebted to our staunch Democratic friend, K. T. Folsk, of Netherwood, for a copy of the scarce-to-be-had issue of Harper's Weekly, dated March 15, 1873, which contains a caricature by that partisan sketcher, Thos. Nast, on the Garfield $329 steal. In that sketch of his appears Columbia, with shamed and angry countenance, denouncing the whole gang of political frauds and perjurers who were interested in that "little one" which has blackened forever the character of the Republican candidate for President. She is pointing to a group composed of James A. Garfield, Patterson, Colfax, Bingham, Oakes Ames, Dawes and Kelly, the Credit Mobilier gang, and to the Poland Committee, who whitewashed their character. Above their heads appears the following:

"Disgraced in the eye of the public for accepting Credit Mobilier Stock which was in fact, and intent, a fraud upon the Government. Also for Deceit and Evasion.—The high trust of legislation violated.—The people will not long respect the laws if they lose respect for the law-makers."

Advocates of Garfield's election to the highest office in the gift of the people, should secure a copy of the issue of 1873 and compare Nast's drawings with that of 1880.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Day (nee Voorhees) have taken up their residence in Brooklyn for the coming Winter.

Hon. Neal Dow, of Maine, Prohibition candidate for President, was in our city Sunday night last as the guest of A. M. Powell, Esq.

Mr. Charles Dunn of this city has been nominated as the Princeton College Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey. His letter of acceptance has not yet been given to the press.

Mr. A. Frasee, Plainfield's local expressman, has returned to duty from his recreation trip. During his absence his son George has carefully attended to the wants of his father's patrons.

Mr. L. A. Dunn, General Newspaper Agent for the Central Railroad and its divisions, is spending a few days among friends at Lake George, whither he has gone to recuperate his health.

Our genial friend and fellow citizen, James E. Perrine, is on the Prohibition electoral ticket in favor of Dow and Thompson for President and Vice President. It will likely receive several votes in this vicinity.

Fire Commissioner Morris was able to be at his office in New York again on Wednesday, for the first time in some weeks. A long siege of painful sickness has left him somewhat weak, but the old vigor will soon renew his lost strength.

Gov. Geo. B. McClellan was the guest of Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of this city, Thursday of last week, during the occasion of the Fair of Union and Middlesex Counties. The Governor did not visit the Fair Grounds, as business engagements compelled his departure from our city to his home at an early hour in the day.

The executive Committee of the Hancock Veteran Association of this State visited General Hancock at Governor's Island yesterday morning. The party accompanied Mr. Edward Balbach, Jr., on that gentleman's yacht "Julia." Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of this city, was one of the number.

Archbishop Corrigan.

THE DIOCESE OF NEWARK'S GRIEF OVER HIS APPROACHING DEPARTURE.

Probably no other diocese in the United States has been so greatly honored by the Holy See as the Diocese of Newark. First, Rev. Dr. McQuade, while President of Seton Hall College, was appointed first Bishop of Rochester; then the late Most Rev. James Roosevelt Bayley was promoted to the Archbishopric of Baltimore, and Pope Pius IX. appointed Rev. Dr. Corrigan his successor as Bishop of Newark. Recently Very Rev. George H. Doane, V. G., and pastor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, this city, was made a Domestic Prelate of the Papal Household; and now Pope Leo XIII. advances Right Rev. Bishop Corrigan to be Coadjutor to the Cardinal Archbishop of New York, with the right of succession. While there is great rejoicing among the Catholics of New Jersey at the high honor conferred upon their chief pastor, yet this joy is mingled with heartfelt sorrow caused by the thought that they will soon lose the best of fathers.

A reporter visited Seton Hall on Wednesday, and had an audience with the next Archbishop of New York. He said that he had hoped that either Bishop Loughlin of Brooklyn or Archbishop Lynch of Charleston would have been selected by the Holy See, rather than himself. He had done everything possible to prevent his appointment. His heart was filled with sorrow at the thought of severing his ties with the Diocese of Newark, but as he was simply a soldier, he would unhesitatingly bow to the decree of the Pontiff.

Since Bishop Corrigan's appointment as successor to Bishop Bayley, the Feast of St. Michael has been joyfully observed every year at Seton Hall. Wednesday there was a feeling of commingled joy and sorrow on account of the telegram from Rome. The warm affection expressed by the students and seminarians is shared by the clergy and laity throughout the diocese. Shortly after 11 o'clock the clerical and lay professors, the ecclesiastical students and the collegians of Seton Hall were assembled in the study room, when the Bishop entered, escorted by Father James H. Corrigan, President of the college. They were received with an outburst of applause. The Bishop occupied a chair upon a dais and addresses were presented to him by Rev. William F. Marshall, on behalf of the seminarians, and Mr. Charles J. Shaw of the class of '81 on behalf of the collegians. Bishop Corrigan made a brief address to the students.—New York Star.

FIRE MATTERS.

A special meeting of "Gazelle" Eng. Co. No. 1, will be held in their parlors on this Saturday evening. A full attendance is requested, as matters pertaining to the coming parade will be brought forward.

The firemen's parade at New Brunswick last Tuesday, was a fine affair. A number of our firemen were guests of the various companies on the occasion.

Chief Voorhees, was on Saturday evening, the recipient of a handsome present from a friend at the "Alert" Hose Company's rooms. The present is a beautiful silver badge, made by [illegible], the Badge man, No. 24 Ann street, N. Y. The design is oval shaped, the [illegible] divided by a section of hose, with [illegible] "Chief Plainfield F. D." [illegible]

NEXT Thursday, Oct. 14th, our city will be alive with enthusiasm because of our "fire laddies," the occasion being the annual parade of the Fire Department of Plainfield. On that day there will be present many distinguished guests from abroad, who will be honored by grand receptions from the various companies of which they are guests, and who will undoubtedly return home with pleasant memories of the hospitality of Plainfield firemen, whose reputation in that line is never forgotten. Unlike many cities in this and other States, Plainfield cannot boast of a paid Fire Department. Ours is composed of members who do their duty fearlessly and faithfully, without pay, and has the reputation of classing among its members some of our best and most influential citizens. Its reputation, also, for hospitality to visiting brethren is a most enviable one. As an old "vet"—one whom the writer has, in former days, stood side by side with, battling their common enemy—"fire," in many a well contested instance, remarked on the Fair Grounds the other day—"when the Plainfield boys have a parade, I want to be there; they never do things by halves." Having this reputation, it behooves our citizens to assist in making the coming parade something to be proud of in the annals of the Department. Having assisted pecuniarily, now go farther, and make the occasion one to be talked over for days to come by lending attraction to the festivities of the day in decorating your places of business and residences in a proper manner in honor of the event, as other cities of less pretension than Plainfield have done and continue to do on like occasions. A word to the wise, etc., in this connection should be sufficient. Annexed we give the line of march and position of Companies on the day of parade:

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Sheriff Van Rensselaer of Essex County has utilized a pond at the Penitentiary grounds at Caldwell for the propagation of fish for the benefit of the abiders in the institution. The pond has been stocked with three hundred black bass.

October will close the season's shooting at the Stockton rifle range, Camden, N. J. There are sixteen events on the month's programme. The Pennsylvania State Rifle Association will hold their annual tournament at the range on the 11th, 12th and 13th.

The Fish Commissioners have a number of persons employed at present taking black bass from the Delaware river and distributing the same in ponds and streams of the interior of the State. It is expected that between 4,000 and 5,000 will be thus distributed.

John P. T. Voorhees, aged forty-five years, living at Griggstown, twelve miles from New Brunswick, while painting his house, fell from a ladder Monday morning last, and broke his neck. John Cook, forty years of age, a well-known citizen, ran a nail into his foot last week, and died of lockjaw the same morning in great agony.

On Sunday afternoon, some 150 quail, who probably did not believe in traveling on that day, lighted in the State Prison and State Arsenal ground, and on Second street. They remained in that vicinity for hours, although chased by citizens. Two of them flew against a brick house on Second street and were killed.—Trenton True American.

The Sussex Herald says that wood tick are playing sad havoc with the partridge. Last week one was found dead in the woods by one of our sportsmen, who upon examination, found thirty-two of these insects under the skin of the bird near the neck. Several of these game birds have been found dead in the woods in this section of the county.

As we are often asked about the "closed seasons" for different kinds of game we publish the following synopsis of the laws:

IT IS NOT LAWFUL TO KILL ANY.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS

The Democrats of North Plainfield will meet at Dealer's Hotel on Saturday the 9th instant at 8 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the County and Assembly conventions to be held at Somerville on Thursday, October 14. At these conventions will be nominated candidates for Sheriff, County Clerk and Assemblyman from the first and second districts. The importance of a full meeting on the 9th will be understood by all, and it is hoped that every one will attend.

The increasing popularity of Mr. Jos. Klein's new hotel is a sure sign that its proprietor is unfailing in his desire to entirely please his customers. A bowling-alley (the only one in the city) has been finished; and the extensive ballroom, will undoubtedly be greatly patronized during the coming winter.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SOME FEATS IN SWIMMING.

Somewhat over forty years ago, a seaman belonging to her Majesty's ship Orestes threw himself overboard as a means of escaping punishment for some offence. He was picked up by a fishing boat seven hours afterward off the coast of Spain, and stated that he had been swimming towards the land all the time. About the same period, two men swam up the river Mersey from Liverpool to Runcorn; they accomplished the distance in something less than four hours. Passing over a long interval, during which many swims were recorded of a few hours duration, we come to the more recent exploits of Capt. Webb, certainly the most remarkable swimmer of whom we have authentic record. After some notable achievements in the Irish Sea, he undertook the astonishing feat of swimming across the English Channel, despite its very rough sea. On the first attempt, he could only reach part of the way, and was for safety brought back, but an attempt, in 1875, was quite successful; he swam for nearly twenty-two hours continuously, from Dover to the French coast near Calais; he was supplied occasionally with refreshments by persons near at hand, but he never touched boat or ground during this prolonged interval. In the same year a young damsel, Miss Agnes Beckwith, daughter of Beckwith, the teacher of swimming, gave clear proof that the weaker sex is strong enough to achieve remarkable results in this art; she swam down the Thames from London Bridge to Greenwich, amid the crowded shipping of that part of the river. In a spirit of emulation, Emily Parker, daughter of another professional swimmer, slightly exceeded Agnes Beckwith's distance by swimming from London Bridge to Blackwall. Cavill, another swimming master, accomplished the distance from Dover to Ramsgate; he was six hours and a half doing the feat, but he was more distressed with the heat of the sun beating down upon his head and the sunshine glaring into his eyes than with fatigue. Quite recently the London public have been astonished by proofs of the great length of time that persons can remain floating with or without swimming. At the Westminster Aquarium is a large tank constructed for the temporary reception of a live whale. In this tank Agnes Beckwith remained afloat for 30 hours, without touching ground or sides of the tank, singing a little and occasionally reading a newspaper to pass away the dreary monotony, and taking refreshments handed to her. The water had a strong infusion of salt thrown in it to increase its buoyancy. Since that time Capt. Webb has eclipsed everything else of the kind known. In the recent month of May he remained in the whale-tank no less than 60 hours continuously, floating all the time, and never touching sides or bottom.—Chambers' Journal.

MARK TWAIN'S STORY OF THE CATS.

When I was fourteen years old, I lived with my parents, who were very poor and correspondingly honest. We had a youth living with us by the name of Jim Wolfe. He was decidedly a fine fellow, seventeen years old, and very diffident. He and I usually slept together—virtuously—and on one very cold Winter's night a cousin Mary—she's married now and gone—gave what they called a candy pulling in those days, in the West, and they took the saucers of hot candy outside of the house in the snow, under a sort of old bower that came out from the eaves—it was a sort of an ell then, all covered with vines—to cool this hot candy in the snow, and they were all sitting around there, and in the meantime we had gone to bed; we were not invited to attend this party—we were too young. The young ladies and gentlemen were assembled there, and Jim and I were in bed. There was about four inches of snow on the roof of this ell, and our window looked out on to it, and it was frozen hard. A couple of tom-cats—it is possible one might have been of the opposite sex—were assembled on the chimney, in the middle of this ell, and they were growling at a fearful rate, and switching their tails about, and going on, and we couldn't sleep at all. Finally, Jim said:

"For two cents I'd go out and shake them cats off that chimney."

So I said, "Of course you would."

He said, "Well, I would."

I said again: "Of course you would."

He said: "I have a mighty good notion to do it anyhow."

Says I, "Of course you have; certainly you have; you have a great notion to do it."

Finally I got his ambition up, and he raised the window, and climbed out on the icy roof, with nothing on but his socks and a very short shirt.

He went climbing along on all fours on the roof toward the chimney where the cats were.

In the meantime those young ladies and gentlemen were enjoying themselves down under the eaves.

When Jim reached the chimney he arose to his feet, leaned around the corner, holding on by one hand and made a pass at the cats. He missed his aim, lost his hold on the chimney, his heels flew up, and he shot down and crashed thro' those vines, and lit in the midst of those ladies and gentlemen, and sat down in those saucers of hot candy.

There was a general stampede, of course, and he came up stairs dropping pieces of china ware and candy all the way up, and when he got up there—now anybody in the world would have gone into profanity or something calculated to relieve the mind, but he didn't—he scraped the candy off his legs, nursed his blisters a little, and said:

"I could have ketched them cats if I had had on a good ready."

THE GREEDY LITTLE MOUSE.

Tottie and Lillie were twins, with the same wide open blue eyes, the same rosy dimples, and bright yellow hair. One day when they were seated at the little table in the nursery, eating their dinner—for they were too young yet to dine with their mamma—Tottie thought she saw a little black bead shining in a hole by the closet door. No, it could not be a bead, for it popped in and out. Presently out came a little pointed nose, ears, and two bright black—not beads—but eyes. The children sat very still, and thought they had never seen anything quite so pretty as the little plump body and long graceful tail whisking rapidly and mischievously, while the little creature peered cautiously about. Lillie gently threw a little piece of bread, but the startled little mouse thought it was surely intended to kill her, and fled back to her strong-hold in the closet. Tottie now put a little piece of bread quite close to the hole, and they had not long to wait [illegible] great pleasure of seeing her first nibble a little, and finally drag it into a hole. Lillie said, "Oh, don't you know, Tottie, mousie is the mother, and she has a lot of little children in her house, and that is going to be their dinner; let's give her some every day." And so they did, until mousie grew so tame and so wise she seemed to know the dinner hour, as well as they, and would come nearer and nearer, and run in and out under the table picking up the crumbs; but she was ever a little distrustful.

If any one made an effort to catch her or made ever so little noise, off she flew to her hole, and would wait, and peep out for some time, before she became re-assured. But when every one was fast asleep in bed, then she became very brave; but with all her fine feeling, Mrs. Mouse could not overcome her nature and I grieve to add, she was a thief. She would rummage in pockets for cakes and goodies, and climb to the highest shelf, if she smelt any dainty, and so, alas! fell a victim to her greedy propensities.

Nurse had put a bowl of liquid starch on a shelf in the closet, and mousie thinking she had a fine treat, scaled the side and reaching over for the dainty, lost her balance and tumbled in. The fluid was too heavy and the sides too slippery and steep for her to escape; so after vain efforts, she sank exhausted to the bottom.

The next day, and the next passed, and no mousie appeared at the usual hour. Tottie said she "knew the children were sick." But when the nurse went for her forgotten starch, the truth was revealed. Poor mousie was dead. Many tears fell, and although the children had many toys, nothing was equal to sly, active, bright-eyed, live little playfellow.—E. C. Harper's Young People.

THE WHOOPING COUGH.

It is remarkable how many children and grown people are afflicted with whooping cough. For their benefit the following remedies suggested by several correspondents of the New York Sun are submitted:

I have found the following a positive cure in a number of cases of whooping cough: Take the children for a sail on the salt water.

A very simple remedy for whooping cough, to give the children, is a glass or so of warm goat's milk every morning before breakfast, or, if that cannot be had, the same amount fresh from the cow.

Take a teaspoonful of brown sugar wet with sweet oil and as many drops of oil of cinnamon as the child is years old. This is to be taken three times a day.

To one tablespoonful of sperm oil put two of molasses; give quite frequently, the oftener the better. I have one child, and when she was five years old she would have choked to death had it not been for this simple remedy.

The following remedy for whooping cough proved most successful in my family, being the only medicine used while my nine children were sick: Five cents' worth ipecac, five cents' worth castor oil, five cents' worth paregoric, five cents' worth liquorice; mix in half a pint of common molasses; dose, a teaspoonful every two or three hours. If the quantity be not sufficient, replenish, as it is better to prepare often and have it fresh.

I would recommend the following as infallible: Put a pint of vinegar in a bowl. Then take a fresh egg, put it in the vinegar, and let it remain until the hard shell entirely disappears, which will probably be in less than twenty-four hours. Beat it with the vinegar, and add to it one pound of brown sugar, which is to be mixed thoroughly with the egg and vinegar. This will make a kind of syrup, which may be given to the little ones as often as you like through the day or night. It is a good old fashioned remedy, and has been well tried in my own family.

TO MAKE GOOD PURE CIDER.

Good sound, ripe apples should always be selected, and after sweating, before being crushed, wipe dry. As fast as the apples are ground the pomace should be placed in a previously prepared vat of suitable size, with false bottom. It is best to let the pomace remain in the vat over night before pressing, as this will give the cider a rich, fine color. To press out all the juice, we would recommend that the press be laid up with strainer cloth, and the pomace laid inside this with good sweet rye straw. Apply the power equally and moderately, giving plenty of time to drain, and immediately put in a cask, but be sure the cask is clean and sweet. Leave out the bung for a few days, keeping a small keg near by so as to keep the cask full, and also that as much pomace as possible will work out. As soon as worked to taste, bung up tightly and let it stand until thoroughly settled; then put a spigot in some three inches from the bottom of the cask, and run off into a clean, sweet barrel; add ten pounds of loaf sugar, per barrel, and you will have an excellent cider. In previous years we have noticed in many sections of the country a large crop of early apples, for which there is little or no market, and a great many are allowed to rot on the ground, which is a loss no farmer can afford or should allow. The best of these will make good cider, which in many localities will find a ready sale in the early part of the season, either in cities or country villages. The inferior apples, and the better class of wind-falls, should be saved to make vinegar.

SNOW-SHOEING IN NORWAY.

Of all the bodily exercises I know of there is none in my opinion that can come up to snow-shoeing, as it is done in Norway. Skating is nothing compared to this sport. What can equal the splendid sensation of flying across the deep snow at the rate of many miles an hour, without hardly moving a muscle? And then, going down hill, staff in hand, no exertion necessary other than to keep the balance, while gliding softly but swiftly onward. Unlike the Canadian snow-shoes, these ski (pronounced shee) of the Norwegians are often fully twelve feet long, curving upward at the prow, and are not broader than three or four inches. Throughout the whole length they are provided with a groove for the purpose of keeping them from slipping when going at an angle downhill. Although by no means slow when used across level ground, yet it is downhill that they are most effective, for their long length and their polished under-surface on the frozen snow gives a speed more like flying than any other motion I know of.

The inhabitants of Telemarken, in the south of Norway, are the most skilled old runners; and at the annual competitions at Christiania generally bear off the prize. At the competition there in 1879, one of these men [illegible] tance of thirty Norwegian miles, or fully sixty feet! Into this country it will not be possible to introduce them, as of course there would be little or no opportunity for using them—the snow never lying long enough, or becoming sufficiently deep.

* * *

In all the coal breakers of Pennsylvania small boys are employed to pick the slate and bad coal from the slides after the broken fragments have left the hopper; and often a single breaker will employ as many as fifty boys. They are little ragged urchins, black from morning until night with the soot of coal, but withal merry, mischievous, bright-eyed little fellows. The law prohibits the employment of any under ten years of age, but it is not uncommon for a miner to put his six-year old boy into the chutes for the 30 cents a day they can earn. These little fellows have something of a protective organization of their own. Insignificant as their labors appear to be, they have it in their power to stop the work of the whole company from the loft of the breaker to the stables of the mules, in the mines below. There is no use of mining the coal if it cannot be fired to the breaker and sorted by the boys; and hence all work ceases when the lads prefer to play. Just now the coal companies are in trouble with their boys, for Coup's circus is making a tour of the coal region and mining must stop while the boys go to the circus, and sometimes for a few days afterward, until they have tired of hanging by their legs to trees, walking fence rails, and otherwise indulging in imitations of the circus acrobats. When a circus approaches a mining town the mining company takes steps to corral the boys in the top of the breaker, but usually their quick wit and nimble legs are more than a match for the company.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring,) That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective Journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said entries to be made in the Journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made thereof according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS, Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS H. COOPER, Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be proposed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year," after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and every second year thereafter."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be into two classes; the seats of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

HEAVENWARD.

By [illegible].

In the meadows, by the woodland,
Rosy, dimpled feet and bare,
Wandering in the dawn of childhood,
A little babe without a care.

Light I caught the passing sunbeams,
Through the warm [illegible] air,
Tossed them back upon the meadows,
Threw them on the scented air.

By my side and ever watchful,
Lest my infant feet should stray
To some dark and [illegible] pitfall—
A loving mother led my way.

And as moments speeded onward
And the childhood hours flew by,
Hopes so light were often withered,
As life's morning dawn went by.

How she watched, and prayed, and guided,
Checking all my wilful ways,
Till the hours of childhood glided—
Like a scroll they rolled away.

With advice so fondly needed,
Swiftly then the moments flew,
And my bark o'er life's stream glided,
[illegible] sunbeams shining through.

Life's short dream with her now over,
And her work pronounced—well done;
O'er the crystal sea they bore her
To that land beyond the sun.

Oh, her fond regret at parting
When she saw the tears I shed,
But a holy light was streaming
Round her when her spirit fled.

Lo! the gates of gold gleam yonder—
In the light beyond the blue,
And bewildering is the splendor
Of the glory shining through.

When I come to lay my burden
By the golden gates ajar,
Weary, footsore, and sad laden,
Having journeyed from afar;

May I then, Lord—Thou permitting—
Bring my cross—life's burden—home,
And be crowned—Christ interceding—
With the blessed around Thy throne?

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MRS. McWILLIAMS AND THE LIGHTNING.

Mark Twain, in Atlantic.

Well, sir—continued Mr. McWilliams, for this was not the beginning of his talk—the fear of lightning is one of the most distressing infirmities a human being can be afflicted with. It is mostly confined to women; but now and then you find it in a little dog, and sometimes in a man. It is a particularly distressing infirmity, for the reason that it takes the sand out of a person to an extent which no other fear can, and it can't be reasoned with, and neither can it be shamed out of a person. A woman who could face the very devil himself—or a mouse—loses her grip and goes all to pieces in front of a flash of lightning. Her fright is something pitiful.

Well, as I was telling you, I woke up, with that smothering and unlocatable cry of "Mortimer! Mortimer!" wailing in my ears; and as soon as I could scrape my faculties together I reached over in the dark and then said:

"Evangeline, is that you calling? What is the matter? Where are you?"

"Shut up in the boot closet. You ought to be ashamed to lie there and sleep so, and such an awful storm going on."

"Why, how can one be ashamed when he is asleep? It is unreasonable; a man can't be ashamed when he is asleep, Evangeline."

"You never try. Mortimer—you know very well you never try."

I caught the sound of muffled sobs.

That sound smote dead the sharp speech that was on my lips, and I changed it to—

"I'm sorry, dear—I'm truly sorry. I never meant to act so. Come back and—"

"Mortimer!"

"Heavens! what is the matter, my love?"

"Do you mean to say that you are in that bed yet?"

"Why of course."

"Come out of it instantly. I should think you would take some little care of your life, for myself and the children's, if not for your own."

"But my love—"

"Don't talk to me, Mortimer. You know there is no place so dangerous as a bed, in such a thunder storm as this—all the books say that; yet there you lie and deliberately throw away your life—for goodness knows what, unless for the sake of arguing and arguing, and—"

"But, confound it, Evangeline, I'm not in the bed now. I'm—"

[Sudden interruption by a sudden glare of lightning, followed by a terrific little scream from Mrs. McWilliams and a tremendous blast of thunder.]

"There! You see the result. Oh, Mortimer, how can you be so profligate as to swear at such a time as this?"

"I didn't swear. And that wasn't a result of it anyway. It would have come just the same, if I hadn't said a word; and you know very well, Evangeline—at least you ought to know—that when the atmosphere is charged with electricity—"

"Oh, yes, now argue it, and argue it, and argue it!—I don't see how you can act so, when you know there is not a lightning rod on the place, and your poor wife and children are absolutely at the mercy of Providence. What are you doing?—lighting a match at such a time as this? Are you stark mad?"

"Hang it, woman, where's the harm? The place is as dark as the inside of an infidel, and—"

"Put it out! put it out instantly! Are you determined to sacrifice us all? You know there is nothing attracts lightning like a light. [Fzt!—crash!—boom—boloom, boom boom!] Oh, just hear it! Now you see what you have done!"

"No, I don't see what I've done. A match may attract lightning for all I know, but it don't cause lightning—I'll go odds on that. And it didn't attract it worth a cent this time; for if that shot was levelled at my match it was blessed poor marksmanship—about an average of none out of a possible million, I should say. Why, at Dollymount, such marksmanship as that—"

"For shame, Mortimer! Here we are standing right in the presence of death, and yet in so solemn a moment you are capable of using such language as that. If you have no desire to——Mortimer!"

"Well?"

"Did you say your prayers to-night?"

"I—I—meant to, but I got to trying to cipher out how much thirteen times twelve is, and—"

[Fzt!—boom, berroom! boom! Bumbleumble, bang—SMASH!]

"Oh, we are lost beyond all help! How could you neglect such a thing at such a time as this?"

"But it wasn't such a time as this. There wasn't a cloud in the sky. How could I know there was going to be all this rumpus and pow-wow about a little slip like that? And I don't think it's just for you to make so much out of it, anyway, seeing it happens so seldom; I haven't missed before since I brought on that earthquake, four years ago."

"Mortimer! How you talk! Have you forgotten the yellow fever?"

"My dear, you are always throwing up the yellow fever to me, and I think it is perfectly unreasonable. You can't even send a telegraphic message as far as Memphis without relays, so how is a little devotional slip of mine going to carry so far? I'll stand the earthquake, because it was in the neighborhood; but I'll be hanged if I'm going to be responsible for every blamed—"

[Fzt!—BOOM, beroom, boom! boom!—BANG!]

"Oh, dear, dear, dear! I know it struck something, Mortimer. We never shall see the light of another day; and if it will do you any good to remember, when we are gone, that your dreadful language—Mortimer!"

"WELL! what now?"

"Your voice sounds as if—Mortimer, are you actually standing in front of that open fireplace?"

"That is the very crime I am committing."

"Get away from it this moment! You do seem determined to bring destruction on us all. Don't you know that there is no better conductor for lightning than an open chimney? Now where have you got to?"

"I'm here by the window."

"Oh, for pity's sake! have you lost your mind? Clear out from there, this moment! The very children in arms know it is fatal to stand near a window in a thunder storm. Dear, dear, I know I shall never see the light of another day. Mortimer?"

"Yes."

"What is that rustling?"

"It's me."

"What are you doing?"

"Trying to find the upper end of my pantaloons."

"Quick! throw those things away! I do believe you would deliberately put on those clothes at such a time as this; yet you know perfectly well that all authorities agree that woolen stuffs attract lightning. Oh, dear, dear, it isn't sufficient that one's life must be in peril from natural causes, but you must do everything you can possibly think of to augment the danger. Oh, don't sing! What can you be thinking of?"

"Now where's the harm in it?"

"Mortimer, if I have told you once, I have told you a hundred times, that singing causes vibrations in the atmosphere which interrupt the flow of the electric fluid, and— What on earth are you opening that door for?"

"Goodness gracious, woman, is there any harm in that?"

"Harm? There's death in it. Anybody that has given this subject any attention knows that to create a draught is to invite the lightning. You haven't half shut it; shut it tight—and do hurry, or we shall all be destroyed. Oh, it is an awful thing to be shut up with a lunatic at such a time as this. Mortimer, what are you doing?"

"Nothing. Just turning on the water. This room is smothering hot and close. I want to bathe my face and hands."

"You have certainly parted with the remnant of your mind! Where lightning strikes any other substance once, it strikes water fifty times. Do turn it off. Oh, dear, I am sure that nothing in this world can save us. It does seem to me that—Mortimer, what was that?"

"It was a da— It was a picture. Knocked it down."

"Then your are close to the wall! I never heard of such imprudence! Don't you know that there's is no better conductor for lightning than a wall? Come away from there! And you came so near as anything to swearing, too. Oh, how can you be so desperately wicked, and your family in such peril? Mortimer, did you order a feather bed, as I asked you to do?"

"No. Forgot it."

"Forgot it! It may cost you your life. If you had a feather bed now, and could spread it in the middle of the room and lie on it, you would be perfectly safe. Come in here—come quick, before you have a chance to commit any more frantic indiscretions."

I tried, but the little closet would not hold us with the door shut, unless we could be content to smother. I gasped awhile, then forced my way out. My wife called out:

"Mortimer, something must be done for your preservation. Give me that German book that is on the end of the mantelpiece, and a candle, but don't light it; give me a match, I will light it in here. That book has some directions in it."

I got the book—at the cost of a vase and some other brittle things—and the madam shut herself up with the candle. I had a moment's peace; then she called out:

"Mortimer, what was that?"

"Nothing but the cat."

"The cat! Oh, destruction! Catch her! and shut her up in the washstand. Do be quick, love; cats are full of electricity. I just know my hair will turn white with this night's awful perils."

I heard the muffled sobbings again.—But for that I should not have moved hand or foot in such a wild enterprise in the dark.

However, I went at my task—over chairs and against all sorts of obstructions, all of them hard ones, too, and most of them with sharp edges—and at last I got kitty cooped up in the commode, at an expense of over four hundred dollars in broken furniture and shins. Then these muffled words came from the closet:

"It says the safest thing is to stand on a chair in the middle of the room, Mortimer; and the legs of the chair must be insulated with non-conductors. That is, you must set the legs of the chair in glass tumblers. [Fzt—boom!—bang!—smash!—] Oh hear that! Do hurry, Mortimer, before you are struck."

I managed to find and secure the tumblers. I got the last four—broke all the rest. I insulated the chair legs, and called for further instructions.

"Mortimer, it says: 'Während eines Gewitters entferne man Metalle, wie z. B., Ringe, Uhren, Schlüssel, &c., von sich und halte sich auch nicht an solchen Stellen auf, wo viele Metalle bei einander liegen, oder mit andern Körpern verbunden sind, wie an Herden, Oefen, Eisengittern u. dgl.' What does that mean, Mortimer? Does it mean that you must keep metals about you, or keep them away from you?"

"Well, I hardly know. It appears to be a little mixed. All German advice is more or less mixed. However, I think that that sentence is mostly in the dative case, with a little genitive and accusative sifted in, here and there, for luck; so I reckon it means that you must keep some metals about you."

"Yes, that must be it. It stands to reason that it is. They are in the nature of lightning rods, you know. Put on your fireman's helmet, Mortimer; that is mostly metal."

I got it and put it on—a very heavy and clumsy and uncomfortable thing on a hot night in a close room. Even my night-dress seemed to be more clothing than I strictly needed.

"Mortimer, I think your middle ought to be protected. Won't you buckle on your militia sabre, please?"

I complied.

"Now, Mortimer, you ought to have some way to protect your feet. Do please put on your spurs."

I did it—in silence—and kept my temper as well as I could.

"Mortimer, it says: 'Das Gewitterläuten ist sehr gefährlich, weil die Glocke selbst, sowie der durch das Läuten veranlasste Luftzug und die Höhe des Thurmes den Blitz anziehen könnten.' Mortimer, does that mean that it is dangerous not to ring the church bells during a thunder storm?"

"Yes it seems to mean that—if that is the past participle of the nominative case singular, and I reckon it is. Yes, I think it means that, on account of the height of the church tower and the absence of Luftzug it would be very dangerous (sehr gefährlich) not to ring the bells in time of a storm; and moreover, don't you see, the very wording— —"

"Never mind that, Mortimer; don't waste the precious time to talk. Get the large dinner bell; it is right there in the hall. Quick, Mortimer, dear, we are almost safe. Oh, dear! I do believe we are going to be saved at last!"

Our little summer establishment stands on the top of a high range of hills, overlooking a valley. Several farm houses are in our neighborhood—the nearest some three or four hundred yards away.

When I, mounted on the chair, had been clanging that dreadful bell a matter of seven or eight minutes our shutters were suddenly torn open from without, and a brilliant bull's-eye lantern was thrown in at the window, followed by a hoarse inquiry:

"What in the nation is the matter here?"

The window was full of men's heads, and the heads were full of eyes that stared wildly at my night dress and my warlike accoutrements.

I dropped the bell, skipped down from the chair in confusion, and said:

"There is nothing the matter, friends—only a little discomfort on account of the thunder storm. I was trying to keep off the lightning."

"Thunder storm? Lightning? Why Mr. McWilliams, have you lost your mind? It is a beautiful starlight night; there has been no storm."

I looked out, and I was so astonished I could hardly speak for a while. Then I said—

"I do not understand this. We distinctly saw the glow of the flashes through the curtains and shutters, and heard the thunder."

One after another of those people lay down on the ground to laugh—and two of them died. One of the survivors remarked—

"Pity you didn't think to open your blinds and look over the top of the high hill yonder. What you heard was cannon; what you saw was the flash. You see, the telegraph brought some news, just at midnight; Hancock's nomination—and that's what's the matter!"

Yes, Mr. Twain, as I was saying in the beginning (said Mr. McWilliams), the rules for preserving people against lightning are so excellent and so innumerable that the most incomprehensible thing in the world to me is how anybody ever manages to get struck.

So saying he gathered up his satchel and umbrella, and departed; for the train had reached his town.

ETIQUETTE OF CONVERSATION.

Do not manifest impatience.

Do not interrupt another when speaking.

Do not find fault, though you may gently criticise.

Do not talk of your private, personal and family matters.

Do not appear to notice inaccuracies of speech in others.

Do not allow yourself to lose temper and speak excitedly.

Do not allude to unfortunate peculiarities of any one present.

Do not always commence a conversation by allusion to the weather.

Do not talk very loud. A firm, clear, distinct, yet mild, gentle and musical voice, has greater power.

Do not be absent-minded, requiring the speaker to repeat what has been said that you may understand.

Do not try to force yourself into the confidence of others. If they give their confidence, never betray it.

Do not intersperse your language with foreign words or high-sounding terms. It is almost as impolite as to whisper.

Do not use profanity, vulgar terms, slang phrases, words of double meaning, or language that will bring the blush to any one.

Do not speak with contempt or ridicule of a locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthfully praise and commend; thus make yourself agreeable.

Do not be unduly familiar; you will merit contempt if you are. Neither should you be dogmatic in your assertions, arrogating to yourself much consequence in your opinions.

Do not make a pretense of gentility, nor parade the fact that you are a descendant of any notable family. You must pass for just what you are, and must stand on your own merit.

Do not contradict. In making a correction say, "I beg your pardon, but I have an impression that it was so and so." Be careful in contradicting, as you may be wrong yourself.

Do not make a parade of being acquainted with distinguished or wealthy people, of having been to college, or having visited foreign lands. All this is no evidence of real genuine worth on your part.

Do not use the surname alone when speaking of your husband and wife to others. To say to another, "I told Jones," referring to your husband, sounds badly. Whereas, to say, "I told Mr. Jones," shows respect and good breeding.

Do not aspire to be a great story teller; an inveterate teller of long stories becomes very tiresome. To tell one or two witty, short, new stories, appropriate to the occasion, is about all that one person should inflict on the company.

Do not spend your time in talking scandal; you sink your own moral nature by so doing, and you are, perhaps, doing injustice to those about whom you talk. You, probably, do not understand, or you would, doubtless, be more lenient.

Do not indulge in satire; no doubt, you are witty, and you could say a most cutting thing that would bring the laugh out of the company down on your opponent; but you must not allow it, unless to rebuke some impertinent fellow who can be suppressed in no other way.—[illegible]

WORDS OF WISDOM.

The flame of sorrow burns up some hearts, while others it purifies.

The world is satisfied with words; few care to dive beneath the surface.

The covetous man makes two cents of one, and a liberal man makes a shilling of it.

It is perfectly natural that a man should see his mistake after he has made it.

There is a right way and a wrong way of rubbing a man's mind as well as a cat's back.

Truth is always present; it only needs to lift the iron lids of the mind's eye to read its oracles.

It is hard to do anything simply because it is your duty. Once make your duty a pleasure and your whole life becomes a quiet happiness.

If good people would but make goodness agreeable, and smile instead of frowning in their virtue, how many would they win to the good cause!

A good moral character is the first essential in a man. It is, therefore, highly important to endeavor not only to be learned, but to be virtuous.

FACTS.

Trade and commerce, labor and capital, have made their safest ventures and reaped their richest rewards under Democratic rule.

The Democratic party has not to-day, in its creed or platforms, its theories or practice, a single menace for any legitimate industry.

It is eminently conservative in all its purposes and aims.

It is opposed to bigotry and intolerance, to sectional hates and jealousies, and bitter enmities growing out of past controversies, but it proposes no backward step to settle these differences and pacify the country.

It seeks to unite all hearts of every section and race in a common purpose and effort to make these United States the home of a free, industrious, thriving, happy people.

WORTHY OF HONOR.

Many distinguished clergymen throughout the Northern States are in political sentiment decided Democrats.

They never introduce politics into the pulpit and never shout it from party rostrums.

They obey the sacred duty of their calling by endeavoring to promote the spiritual welfare of the people.

They raise high the standard of religion, instead of trailing it through the mire of partisanship.

They are worthy of honorable mention.

VAGABOND.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher is on the stump for Garfield and Arthur.

A fit champion for such a cause.

In a recent speech Mr. Beecher termed the South "vagabond States."

A fertile region of the American Union, raising this year 6,000,000 bales of cotton, besides an immense amount of other products, all worth gold in the markets of the world, may, in the disordered imagination of the Brooklyn saint, be styled "vagabond."

Practical business men and enlightened students of political economy will, however, class those States as princely contributors to national wealth.

THE STAPLE TOPIC.

The staple topic of the Garfield orators continues to be vilification of the Southern people. That is the commencement and end of their "moral" speeches, no Christian charity, nothing in favor of National unity, no reliable but evidence, volumes of tirade against the South, dragging from its grave the dead issue of slavery, and inventing sensational stories about outrages upon the civil rights of colored voters.

Some such speakers may be innocent enough to believe what they utter, but the greater portion of them know it is political balderdash of the meanest sort, dyed deeply crimson, according to the programme of the bloody shirt.

We read in a "moral" Republican journal the other day that a "Democrat was a fool." We leave that for public opinion, but confidently assert, that tens of thousands of Republicans have sense sufficient to vote for General Hancock, because they are disgusted with the malignant sectional animosity of their party leaders, and further, because they are well satisfied that the success of the Democratic party can alone secure the prosperity of a united and happy country.

They are not fools, excuse the elegant "moral" Republican expression, but men of intelligent observation and independent action, men who seek after truth and cannot be led astray by fiction.

Passionate Wigwam harangues and reckless editorial perversions tend only to drive that class of voters from the partisan arena. To tell them Democrats are fools and rebels is to insult common sense and provoke just retribution at the polls.

Thoughtful citizens, of all classes and avocations, are firmly established in opinion, that the vitality of free government, the re-establishment of friendly feelings between the North and South, and the general well being of the whole American people, demand the [illegible] of a ballot worded thus—

For President,

For Vice President,

MESSRS. EDITORS:

At your suggestion I send you a communication covering some of the reasons why I think the Democratic ticket should be supported at the coming November election. There are other points equally or more important in their character, which have come fairly within the reasoning capacity of the American people, which have been ably discussed, and the ordinary observer can but be well informed as to his duty in casting his vote at the coming election without regard to partisan feeling. To me it seems perfectly clear, that our interests will be best served by electing Hancock and English and a National Congress which will act in harmony with a Democratic Administration.

Yours Truly,
JOS. W. YATES.

New York, Oct. 11, 1880.

Doubtless the voters of this State fully believe that our forefathers acted wisely when they severed themselves from the Mother Country and fought the battles of the Colonies. It was then the principle of Democracy to war against the tyranny of a titled aristocracy, under a centralized power which threatened to deprive the people of their freedom of thought and action, and that nerved them on to the heroic deeds, securing to those pioneers and to us our glorious independence, and founding a nation which has grown in magnitude sufficient to harbor the oppressed from all parts of the world.

It was this same principle that governed in framing the articles of Confederation and the Constitution which followed, and it is that principle which will be perpetuated by casting our vote for Hancock and English in November next.

It would not be difficult to trace the Democratic party from the close of the Revolution up to the present time, and to show that its ruling motive has ever been and is to hold the governing power as near to the people as possible, and to forever keep within their grasp all the power not delegated to the General Government under the Constitution. At the close of the Revolution the party known as "American Whigs" was the party which adhered to the interests of the Colonies and insisted upon the right of the people to govern themselves. The Tory party was opposed to the Colonies, was in favor of a monarchy and in sympathy with the aristocracy of England. Both of these party titles lost their significance in 1776. The Tories were followed by the Federalist, or loose Constructionist party, as they were sometimes called, who also were in favor of a strong central government and the appropriation of public funds for general internal improvements. The successor of the Whig party became strict Constructionist or Anti-Federalist, and were in favor of home rule, delegating to the General Government such power as would secure respect from abroad and safety at home, and opposed to the use of public money other than for the purposes strictly in keeping with the spirit of the Constitution. (Had these principles been adhered up to the present time, the Americans would have been saved from the disgrace of the Credit Mobilier corporation, and would not have been defrauded out of $104,000,000 principal and interest now due from Pacific Rail Roads, and the yet further loss of millions of acres of land distributed in the interest of private speculators which belonged to the whole people of the United States, and should have been disposed of for their benefit, or reserved for actual settlers.)

The objects for which the Anti-Federalists had been contending having been settled, the name was no longer applicable; and as their sympathies were with the Republicans of France, who were preparing for a war with Great Britain, they adopted the name of Democratic Republican. The term Democracy was distasteful to and was ridiculed by the representatives of the Federal party to such an extent that the party thought it best to abridge the title to "Republican," and called itself by and held to that name until about 1828. About the time of Jackson's election this party having become nationally strong, it adopted the name of Democratic, which title has never been changed from that day to this. The title Democratic-Republican is frequently used and perhaps comes nearer to the official title, i. e., a Republic governed by the people. Under whatever name, the principals have been and are the same, and I trust they will be perpetuated in the election of Hancock and English.

It was the principles of Democracy which led the colonists to rebel in 1767 against Great Britain, for imposing duties on teas and other articles of consumption imported into America for the purpose of supporting royal rulers in the colonies, and the outgrowth of these principles led to the opposition to the Bill passed in 1774 by Parliament to remove colonial subjects from offices in the collection of customs and in prohibiting the landing of merchandise in the town of Boston; and in the same spirit of right to oppose an Act passed in the same year entitled "An Act for the better regulation of Massachusetts Bay," the provisions of which were to vest in the Royal Governor the power to appoint all of the civil officers; to select jurors; to abolish town meetings, and to divest the people of many other privileges before enjoyed by them; the same policy which has been and is now pursued by the Spanish government toward her colonies, and which led to Cuban revolution. The Colonies may have for the time lost their cause, but the American people were of a different composition, and succeeded. Born of Democratic principles was the Declaration of Independence, that stimulated our forefathers to fight the battles of the Revolution to a successful end; these same Democratic principles incited the spirited controversy with the Federalist in forming the Articles of Confederation, and subsequently the Constitution of the United States, thereby securing a sound foundation for a government by the people, and guaranteeing to the humblest citizen in the nation the privilege of rising to the highest position within the gift of the American Republic that his honesty, integrity and manliness might entitle him to enjoy.

From the adoption of the Constitution to the present time the same intense perseverance has been manifested by the Democrats to preserve this government for the people. They were, under another name, in favor of the war of 1812, because Great Britain impressed our countrymen from American merchantmen into the English service, not only committing an act of great injustice, but endangering our commerce, which at that time was the life of the nation. They favored the war with Mexico under Polk's administration, after American blood had been shed by Mexican soldiers on American soil, which resulted in giving us the richest territory in agriculture and minerals in the known world. It is now the happy home of about 900,000 of our countrymen who are competent, from the richness of its soil, to furnish sufficient Cereals for its consumption, as well as for half of Europe, and gold and silver sufficient for a circulating medium for a large portion of the world. The Democracy were loyal to the government, and faithful in their efforts to crush out the rebellion, which saved our country from destruction and happily rid the American people from an inherited curse that had been a cloud upon the fair name of the nation from its beginning. The cost in blood, sorrow, suffering and, least of all, money, was fearful, but we must cheerfully hope that our nation will be purer and better, and that it was all for the best, and that God orders all things well.

I have stated that the Democrats were loyal in the suppression of the rebellion, and one can but be surprised to see how patiently one-half of the people of the loyal States have borne the [illegible] thrust upon them by political demagogues who make it a point to deceive the people and cater to their prejudices, for the sole purpose of holding power, and greedily grasping a support from the public Treasury. [illegible] to furnish the [illegible] war.

It is not necessary to go into detail to show that the most that has been said and written about the Republican party (assisted by the Democracy) saving the Union is mere political claptrap, and has been done under a mistaken opinion of the intelligence of the American voter.

Minorities—especially in a government like ours—do not usually carry on protracted wars without some little help from the majority, and that the Republican party, at the outbreak of the rebellion, was in a minority of almost a million in the popular vote, is a mere matter of history. Out of a total vote of 4,676,853 Mr. Lincoln received in November 1860, but 1,866,352, or less than forty per cent of the whole vote. The two wings of the Democratic party cast 2,226,671 votes—Stephen A. Douglas receiving 1,375,157, and John C. Breckenridge 847,514, and there were cast for the Constitutional Union Ticket, headed by John Bell, of Tennessee, 587,830 votes, not one of which could be counted as friendly to the Republican party. In the States which stood by the flag and poured out their blood and treasure in behalf of the Union, Mr. Lincoln received 1,864,423, in a total vote of 3,8[illegible]0,979, or less than forty-nine per cent of the whole. And finally, leaving out entirely the border States of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri whose sons, by hundreds of thousands, swelled the ranks of the Union hosts, there were polled in the remaining loyal States of the North and Northwest, 3,400,294 votes, of which Mr. Lincoln received 1,839,922, or but little over fifty-four per cent of the whole.

Without any disposition to detract from the honor acquired by our brave soldiers belonging to the Republican party, comparisons might be drawn from the popular vote in the several States, and the number of men sent into the Union army, that would show that the Democrats were not lukewarm in their services and devotion to their country. In the same spirit we might say that the Democracy of New Jersey have nothing to be ashamed of. From 1859 to 1868, she gave Democratic majorities for the Presidential candidates, and during the heat of the rebellion she had a Democratic Governor; and with a population of 672,000 she sent 81,000 men into the field; yet where will you find a Democrat in all the State who would say aught against the patriotism and bravery of the Republican sailor and soldier? I have not the figures to draw any comparison between the Republican and Democratic vote of our sailors (many of whom were absent in service at the time of the election in 1860, and who during the war guarded our coast for 3,000 miles; patrolled our rivers; protected our armies; battered down the enemy's forts, and shared in the most of our victories), but the nature of a sailor's life, and his love of freedom would naturally lead him to oppose a government, having a tendency to diminish the liberties of the people, and no doubt a large portion of them were Democrats who liberally shared with their Republican shipmates in the dangers and hardships of the war, upon the sea as well as upon the land.

It was the principles of Democracy that prompted our senators and representatives in Congress to make a strenuous effort to repeal the partisan marshal law, so that we might conduct our elections in our own way, under the authority of the State, and in accordance with the usages and traditions of the people as was originally intended under the provisions of the Constitution. Failing to accomplish this, an effort was made to amend the law, so that, as an instrument to be wielded unjustly, it would be shorn of its power for evil, and still answer professedly the purposes sought for by its advocates. Mr. Bayard offered an amendment reading as follows:

> "Be it enacted, &c., That from and after the passage of this act, the pay of all deputy marshals for services in reference to any election shall be $5 for each day of actual service and no more.
> Sec. 2. That all deputy marshals to serve in reference to any election shall be appointed by the Circuit Court of the United States for the district in which such marshals are to perform their duties, in each year, at the term of court next preceding any election of representatives or delegates in Congress; but if from any cause there should be no session of the Circuit Courts in the states or districts where such marshals are to be appointed, then and in that case the judges of the District Courts of the United States are hereby respectively authorized to cause their courts to be opened for the purpose of appointing such deputy marshals, who shall be appointed by the said District Courts, and the officers so appointed shall be in equal numbers from the different political parties, and shall be well known citizens of good moral character and actual residents of the voting precincts in which their duties are to be performed, and shall not be candidates for any office at such election. All laws and parts of laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed."

This amendment was defeated by the Republicans, and any fair minded voter must see that the bill was framed for strictly partisan purposes and for no other, and that it is only one more link to the chain that is intended to bind the people to a centralized power under a Republican rule that will differ only in name from a monarchy. With this bill as it stands now, your representative becomes your ruler instead of your servant, especially if he be an unscrupulous politician and in sympathy with the administration in power. This Act is one of his own creation, and he has the power in his own hands to influence the appointments, and by encouraging disturbances at the polls, a pretext may be had for appointing any number of deputy marshals. They may be selected from unprincipled men from either side who will best serve in the interests of the candidate influencing their appointment. It is one other way and the most corrupt way of buying votes, the money coming out of the U. S. Treasury. This act was passed by the Republican party professedly in the interests of the Freemen of the South, and yet, taking Senator Thurman as good authority, whom no one will doubt and who probably investigated the matter thoroughly, in a speech in the Senate in 1879, he stated that the law originated in the Union League Club in the city of New York; that in 1878 there were supervisors and marshals appointed, numbering 9,606, at an expenditure of $222,714.22, and of this amount there was used in the South $18,241.96, or about 1-12th. The remaining 11-12ths was spent in the North. Now as American citizens boasting of your freedom, I ask you if our representatives can pass such laws and be sustained at the ballot box and will not submit to such wise amendments as were offered by Senator Bayard (which provided for the appointment in equal numbers from each political party, so that the one might be a check upon the other) why may they not, under concert of action, pass similar bills controlling the elections and perpetuate their power for all time? Especially are such laws obnoxious to the people, when an administration has the appointment of 160,000 office holders, each one of whom ought to be able to influence in family, friends and relatives, on an average at least ten votes, making in the aggregate 1,600,000 votes, and as each Presidential election rolls round the tendency is to increase the number from the new and zealous supporters of the party who would feel themselves entitled to some consideration from the administration they helped to create. And this army of office holders is paid out of the people's money ten per cent more than equivalent services demand, in order that the leaders of the party may unblushingly assess them for party purposes. Is this honest? Does this make a people wiser, better and purer in the estimation of the civilized world?

If the unwavering and determined perseverance of the Democratic party and their predecessors in the interest of a Republic governed by a free people, is not sufficient to induce the voters to support a statesman and soldier in the person of General Hancock at the polls in November next, then they should consider well whether they are not trifling with their liberties by suffering this army of office-holders, strengthened by unconstitutional election laws, to control the country. It may be said that the Democrats would wield the same dangerous power under a change of administration. This is not probable. Having the full control of the government they would be held responsible for an economical and faithful administration of public affairs; and should they fail in this, we shall have these 160,000 experts, long in practice in handling the election machinery and public funds, to watch them and act as sentinels in our interests. Jefferson believed, and we, too, are persuaded, that a frequent change in administration is indispensable to good government. Office-holders are not the rulers, but the servants of the people.

"[illegible]
[illegible]"

This [illegible] lesson we must and will try to impress upon them in the November election.

With a [illegible] Democratic Congress will be Democratic during the next administration; and having elected Hancock and English every branch of the government will be working in harmony, and we shall have no longer a solid South or a solid North; we [illegible] will spring up between North and South; new channels will be opened for industry, and the whole country will be benefited thereby. The cause of slavery having passed away, there will be no issue to inspire a solid South, and there will be no interest other than one in common, and as two great political parties are necessary to balance our form of government, No doubt the people will be divided in opinion on all matters of public interest in the South as well as in the North; and there will be no issue as existed before the war to cement them together in self defence. All this talk about paying for the slaves and the rebel debt, is sheer nonsense. Every intelligent man knows that the people of this country are not such idiots as to tax themselves voluntarily with an unjust debt for the mere pleasure of increasing their obligations. It seems incredible that any party should rate the intelligence of this country so low as to bring such arguments forward for campaign purposes. The reasons foreshown are sufficient to demand a change in the management of public affairs; but if for no other purpose there should be a change in the administration so that the people of this country may have a full and complete knowledge of what has been done in the several departments of the government, and to see if the trusts confided to their servants have been faithfully executed.

Elect Garfield and Arthur and we have the Executive branch of the government arrayed against the Legislative, the same political disposition that has kept the country agitated since the close of the war; the same sectional strife growing more and more intense as the years pass by; the same apathy in business between North and South, and a corresponding loss in strength as a nation, and in prosperity as a people. The Republican leaders have been 15 years reconstructing the Southern States, have admitted them again into the Union with all of their constitutional rights, and now admit that the whole plan of reconstruction has been a failure. The Republicans should inform the people of this country how they propose to bring about a change in the election of Garfield and Arthur, that will insure us unity, happiness and prosperity. Democrats will vote for Hancock and English. Republicans who feel that a change would be wise, will vote the same way; and those who are in doubt will do well to follow their example.

Given a maximum of power and a minimum of liberty, and you have Republicanism. Given a maximum of liberty and a minimum of power, and you have Democracy.

Choose which you will have; remembering that your verdict in November next will fall as a mantle upon your successors, carrying with it a principle that must affect the future of all mankind.

OHIO AND INDIANA.

After superhuman efforts, the lavish expenditure of an unprecedented corruption fund, the colonization of illegal voters, the importation of roughs and repeaters from Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, the tyrannical overawing of workingmen, the suspicious increase of votes in certain Republican districts, the artful dissemination of untruths and the waving of the bloody shirt everywhere, the Garfield managers have retained possession of Ohio, and elected their Governor and State Officers in Indiana.

Republicans say that settles the matter and makes Garfield President.

If so, why do they continue the campaign? Why hold any more meetings? Why not extinguish torches, turn Wigwams into love feast assemblages, and fondly dream of continued public plunder.

The Democrats know well what caused the October result.

The Presidential election will be held in November.

Indiana, then freed from local questions and outside interference, will register her vote for HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

So will several other Northern States.

Without Indiana General Hancock can and will be chosen President.

Press on the battle! Democrats!

Success in November means the perpetuity of free government and the prevention of white servitude at the North.

Rally with redoubled energy! Democrats!

Let the political foe exultantly shout.

Give him a dose of Gettysburg on Tuesday the second day of November.

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

HON. GEO. C. LUDLOW,

The Democratic candidate for Governor, makes a decidedly favorable impression upon the people of the State, wherever he goes. His manners are refined and courteous, and all who meet him are highly pleased with his deportment. The Republican press fail to bring a single point to bear against his character. He is eminently qualified to fill the honorable position which will be assigned him after Nov. 2d. The people of New Jersey will be proud of him as their Governor.

EX-COLLECTOR VEGHTE'S SENTENCE.

John V. Veghte, the ex-Collector of Somerset County, who was convicted of embezzling public money, two weeks since, was sentenced on Saturday morning last to pay a fine of $1,000 and the costs on three indictments. Petitions signed by several thousand citizens of the county prayed that no imprisonment be included in his sentence. Veghte pleaded non vult to the other two indictments against him. Two Judges were in favor of sending him to State prison, and two were for a fine only.

In the dental ranks will never occur if you are particular with your teeth, and cleanse them every day with that famous tooth-wash, SOZODONT. From youth to old age it will keep the enamel spotless and unimpaired. The teeth of persons who use SOZODONT have a pearl-like whiteness, and the gums a roseate hue, while the breath is purified, and rendered sweet and fragrant. It is composed of rare antiseptic herbs and is entirely free from the objectionable and injurious ingredients of Tooth Pastes, &c.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap9y1

Democratic Primary.

The Democratic voters of the city of Plainfield are requested to meet at the rooms of the Democratic Association, on MONDAY, Oct. 18th, at 8 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing delegates to the Third District Assembly Convention.

By order
J. E. MARTINE, President.

THE attention of farmers is called to the fact that L. B. Boice of North Plainfield wants 100 tons of hay and straw, each, immediately.

ON Thursday of next week, a well-known Front street merchant, in the hardware line of business, will unite himself in matrimonial bonds to the lady of his choice.

DODWORTH'S class in dancing and deportment, will be formed on Tuesday evening, Oct. 19th, at Seminary Hall. Ladies and gentlemen desiring to join, will then present themselves.

JAMES E. MARTINE, Esq., Plainfield's Democratic orator, spoke before a large assemblage of Democrats at a public meeting in Perth Amboy Friday night last. The meeting was presided over by Col. Wm. Patterson.

AN entertaining object lesson on Persia and the Orient, will be given by the Rev. Wm. E. Stocking, for seven years a missionary in that land, on the evening of Monday, Oct. 18th, in the Chapel of the Crescent Avenue Church.

THE annual meeting of the Union Bible Society will be held in the Crescent ave. Church on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, Oct., 26th. Besides the usual business of interest, addresses by prominent workers in the cause are promised.

THE Turn-Vereins of North Plainfield will give a grand gymnastic exhibition and ball at Blatz's Hotel on the evening of Monday, Nov. 22d. Tickets admitting a gentleman and lady, may be procured of any member of the society, at 50 cents each.

MESSRS. Y. Casey & Son have formed a co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the undertaking business with increased facilities. They may be found at their office, No. 10 Park avenue, and guarantee perfect satisfaction to all their patrons.

THERE may be nothing new under the sun, but nevertheless the Rye and Rock cough drops sold by H. P. Reynolds are the finest of the kind. In this form, that efficient cure for colds may be carried in the pocket and taken even in church, unsuspected.

A horse and wagon belonging to Mr. George Dunham, was wrecked on the corner of Front street and Park avenue, last Saturday afternoon. The animal after breaking loose from the shafts, ran towards and into Second street, where it was subsequently captured.

THE members of the Plainfield Cornet Band are the happy possessors of a fine photographic picture of them in a body and uniform, taken by Langhorne. This organization, which is rapidly gaining popularity for their excellent playing, also contemplate purchasing new and improved instruments.

AS Winter approaches and you turn over in your bed upon a chilly morning, while your mind lightly turns to thoughts of cakes and honey—it is a great satisfaction to know that you have in the house a bag of French Bros' Pennsylvania Buckwheat Flour. It is the finest article for the purpose ever placed in the market, and all should purchase some on trial, at the mills on Somerset street.

MESSRS. Marshall & Ball, in our advertising columns of this issue, call the attention of their many customers in this city to their immense new stock of Fall clothing. This firm is one of the oldest in the State, and their establishment is noted for presenting to its customers as large an assortment of goods as any in the country. To its efforts to give satisfaction to its patrons, is due the wonderful success it has achieved.

IT has been rumored that the building formerly occupied as a place of worship by the members of St. Mary's R. C. church, would be altered so as to be available as a parish school. Such intention, however, has not as yet been decided on; but it is more than probable that the building in question will be in future used as a public hall, for the giving of balls and other national entertainments of the sons of Erin.

OWING—possibly—to a "delay in the mails," the funds necessary to pay the expenses of the "John Dunn Hickory Guards" to New Market, on Monday evening last, did not arrive. In consequence, that organization did not embark on the train they should have taken; but later in the evening, having taken up a collection among themselves, a few of the members boarded a Philadelphia express and left for parts unsought.

THE usual weekly meeting at the Republican Wigwam was varied, on Thursday evening last, by a presentation to the Lincoln Guards of a silk banner. Mr. David Titsworth, in acceptance, closed his appropriate address of thanks in these words: "Not only do the letters L. G. form the initials of our organization, but they represent the fact that we are a League of Gentlemen, who are Loyal for Garfield and Love the Girls".

IT is the intention of the Plainfield Saengerbund to give, during the coming winter, a series of entertainments that will be unequaled of the kind. The first will take place at their rooms on the evening of Monday, Oct. 25th; upon which occasion the Society will furnish some of their enjoyable music, followed by a grand ball. Admittance to the affair can only be secured by outsiders upon an introduction by a member of the association.

THE amateur dramatic performance in aid of the Muhlenberg Hospital Fund, to be given at VanDeventer Hall on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 26th, will not fail to receive the substantial financial support it deserves. The same efficient talent that has been enjoyed by the public upon past occasions, will present Buckstone's celebrated comedy of "Married Life," in a way—we feel assured—that will prove unusually attractive and entertaining.

THE bad boys of our public schools are not allowed any longer to occupy the entire attention of their teachers, and make other and better classmates suffer in consequence, by the loss of more or less of their teachers time. A "reform class" has been established in the basement of the Fourth street building; where, under the stern discipline of Mr. David Campbell, unruly ones are held in check and put through an unrelenting course of requisite training.

A PRIVATE still that had been established in our vicinity for the manufacture of Jersey lightning without the payment of legal revenue tax, was arrested in its course, one day recently, by the stern hand of Providence. The proprietors of the establishment are staunch Republicans, and there is no knowing to what base uses the productions of their distillery would have been put, had not the cylinder head of their rectifying engine been blown out, just now, upon the eve of a Presidential election.

IN order to accommodate the large stock, which the increasing trade of Messrs. Curtiss & Griffen necessitates their carrying, the present store of that firm has been deepened and thereby greatly enlarged. Their establishment is now the most extensive in the city; and their assortment of hardware, household goods and utensils the most varied and complete. We would advise all who are about purchasing stoves for the coming season, to examine the styles for sale by this firm before deciding.

BUTTS & TRIMMER, Counsellors at Law, &c., is the name of a new firm just formed for the purpose of practicing law in our midst. Mr. Butts is well known, and has acquired by close attention to business a good practice, and now to meet the growing demands upon him has formed the co-partnership as above. Martin S. Trimmer comes from Jersey City, where he is well known and has had many years practice. Mr. Trimmer is a native of New Jersey, born and raised in Hunterdon county. He takes a lively interest in all public affairs, and has recently purchased a home for himself and family in Dunellen, which he makes his residence. His locating in Plainfield for the practice of his profession is a valuable acquisition, and we prophesy that his presence and power will soon be realized. And by the way, Mr. Trimmer is doing valiant service for the Democratic party in this campaign by making stirring speeches in different parts of the nation State for Hancock and English.

THE Rev. Dr. DeWitt of New Brunswick, will occupy the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed Church on next Sabbath, morning and evening.

BISHOP HARE, of Nebraska, will preach next Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, at the "Heavenly Rest Mission", Evona. Services commence at 8 o'clock. Train leaves Plainfield for Evona at 7:30 p. m.

ST. JOHN the Evangelist R. C. church of Dunellen, will be formally dedicated by Bishop Corrigan, Sunday, Oct. 24. Those desiring tickets of admission, may obtain them by calling at No. 25 Liberty street.

Was This an Outrage?

Last week there floated a handsome Hancock & English banner in front of the residence of Mr. Feeney, at Pope's Corner, near Perth Amboy. Sunday night, Oct. 3d, some miscreants tore it down, cut it in four pieces and laid the remnants on the railroad track a short distance off, so that the first passing train would run over the faces of the candidates painted thereon. This is a political outrage that has no precedent. The facts did not appear in the New York Times or Tribune, because the banner was a Democratic one, destroyed by Republican vandals.

Truth for the Colored Man.

On this (Friday) evening, the Young Men's Hancock and English Club will hold a mass meeting in VanDeventer Hall. Upon the occasion prominent speakers will address the gathering; and to listen to the words of one in particular, all are invited. Mr. Shaw, a colored orator from the South of some renown, will tell who he has found to be the friend of his race; and the colored Republican Clubs of this city are especially requested to be present. It is with regret that experienced men like this speaker have noticed how, for the past years, the Republicans have appealed to the lower feelings of the colored voter and used them merely to carry out the base plans of the party without advantage to their race. Let us hope that a large number of the latter will attend this evening, and hear the truth from one of their own number who knows.

The Crescent Avenue Y. P. A.

The first sociable of the season was given by the Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church, on Friday evening last, in the parlors of the chapel. An election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, I. C. Pierson; Vice-President, Julian Cary; Secretary, Corydon Tyler; Treasurer, Stephen R. Struthers. Executive Committee, Mrs. John G. Bliss, Miss Kenny and Messrs. Cary and Wm. Kaufman. It is intended by the Association to give a series of entertainments during the Winter that will far exceed in interest and amusement any heretofore provided, besides being in character and idea entirely new and original.

The programme furnished for the evening included the following proficient amateur artists in their separate lines, whose contributions to the entertainment of the assemblage were fully appreciated and flatteringly received:

1.	Piano Solo,	[illegible] Miss F. S. Ketcham.	Weber.
2.	Recitation,	"Mona's Waters" Miss Hattie Smith.
3.	Song,	"Waiting," Mrs. J. K. Myers.	Millard.
4.	Reading,	"The Ice Bound Ship and the Dead Admiral," Rev. John G. Bliss.
5.	Piano Solo,	Ballade, Miss F. S. Ketcham.	Carl Reinecke.
6.	Recitation,	"The Maiden Martyr," Miss Hattie Smith.
7.	Song,	"Speed On," Mrs. J. K. Myers.	Roeckel.

Refreshments followed; and after an enjoyable hour of social intercourse the gathering dispersed.

John S. Harberger—Deceased.

The news of the death of Mr. John S. Harberger, a resident of this city and President of the Manhattan Banking Company of New York, was received on Saturday morning last with sincere sorrow by his many friends in social and financial circles. The deceased had been confined to the house for over a week past with a nervous fever, induced, no doubt, by overtaxation of the vital forces, adynamic in its character. His sickness was ushered in without any of the usual symptoms of malarial or intermittent fever; the patient experiencing no chill during the entire course of the attack. On the seventh day Mr. Harberger sat up almost the whole time, suffering nothing except extreme prostration, which falling away continued until his death on the ninth day of the month and the ninth of his sickness, of paralysis of the heart.

Mr. Harberger was sixty-three years of age, and was a native of Philadelphia, where he received his earliest business training. Coming to New York city when a young man, he became a clerk in the old United States Bank, where James M. Morrison, his predecessor in the presidency of the Manhattan Bank, Henry F. Vail, now president of the Bank of Commerce, and C. W. Duer, lately president of the Bank of the State of New York, were among his fellow-clerks. About 1842 Mr. Morrison, then cashier of the Manhattan Bank, being familiar with Mr. Harberger's efficiency, had him called to the position of assistant transfer officer in that bank, which was the State transfer agent. In 1857 Mr. Harberger was made assistant cashier of the Manhattan Bank, and about 1860 he succeeded the late Caleb O. Halsted as cashier. On the resignation of Mr. Morrison, about a year ago, he was elected president of the institution.

Mr. Harberger was a man of sterling social qualities, and a free-handed and generous-hearted giver to his church and the many other associations in which he was interested. He was loved and respected by his associates for his genial and kindly nature; and was a gentleman of great culture and refinement, and a connoisseur in art and literature. His death occurred at his summer residence—the Washington Headquarters on Front Street—where he leaves to mourn his demise, an affectionate wife, two daughters and a son.

The funeral services took place at St. Mary's Church on Tuesday morning, from whence the body was removed to Greenwood Cemetery for interment. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Theo. C. Baldwin, G. D. H. Gillespie, James Talcott, G. W. Smith, R. G. Rolston, Joseph O'Brien, James F. Pendergast and E. Holbrook Depew, the six first named being directors of the Manhattan Bank. Solemn High Mass of Requiem was performed by the R't Rev. Wm. Quinn V. G., of New York, celebrant; Rev. P. F. Downes of New Brunswick, deacon and Rev. Thos. F. Lynch of New York, sub-deacon. The Master of Ceremonies was the Rev. John Vassallo of Summit; and the music was in charge of Mr. Bralla the well known organist and a talented choir including Mesdames Corradi and Gomien of St. Ann's Church, New York. After a few sympathetic and touching words from Father Quinn, final absolution was given; and the hundreds that had assembled to pay a last tribute of respect to the deceased, were afforded an opportunity to view the remains.

The floral contributions from many sources that decorated the altar steps, were the most extensive and beautiful that have ever been seen in our city; embracing all the latest designs of standing anchors, broken columns, pillows and head rests, crosses, and other appropriate constructions. The altars and their furniture and utensils, as well as the candle-sticks and sanctuary lamps, were heavily draped in sombre colors; in the midst of which shone out in saddened brightness the many lights that illuminated the sacred precincts. The entire service chanted in Latin was most impressive, while the musical responses and selections of the choir were remarkably beautiful. At the close, Mr. Bralla with much expression played the Dead March from Saul; after which the body and its attendants left for Brooklyn on the 1:20 p. m. train.

Personals.

Mr. Will Murray, of the P. H. S., class of '75, is home again after an extended European trip.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Reynolds are spending a week at the former home of the latter in Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Case celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary at their residence, Manning avenue, last Wednesday evening. A very enjoyable time was had by those present.

Mr. Charles E. Dunn of this city, is one of the editors of the Nassau Literary Magazine, published by the senior class of Princeton College, and author of some of the ablest articles it contains.

On Wednesday afternoon last was married at Freehold, N. J., Mr. Fred McDonald of this city, to Miss Marie E. VanDerveer at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Dr. D. M. Forman. A large number of friends of both parties were present at the ceremony, and assisted in their congratulations upon the event.

Dr. Lowery, of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, is the last of our clergy to return to their respective pastorates. The many kind friends who sincerely rejoiced in the opportunity afforded to enjoy a Summer tour in the Old World, will to as readily be sympathetic with the sorrow and his wife, in the sorrow that has fallen upon them both by the death of Mrs. Lowery's mother.

FIREMEN'S DAY!

After some years of hardly creditable apathy, the Fire Department of Plainfield, in response to public opinion, decided to unite in a grand procession and review on the afternoon of Thursday, the 14th. The cause of the omitting of such a celebration in the past has been owing greatly to the inability of many of the Companies to contribute towards the necessary expenses; and rather than attempt the affair upon a contracted scale, financially, it has been postponed from time to time. Priding herself—as Plainfield justly should—upon her unequalled Fire Department, and desiring that others should recognize it as the best and most efficient in the State, invitations were sent to companies in the vicinity to be present as well as the Chiefs of Departments in New York city, New Haven and Stamford Conn., and Trenton, Burlington, New Brunswick, Morristown and other towns and cities of New Jersey. The result was a delegation of the most prominent Commissioners and members of the fraternity, and the finest display of apparatus and uniformed men ever witnessed in the city. For weeks past not only the firemen but our resident citizens have been straining every effort towards making the day a notable one in Plainfield's history, and the result of their endeavors has far surpassed even the most sanguine expectations. The decorations displayed along the line of march, upon private houses and public buildings, were most encouraging to "our protectors;" and the many and varied mottoes of welcome to their visiting friends bore flattering testimony of the good-will that was accorded and kind reception that greeted them. The weather, too, seemed desirous of uniting in the pleasant feeling that surrounded everybody and everything. The sun smiled brightly upon the city, and the cool, bracing air brought the warm blood to the surface and sent it back again coursing bracingly through the veins. Much fear had been indulged in regarding the state of the weather, and many an interested one felt a pleasant relief when the morning of the day selected dawned so auspiciously.

The good fellowship of our firemen and the intense interest that our citizens feel in all their affairs was shown early on Thursday morning. Even while others slept, those who desired to honor the Department's guests took advantage of Wednesday's bright moon, and put the finishing touches to such decorations as they considered appropriate. When day dawned the scene throughout the city was a gay one. Filling the streets were red and blue-shirted fire-laddies intent upon the occasion forthcoming; while each arriving train brought guests, visitors and such out-of-town bands as had been engaged. Business for the time was almost suspended, and the attention of all was bent upon welcoming the crowds of strangers that were continually arriving.

At about ten o'clock a delegation of Alert's members, headed by Voss' Band of Newark, marched through Front street to the residence of Mr. George Lieiginolo, where they met their guests—the Resolute Hook and Ladder Company of Morristown, and their accompanying friends from that city. At this point the Alerts took charge of the handsome truck of the visitors, and a line was formed, that passing through the beautifully ornamented grounds of Mr. Lieiginolo, returned to this city. The residence of this gentleman presented a most attractive appearance by reason of the many colored flags and striped bunting that was festooned between the trees; and such cordial mottoes of kind greeting as—"We meet again, Resolutes and Alerts"—"Welcome Resolutes and Visiting Friends." Upon reaching the city the party was escorted to Flagg's Hotel on North avenue—which was richly trimmed with flags, evergreens and sincere and heartfelt words of welcome—wherein had been spread for their enjoyment a sumptuous lunch. Mr. John Crawford, a member of Alerts, and a New York caterer of enviable reputation, had in charge the arrangements of this as well as the grand dinner that followed in the evening, and did credit both to himself as an artist, and his company as generous entertainers, by the feasts that were laid out.

The guests and members of Gazelle No. 1., dined at E. P. Thorn's Mansion House later in the day. In the handsome dining room of this hotel a bill-of-fare including all the delicacies of the season was provided. Zephyr H. & L. Co., entertained their Band and themselves in their house, where an appetizing luncheon, to which the lady friends of the company had contributed largely, loaded the tables. No. 2. Engine Co., lunched at their rooms and dined their guests later at Miller's Hotel.

The decorations at the quarters of the different companies, were—we can safely say—the handsomest that have ever been seen in the State. Across Madison avenue, from Alert's House, was erected a graceful and massive arch of greens—typical of the everlasting friendship the company retained towards their guests of the day and hosts of last year. The motto, in handsome letters of bright colors that was painted upon it, read:

ALERT WELCOMES
RESOLUTES AND VISITING FIREMEN.

The building itself was most tastefully trimmed upon the outside; while the parlor within had been newly papered in green and gold by the firm of G. F. & C. E. Brown & Co. of New York, and presented a most attractive appearance. Among the handsome pictures on the walls, were justly prominent those of Ex-Foreman E. L. Brown who had done so much for the company in years gone by, and Foreman Auguste Saltzman to whose untiring efforts and great generosity is due the successful carrying out of the day's celebration. The firemen and the public unite together in appreciation of the earnest endeavors of Foreman Saltzman; and will always remember with sincere thanks the enviable results achieved through that gentleman's philanthropic exertions in behalf of the Department.

Across Second street, from the houses of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1. and Zephyr H. & L. Co. was constructed a most beautiful span of evergreens and roses. From the centre of this swung a banner on which were the words, "Welcome Visiting Friends." The houses inside and out were gracefully draped with bright colors; and innumerable flags floated and waved and blended together.

From the headquarters of No. 2 Engine Company, was sprung the most extensive arch of all—consisting of a double span, reaching in its centre about fifty feet above. Across the three curves that were thus formed, was the legend: "Plainfield 2 Welcome Niagara 2 and Brother Firemen." In the peak above swung a welcoming bell which rang pleasantly as the line passed under it. Between the two arches was placed a photograph of the late Chief John Roselle—ever held in kind remembrance by our firemen—draped in mourning, and with the sincere expression of feeling below it: "Gone but not Forgotten."

Warren Engine No. 3, on Somerset street, had its house most tastefully and extensively dressed in bunting, wreaths and flowers, and everything to be thought of that would add to its fine appearance. A handsome motto—"Welcome Firemen" was prominently displayed.

To the decorations and displays, put forth by the residents and business men of the city, we are unable to do justice. Never before on any occasion have they been so universally and extensively shown. The public buildings and stores on Park Avenue and Front Street, were covered from roof to foundation with masses of gay colors and words of welcome to the firemen's friends and visitors. Space will only allow mention to be made of prominent features. The 1st National Bank displayed a magnificent shield with crossed flags above. Mr. H. P. Reynolds' drug-store, and the office of this paper—both in the Chandler Building—were draped in stars and stripes. The livery stable of Messrs. Roberts & Co. was most tastefully ornamented, as well as the City Hotel opposite. Mr. Fred. Casper on Second street, and Mr. John Hughes of Somerset street, both decorated their hostelries with good judgment of beauty. Mr. Blatz' Hotel, which was the extent of the march in North Plainfield, showed the good style of the ladies who adorned it. The Park House and Miller's Hotel were among the finest dressed; and the windows of the Saengerbund, I. O. O. F., Ancient Order of Hibernians, and other societies and associations were appropriately beautified.

The private dwellings and grounds upon the streets and avenues through which the parade passed, were almost all dressed in one way or another. Among the mottoes shown were those welcoming, "Our New Haven Friends," "Chief Hendricks," "Our Visitors," "Morristown," "Resolutes," "Niagara" and many others. At this point we must again apologize for the fact that time and space prevents our giving anything like a deserving notice to all; and request that we will be pardoned for only particularizing those worthy of special attention. The residence of Dr. C. H. Stillman on Front street, from whose stoop the Common Council of the city reviewed the procession, displayed the coat of arms of New Jersey amongst other decorations. Alert's First Ass't Foreman, S. T. Varian, and ex-Councilman N. B. Depew, were very generous in their show of emblems and flags.

President Jeremiah Van Winkle of the Fire Board was one of the most [illegible] in his display. A large picture of a [illegible]

[illegible] Commissioner Gifford Mayer's residence on Park avenue where the parade was [illegible], was a scene of beauty. Lines of flags of all nations were draped from the top of the house to the ground, and the later words prettily framed in flowers: "The Friends of Our Protectors are Our Friends—Welcome Visiting Firemen," were conspicuously shown. Ex-Alderman E. L. Morris' house on Front street was likewise attractively dressed with flags, and displayed a representation of hands clasped in friendship over the words "Hand in Hand, Resolutes and Alerts." The residence of J. U. Sraley Esq., on the corner of Seventh street and Park avenue, attracted notice by its motto "Auld Lang Syne—Resolutes, Alerts and New Haven Friends." Dr. Charles F. Sullivan, at his place on Park avenue, had erected an arch over the entrance gate, surmounted by a white owl; while on the top of a handsome flag bearing pole, was placed a fire hat. The motto at this point was: "Alerts Welcome Resolutes and New Haven Friends." Mr. Alexander Titsworth's residence on Second street was one of the most finely decorated in the city. Here was displayed the mottoes: "Our Protectors are Our Friends—Welcome Visiting Firemen" and "Firemen Always Welcome." These words being beautifully framed in green and many colored autumn leaves. Mr. David W. Rogers, opposite, showed a handsomely painted fire scene and crossed trumpets, suspended. Chief Voorhees' place of business was very thoroughly draped, and showed the mottoes: "We Meet Again, Resolutes and Alerts," and "Welcome Morristown." The house of James H. Force on the same street was almost completely covered with gracefully draped colors, and handsome flags.

The following also displayed creditable taste and worthy commendation for the Department and its friends. Noah W. Pike, suspended a magnificent flag across Front street from his residence, and Mr. Schiltz (who decorated Flagg's Hotel for the Alerts) handsomely dressed his house. Messrs. Wm. Cook, James Dunn and E. Brown of Fifth street; ex-Fire Commissioner E. R. Pope, corner of Park avenue and Fifth street; Messrs. W. P. Demarest, L. R. Clark and Stephen C. Ryder of Central avenue; Messrs. Fred. Brockway, Rudolph Titsworth, Frank Hubbard, J. K. Myers, Joseph W. Yates and George Headley of Seventh street; Messrs. J. W. Jackson, Wm. Swalm and Dr. Charles A. Hart of Crescent avenue; Messrs. Wm. Ayres and E. Moffett of Second street; Councilman Finch and Mrs. C. B. Clifton of Park avenue; Wm. B. Maxson of Fifth and Madison avenue; Asst. Engineer James Van Winkle of Front street.

Over the brook were to be observed many beautifully adorned residences.—Fire Commissioner Wm. E. Jones and J. N. Stelner, displayed handsome mottoes and appropriate decorations upon their houses on Somerset St. Messrs. Alfred Berry, Russell Johnson, Chas. G. Day and David Smalley, dressed their houses and grounds with a profusion of colors; and Mr. A. L. Force's residence on Duer St., was especially attractive in its general appearance.

The grand event that had been looked forward to by all, and so extensively prepared for, was advertised to begin at 1.30 P. M., but it was some time later before the long line could be formed into marching order. Starting from Somerset St. the procession marched up Front St. to Richmond St., presenting a display whose grandeur has never been excelled in this city before. The apparatus was all in magnificent order; the engines polished to a lustre that flashed back the sun's beams in greater brightness; and the gayly caparisoned horses and handsomely uniformed men, united in one grand picture of magnificence. The order was as follows:

The police at the head of the line were followed by a Reception Committee from several of the Plainfield Companies. Two open barouches came next, containing His Honor Mayor Harper and Fire Commissioners J. Van Winkle, John N. Stelner, Wm. E. Jones, E. L. Morris and G. Mayer. Then Chief Voorhees and his assistants with Ex-Chiefs Doane, Chandler, Coriell and visiting Chiefs of other cities; these followed by Winkler's Band, of Trenton, of 18 pieces, which headed Foreman David Leeson, 1st Ass't Stephen G. Ryder, 2nd Ass't Stephen Davis and Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1. The appearance of this large turn-out of men that this company presented was most praiseworthy. Its full complement of members was in line, and its beautiful steamer, repainted and regilded and drawn by a handsome pair of very large grays, was greeted with cheers at every point. The Hose Carriage, drawn by S. C. Sebring's span of blacks, followed the members of the Hose company who marched proudly in all the glory of new fatigue caps lettered in gold embroidery. Both Steamer and Carriage were profusely decorated with flowers, as was the entire apparatus in line. Every member of the home and visiting companies, also, were in receipt, from different sources, of rich bouquets; which, carried in their hands added greatly to the fineness of their appearance. With Gazelle Company, was a delegation from Steamer No. 1. of Somerville and officers of the Trenton Fire Department.

Niagara Steamer No. 2 and Hose Carriage of Morristown, following St. John's Band—all the guests of Plainfield No. 2—presented an appearance they may well be proud of. Numbering over 50 men in the two companies, they were awarded a large share of the applause that was given the procession along its march.

Peterman's Band of Trenton came next in order, heading the members of Engine Co. No. 2. Following came their beautiful steamer almost buried in flowers, and drawn by P. Rickett's team of spirited horses, the whole behind Foreman David Rogers, 1st Asst. Geo. Hotcher, and 2d Asst., B. Martin. The Hose Carriage was beautifully ornamented, and the number of its members uniformed, unusually large. It was drawn by Mr. Adam Fritz' span of iron greys.

Zephyr H. & L. Co. was preceded by the Goodwill Band of New Brunswick, and the officers of the Company, Foreman N. Sebring, 1st Asst., C. H. Smith, and 2d Asst., B. W. Conway. The members in line were many. The Truck was almost entirely hidden by the colors with which it was draped, and presented quite a feature of the parade. On its ladders were seated in chairs, four prettily dressed children with wreathed heads and bright smiles. The little ones—Misses Mamie and Ida Hedden, and Masters Willie E. Kreitling and Murray—may well be proud of the admiration they excited.

As much praise as is due any company in line should be accorded the Resolute H. & L. Co., of Morristown that followed. Owing to circumstances that they were unable to prevent, a portion only of the Glassboro Band that had been engaged by this company appeared, and they without uniforms. With that generous heartedness for which the Alerts are noted, the band of the latter (Voss' of Newark) was immediately placed at the service of the Resolutes and headed that company. Their truck is undoubtedly one of the finest in the State and attracted the attention of all. A magnificent construction of flowers, representing a hook and ladder crossed by a wreath that surrounded the number of the company, was carried on the front of the apparatus.

Following this organization came their hosts, the Alerts, drawing their silver carriage. To attempt a description of the style of this crack company of the State, would be useless. From Foreman Auguste Saltzman, 1st Ass't S. T. Varian, and 2nd Ass't, R. N. Erickson at its front, to Messrs. Karl T. Polak and Geo. Haley at the tiller, every member in his dark blue shirt, black pants and white gloves lent an appearance to the whole that was enviable. Innumerable bouquets and many ovations of cheers, fell to their lot during the parade. Behind came their working carriage drawn by a span of whites on whose fronts were handsome chest blankets. Among the guests of this company, were: Chief A. C. Hendrick of New Haven, Chief Wm. M. Jeffries of Burlington, and Chiefs Jas. M. Boswell, H. A. Freeman and Isaac G. Arnold of Morristown; also, Ex-Chiefs Wm. M. Halstead, J. Cooper, and Chas. McColvin; Ex-Foreman Theo. S. Melford and W. J. Snedden; and Ed. J. Thatcher and Robt. F. Merritt, Foreman and Assistant of the Resolutes.

Last, but not least, came Warren No. 3, of North Plainfield, following the music of the Plainfield Cornet Band. Both the firemen and musicians were admirable in their appearance, and the Steamer surmounted with a massive crown of roses was a beautiful sight. The machine was drawn by four horses from whose heads waved magnificent plumes of red, white and blue. Their Hose Company closed the procession.

The line of march has already been published in these columns. After it had been traversed the companies [illegible]

Grand Demonstration at Elizabeth.

Elizabeth city was ablaze with torches and fireworks Thursday evening of last week, the event being a grand parade of uniformed campaign clubs in honor of Hancock & English, Governor Ludlow and Congressman Ross, and was something long to be remembered for its magnificence. Some of the crack political clubs of the State were present, such as the Randolph Light Guards, McClellan Light Guards, Albright Light Guards, Kearny Engineer Corps, all of Newark, the Continental Legion of Elizabeth and Miles Ross Legion of Rahway, whose marching was beautiful to witness. The streets were thronged with spectators, residences and places of business illuminated, while the surroundings were made light as day by a continual discharge of fireworks. As the long line of 3,000 uniformed men passed Brockmuller's City Hotel, they broke out into cheers at the sight of U. S. Senator Randolph, Hon. Miles Ross and other prominent dignitaries who were gathered together on the balcony at that point. Among the clubs participating in the parade, were two from this city, the Hancock Veterans and the Boy's Hancock Club of the Third District. The Veterans were assigned the right of line and marched very creditably. The line of march was a very long one, but the visitors were regaled in a right royal manner upon its conclusion, a bountiful lunch being spread before them, to which all did ample justice.

Potts, the Tax Evader.

We charge that Frederic A. Potts, if a citizen of this State, is possessed of personal property subject to taxation amounting to more than two hundred thousand dollars; there is good reason to believe it exceeds five hundred thousand dollars.

He pays on $4,500 only in Union township, Hunterdon county, where he claims his residence, and that consists of his farm, stock and implements, as he himself expressly told the assessor of the township.

The valuation was formerly $5,000, but was reduced to $4,500 on his own application in 1877.

He told the assessor that otherwise his income was entirely invested "in his business in New York."

Suppose that were so, he is bound to pay tax upon it in Union township. The law says he shall so pay "whether said personal estate be within or without the State."

He concealed from the assessor the fact that he owned $1,000 of the Clinton (Hunterdon county) National Bank. He has owned it since the bank was established more than five years ago. He was bound to pay tax upon it. He has not done so.

He is bound to pay tax on every dollar he has "invested in his business," whether in New Jersey or New York.

He has not only not paid one cent of tax upon it in New Jersey, but he has paid nothing in New York.

We charge that FREDERIC A. POTTS, if a citizen of this State, is possessed of personal property subject to taxation amounting to more than two hundred thousand dollars, and upon which he has not paid one cent of tax!

WE CHALLENGE HIM TO DENY IT.

Banner Raising at Woodbridge.

It was our pleasure to attend, in company with other Democrats of Plainfield, a Democratic Banner raising and Mass meeting at Woodbridge on Saturday afternoon and evening of last week. The banner, which is a handsome one, a fac simile of that in front of our office, was flung to the breeze, amid the cheers of a large and enthusiastic crowd, about two o'clock in the afternoon, being suspended from the top of the Public Hall to a staunch pole on the opposite side of the street. In the evening the large Hall was packed with an intelligent audience to listen to the remarks of the invited speakers. After the selection of a permanent chairman of the meeting, in the person of Mr. Edward S. Savage and Peter K. Edgar, of the Independent Hour, as Secretary, Capt. James M. Brady, of New York was then introduced, who delivered a stirring address to the audience, which was frequently interrupted with cheers and applause. He was followed by our fellow townsman, James E. Martine, Esq., who, in a straightforward and lucid manner, addressed his hearers on the vital political issues of the day. His allusions to Hancock, Ludlow or Ross, were received with tumultuous cheers, evidencing that his listeners were solid for those nominees, and that Woodbridge would render a good account politically Nov. 2d. The hospitalities of Mr. Chas. A. Campbell's residence was tendered the visitors previous to their departure for home after adjournment, which was not made until after the formation of a Hancock & English Club, the heading for which was signed by 138 names, and Messrs. Wm. Edgar, D. P. Carpenter, Robert Finn and ——— Gardner appointed a Committee to draft a Constitution and By-laws to govern the Club. This is a glorious beginning for the Democratic workers of Woodbridge. Let the good work go on.

LOCAL POLITICS.

A handsome transparency has been put out in front of the rooms of the Young Men's Hancock & English Club on North Avenue.

Don't fail to hear the colored orator, who will speak in favor of Hancock & English this (Friday) evening at VanDeventer Hall.

The handsome portrait of Hancock, illuminated each evening from one of the windows of the headquarters of the Veterans, on Somerset street, attracts the attention of passers-by.

The Lincoln Guards, of this city, participated in the Republican demonstration and parade in New York, gotten up in honor of Gen. Grant, Monday evening last. They made a creditable appearance.

Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., delivered a stirring address before the Young Men's Hancock & English Club, in their rooms on North avenue, Thursday evening of last week. Last Wednesday evening he spoke at Bound Brook and Friday night will address a meeting at Bound Brook. Mr. Maxson is a popular campaign speaker.

Members of the Hancock Veteran Association, 75 strong, attired in their neat uniforms, attended the grand Democratic demonstration at Elizabeth, Thursday evening of last week, as did also the Boy's Club of the lower part of the city. The Veterans were honored by a position at the right of line. Their marching was commendable and elicited favorable comment from the spectators.

The Democratic Assembly Convention for the Third District, will be held at VanDeventer Hall, this city, on the 20th of this month, at which time a nominee will be selected, we trust, to wrest the office of Assemblyman from the hands of the Republicans, who have so long represented the voters of this District in the legislative halls at Trenton. The district can be carried by the Democrats if they but nominate the right man. His name is ROWLAND M. STOVER, of Plainfield.

The Hancock & English banner in front of the Democratic headquarters on Front Street, again swings to the breeze from its former altitude, thanks to the labors of Messrs. Shephard, Johnson & Godown, of North Plainfield, who, on Monday, placed strong and proper chains under the cable on top of Berry's building. The name of our next Congressman from the Third District, Hon. Miles Ross, now appears on the banner. A space is left on one end for the name of the candidate for Assembly honor, which will also be placed on the banner after he shall have been nominated on the 20th inst.

The two Republican Campaign Clubs of colored citizens of this city, don't seem to harmonize. Last Monday night on the occasion of their visit to New Market to participate in the "festivities" incidental to a Garfield banner raising, a dispute arose between the "John Dunn Hickory Guards" and the "Washington Lingerer Pioneer Guards," as to who should have the right of line in the march. Before the dispute was settled, several torches were smashed over the knotted members of the rival clubs, and bruises and cuts were the consequence. Peace was finally restored, but the "unbleached citizens" of the "Hickorys" wonder considerably at what is yet to come, for the aforementioned "Pioneers" when they again turn out. Don't you hold 'em!

FIRE MATTERS.

The new hose ordered by the Department, 2,000 feet, arrived on Monday last, and each Company received their apportionment. The boys feel relieved now that they have a quantity of good hose to rely on in case of fire.

Ex-Chief T. O. Doane was one of the judges on measurement of distance at the trial of steam fire engines in Newark, Saturday, Oct. 9th. The distance thrown by each engine, according to the judges' report, were as follows: No. 1, 247 feet; No. 2, 241 feet; No. 10, 243 feet and 2 inches; No. 4, 237 feet; No. 7, 176 feet, 3 inches.

The fine residence of Mr. Maltby, on Plainfield avenue, narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Sunday morning last, in consequence of the beams beneath a grate catching from a fire built from it. Prompt application of water from buckets extinguished the flames without an alarm being given.

There was an alarm of fire raised about seven o'clock last Saturday morning, which brought out that portion of the fire apparatus which is not off duty, in consequence of being overhauled preparatory to the parade. Their services were not needed, however, as the fire, a slight one, caused by the beams beneath a hearth, or grate, in which a fire had just been built, taking fire in the house occupied by a Mr. Lancaster on East Seventh street, was extinguished with a few pailsful of water. "Warren" No. 3 engine indulged in a wash, however, on the fire-well opposite the Crescent avenue church.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The District Primary for the election of Delegates to the County and Assembly Democratic Conventions at Somerville, on yesterday, the 14th inst., was held at Dunlap's Hotel, Saturday afternoon last. The importance of the coming election called out a large attendance. Mr. John Vetterlein was chosen Chairman and David Carney, Secretary. The delegates selected to the County Convention were, Messrs. E. Connover, Geo. Denzler, John Bodine, David J. Carney and Stephen O. Horton, with power to fill vacancies.—The Assembly Convention delegates were, Messrs. Adam Fritz, John Vetterlein, Augustus Mobus, Moses H. French and John Woodland. The best of feeling and friendship pervaded the assemblage, and all were united as one in their desire to place in nomination the best and strongest candidates.

The Republican primary called for the selection of delegates to attend the County and Assembly Conventions at Somerville on the 16th inst., was held on Tuesday afternoon last at the party headquarters on Somerset street. Mr. Henry V. Condict occupied the chair and Mr. Isaac Brokaw acted as Secretary. The delegates elected were as follows: To County Convention, Messrs. H. Coddington, J. V. Whitlock, M. W. Schenck, E. C. Van Norstrand and T. J. Young. To Assembly Convention, Messrs. Joseph Randolph, Isaac Brokaw, David B. Weaver, J. N. Schenck and W. C. Smith.

Next Wednesday evening, Oct. 20th, the regular meeting of the Hancock and English Club will be held at Blatz's Hall, and addresses will be delivered by Messrs. J. H. Staats, M. L. Trimmer and others.

The Democratic County Convention of Somerset County was held at Somerville, yesterday (Thursday). James M. Thompson of Bound Brook was nominated for Sheriff and Matt. Vandeveer, (present incumbent) for County Clerk (by acclamation). John Bodine, Esq., of North Plainfield, was appointed member of the County Executive Committee. The First Assembly District Convention was held at the same place the same day, and Wm. Schomp, Esq., of Bedminster Township, was nominated for member of Assembly.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

A grand concert will be given at the Baptist Church, in this village, Friday evening, Oct. 15th, commencing at 7:45 o'clock, the proceeds to be devoted to the fund for beautifying the Burial Grounds attached to the church. Eminent artists will be present on the occasion to participate in the exercises. The object is a laudable one and the entertainment will be a grand one. Let all attend.

There is talk of a pigeon shooting match shortly, near Brittin's Hotel.

Fanwood Township will give a Democratic majority, Nov. 2d.

The Young Men's Hancock & English Club are daily adding converts to their ranks from among the Greenback element.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Permit me through the columns of your paper, in behalf of the suffering community, to refer to the inestimable benefits I have received at the hands of Dr. J. T. Fritts of this city. I had been for more than fifteen years a constant sufferer from Hemorrhoids, or piles, and had been repeatedly told by eminent physicians that my only relief was in their removal by the knife, ligature or caustic, and that great danger attended either operation. Being of a weak constitution I feared to take such chances and suffered untold tortures until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Fritts, by whose treatment I have been cured in a safe and painless manner, without losing a day or hour from duty. I know there are hundreds, yes, thousands, that suffer as I did and even worse, who would be glad to be cured but for the dread of the old fashioned dangerous and painful surgical operations. I therefore make this public statement for their benefit solely upon my own responsibility and without the Doctor's knowledge, and gladly say to all who are afflicted, go and be cured.

Respectfully yours in the interest of suffering humanity,
GEORGE GRIGGS,
Veterinary Surgeon,
48 Pearl Street, North Plainfield, N. J.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN OYSTER STORY.

I never found anything but once here in excess of my expectations, or even approaching them, and that was the New York oysters. I had then just come from California, where oysters are very small and unimportant, not to say insignificant, and I had often eat a hundred three at a time, and had always felt that I could eat more if I had them. So, when I arrived at the Metropolitan hotel I ordered my dinner to be served in my room, and told the waiter to bring with my dinner a strong cup of coffee and a hundred raw oysters. He looked at me a moment, and then said:

"Did I understand you to say a hundred oysters?"

"Yes," I answered; "raw, on the half shell, with vinegar; no lemons; and as soon as you can, for I am very hungry."

"Ahem! Miss did you want a hundred?"

"Yes, I do. What are you waiting for? Must I pay for them in advance? I want nice large ones."

"No, no, miss. All right you shall have them," and he went out. I continued my writing and forgot all about my dinner till he knocked and came in with my dinner on a tray, but no oysters.

"How is this?" said I. "There are no oysters."

"Dey's comin,' miss, dey's comin'," and the door opened and in filed three more sons of Afric's burning sands, each with a big tray of oysters on the half-shell. I was staggered, but only for a moment, for I saw the waiters were grinning, so I calmly directed them to place one tray on a chair, one on the wash-stand and one on the bed, and I said:

"They are very small, aren't they?"

"Oh, no, miss, de berry largest we've got."

"Very well," said I; "you can go. If I want any more I'll ring."

When they got out into the hall, one of them says to the other:

"Fore God, Jo, if she eats all dem oysters, she's a dead woman."

I did not feel hungry any longer. I drank my coffee, and looked at the oysters, every one of them as big as my hand, and they all seemed looking at me with their horrible white faces, and out of their diabolical eyes, until I could not have eaten one any more than I could have carved up a live baby. They leered at me, and seemed to dare me to attack them. Our California oysters are small, with no more individual character about them than grains of rice, but these detestable creatures were instinct with evil intentions, and I dared not swallow one for fear of the disturbance he might raise in my interior, so I set about getting rid of them, for I was never going to give up beaten before those waiters. I hung a dress over the key hole after I locked the door, and just outside my window found a tin water spout that had a small hole in it. I carefully enlarged it, and then slid every one of those beastly creatures down one by one—one hundred and two of them—they all the time eyeing me with that cold, pasty look of malignity. When the last one was out of sight I stopped trembling, and finished my dinner in peace, and then rang for the waiters. You should have seen their faces! One of the waiters asked me if I would have some more. May he never know the internal pangs he inflicted upon me; but I replied calmly:

"Not now; I think too many at once might be hurtful."—New York letter to Philadelphia Press.

HOW WELL POETRY IS PAID.

SOME OF THE BIG PRICES RECEIVED BY FAMOUS POETS FOR THEIR WORK.

It is related that a gentleman recently took to Mr. Bryant a copy of an early edition of his poems, with the request that the poet would put his autograph in it. He incidentally mentioned that he had paid $5 for it. "Why," said Mr. Bryant, "that's more than I got for the copyright." But "Templeton," writing to the Hartford Courant, notes several instances of better compensation to poets. He says Longfellow did not get $4,000 ($20 per line) for "The hanging of the crane." He got $1,000. It was originally offered to the Atlantic Monthly, and accepted, at a compensation of $250. Then Bonner made the author an offer of $1,000 for a poem of this length for the Ledger; the publishers of the Atlantic, appreciating the circumstances, released it to the author. He received $300 in addition for the use of it for public reading purposes before it appeared in print. The Cornhill Magazine's compensation for Tennyson's "Tithonus" was $7.50 per line, and the Nineteenth Century paid him $12.50 per line for "The Revenge." Some of the best of Longfellow's earlier poems were sold to Graham's Magazine for small sums. Except the Knickerbocker, which did not pay much, and for which Longfellow did not write, there were then no other periodicals that paid for poetry. The Boston Miscellany, which Lowell edited, had the disposition to do this but it did not live long, and had little means while in existence. From fifty to a hundred dollars used to be paid men of established reputation for poems for anniversary occasions, when societies had the means. Dr. Holmes' longest poem, "Urania—a Rhymed Lesson," was given before the Mercantile Library Association of Boston. He was at first not inclined to write it, but was startled by the magnificent offer of $200, and felt that he could not afford to neglect such an opportunity. It occupied nearly an hour in its delivery. Longfellow and Whittier have realized considerable sums from their poems, in book form, making probably more than do their publishers. Longfellow's most profitable book was "Hiawatha," which a controversy between publisher and critics gave an extraordinary sale on its first appearance. Whittier's "Snow-Bound" also sold largely, as did Longfellow's "The Hanging of the Crane," especially in a holiday edition. Tennyson received a very handsome sum from his Boston publishers for his "Enoch Arden," and his books sell best of all in America, while it is said that Longfellow's have the largest popularity in England. The sale of Holmes' poems is considerably larger than that of Lowell's but falls below the sales of Longfellow's and Whittier's.

A very small needle, if gently placed on the surface of water, will float. If very small boys would do likewise, they would save their parents many funeral expenses.

A Monmouth correspondent wants to know, "Can a woman ride a bicycle?" Can she? Son, you ask questions like a man who is not married. When you learn of anything a woman can't do when she makes up her mind that she will do it, let us know. "How old, or rather young are you?"

GIVE THE BOYS TOOLS.

Almost all boys are naturally mechanics. The constructive and imitative faculties are developed, in part, at a very early age. All boys are not capable of being developed into good, practical, working mechanics, but most of them show their bent that way. There are few cases in which the boy has no competent idea of the production of a fabricated result from inorganic material, but such cases are rare. Given the proper encouragement and the means, and many boys whose mechanical aptness is allowed to run to waste, or is diverted from its natural course, would become good workmen, useful, producing members of the industrial community. The mechanical boy ought to have a shop of his own. Let it be the attic, or an unused room, or a place in the barn or woodshed. Give him a place and tools. Let him have a good pocket-knife, gimlets, chisels, gouges, planes, cutting nippers, saws, a foot rule and material to work. Let the boy have a chance. If he is a mechanic it will come out, and he will do himself credit. If he fails, he is to follow some calling that does not demand mechanical skill.

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption,

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no patched hodge-podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title-word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, adjusted to the addition of vegetable ingredients of newly discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, DR. HOLMAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and splendidly augmented its active curative power.

This great improvement gives HOLMAN'S PAD (with its Adjuvants) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent, and unyielding forms of Chronic Diseases of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

HOLMAN'S PADS have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poisons of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fevers to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhœa, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dumpish Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious-Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of HOLMAN'S PADS has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

FOR SALE BY ALL FIRST-CLASS DRUGGISTS, Or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

CHILDREN'S SHOES

TO WEAR AS LONG AS THE METAL,

Which was introduced by them, and by which the above amount has been saved to parents annually. This Black Tip will save still more, as besides being worn on the coarser grades it is worn on fine and costly shoes where the Metal Tip on account of its looks would not be used.

They all have our Trade Mark A. S. T. Co. stamped on front of Tip.

Parents should ASK FOR SHOES with this BEAUTIFUL BLACK TIP on them when purchasing for their children.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolutions proposing amendments to the Constitution of this State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in [illegible] newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said notices to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

Attest: GEORGE WURTS, Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS O. COOPER, Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION 1., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year," after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and every second year thereafter."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation, or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be into two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

POETRY.

LET THE PEOPLE LOOK TO THEMSELVES.

'Tis not by laws alone that we are free,
And written statutes play but minor parts
In shaping that which is or is to be,
Unless the laws are written in the hearts
Of those who fill our homes and make our marts.
A [illegible] and unhealthful growth we see,
And all decrees in time must pass or fade,
But such as by free will are freely made.

Our constitutions only check the few,
Building a fence about the people's rights,
Telling our rulers what they must not do,
Protecting us from party wrongs and spites,
And hindering ambition's reckless flights.
Thus will they help us while our hearts are true,
Not in producing lengthy lists of laws,
But barring those that hurt the people's cause.

Though not by laws alone are men made free,
Yet if the souls of freedom's fire are dead,
And we forget the face of liberty,
With all the [illegible] of the [illegible] dead—
Then of the public heart the [illegible] is sped.
Then statutes forge the chains of slavery,
Then are our constitutions set aside,
And hand and foot the nation's strength is tied.

Thus must the general heart be true and pure,
The general conscience clear of weighty blame,
If now the great republic may secure
Its freedom from the taint of fraud and shame,
Regaining fully its once splendid fame.
For truth and justice only shall endure,
And still the law of Christian and of Turk
Will show the maker's good or evil work.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE TRIALS OF A SCHOOL MISTRESS.

When "inhabitants of and legal voters of" school district number one of the town of Westcastle, in the State of Massachusetts, chose Deacon Samuel Carter and Ross Wallace directors, they rather congratulated themselves on having made the best possible choice, for all parties had been suited. Deacon Carter was an old, and Mr. Wallace a young man. The venerable deacon was a married man who rejoiced in the large family of sons and daughters that gathered around his table. Mr. Wallace was unmarried, and, to tell the truth, rather tyrannized over by a somewhat vixenish housekeeper. He was, however, something more than bashful, he was actually afraid of the girls, and never went into society, and, it was said, always left the church before the benediction, so as to get rid of the ordeal of having to bow, perhaps even to speak to a score of what he termed "giggling girls."

The principal duty of a school director is to select the teacher, and Mr. Wallace anticipated little trouble on that score as Deacon Carter had been one of the directors for many years, and was a man always willing to take the responsibility.

"Ross," observed the deacon to his young associate in official matters as they met in the store one morning, "I'll call around this evening and see you about the district. That is unless you had rather come over to my house and spend a social hour. Mrs. Carter and the girls would make you welcome, I have no doubt," and the deacon smiled [illegible] of good-looking daughters [illegible] do and moral young man, desirable in every way as a model son-in-law.

"Oh, call over and see me," said Wallace. "It would be a great deal more convenient for me."

"All right," replied the deacon, "only you must be a little more neighborly than you have been," he added with another benevolent smile, and the two parted, the deacon to return home to hasten and superintend the preparations that were being made for a visit of at least four weeks that he was about to make to a brother who resided in Central New York, and the unsuspecting Ross to return home to eat a "picked up dinner" and listen to the complaints of the housekeeper.

"Mr. Wallace, have you got my starch?" demanded the housekeeper, a spinster of fifty winters; there had evidently been no summers in her life.

"Miss Hart, I must—I, that is," stammered Ross.

"That is, you've forgotten it again," snapped the spinster.

"I'm afraid I have, ma'am," replied Ross dolefully.

"Which the same being the case you won't get your shirt front done up for Sunday as I can see," said the housekeeper with a look of ill-concealed triumph.

Ross winced, for like many other bashful men he was particular in regard to his personal appearance, and the meal proceeded in silence until the spinster broke out afresh.

"Mr. Wallace, I calculated that it wouldn't be convenient to let me have Len an hour or two to-morrow, would it?"

Len was Mr. Wallace's right hand man in all farming operations, and he carried on farming on quite an extensive scale.

"No; that is, not very—"

"Then I calculate you will have to drive down to the depot and take up my nieces yourself. They'll come up on the ten o'clock train in the forenoon and leave at eight o'clock in the evening," said the housekeeper.

"Drive down yourself," suggested Mr. Wallace, "the drive will do you good."

"Ross Wallace, I do believe you would like to have me killed. Me drive one of them git-up-and-git horses of yours, as Len calls them, though I don't know what he means by the slang."

"I'll let Len go, I guess," observed Mr. Wallace, as he rose from his seat.

"That woman will be the death of me yet," said the farmer to himself as he made his way to the back lot where his men were at work. "Well, I may as well go down to Boston to-morrow as to go down next week for the matter of that, I suppose."

"Me and the girls will have the day to ourselves," chuckled the ancient, as her employer left the house, and she heard the door slam after him. "I'll bet five dollars that he'll be off for somewhere bright and early to-morrow morning."

Evening came, and with it came also the deacon.

"Ross," observed the pillar of the church, "you'll have to attend to getting the teacher."

"What did you say, deacon?" inquired the horrified Ross.

"My brother John is sick, pretty low in fact, and I haven't seen him now for going on twenty years, and I thought it my duty to make him a visit. John ain't got no near connection but me, and maybe he'll come back and stop with me till he's called, that's what he hinted at in his letter, and he's well off, and so I'm going to New York to see him," replied the deacon.

"How long will you be gone?" asked Ross with a last gleam of hope.

"Well, John thought [illegible] and me might get his affairs righted in about a month."

"When does school commence, deacon?"

"The district voted to commence a week from next Monday."

"When do you go?" anxiously inquired Wallace.

"To-morrow," calmly replied the deacon. "The mistress will board at Mr. Eaves's. (He gets too much for it; three dollars a week is a big price, as it stands to reason that she won't eat as much, bein' a woman,) an' all you've got to do is to get the right kind of a girl," he added.

Wallace groaned.

"Has any one applied?" he asked.

"Well, not exactly applied," said the deacon cautiously. "There's the little Brown girl, Julia, she told her mamma to tell Mrs. Carter to tell me that she didn't know but what she might take the school if she didn't take some other, and Mary Liscomb called before the meeting was held to say that she might teach this summer, and again she might not."

"What shall I do?" said Ross despondingly.

"Well, you'd better harness up and ride around for a day or two and see if you can't pick up a good passable kind of a girl that wants to teach," replied the deacon as he rose to go.

Never in the whole course of his life had Ross Wallace been in such a fix. The idea of being put in such a position almost drove him mad. He, Ross Wallace, who had never even called upon one of the young ladies, even of his immediate neighborhood, now asked to ride around and hunt up a "passable kind of a girl, who might want to teach." The thought was maddening.

Ross went to Boston the next day.

The next day after he was uncommonly busy on the farm and found no time to attend to the hunting up of the required "passable girl," so much needed by school district No. 1 of the town of Westcastle. The evening found him in his room reading "Hallam's Middle Ages," when the housekeeper knocked at his door, and made the—to him—fearful announcement:

"A young lady in the sitting room waiting to see you, Mr. Wallace."

"Angels and ministers of grace defend us!" exclaimed Ross. "I wonder if she's the Brown girl, or the Mary Liscomb that the decon told me about."

Plainly there was nothing to do but to go down and meet his welcome visitor.

"If she's any ways fit to teach the school I'll engage her," thought Ross, as he entered the sitting room.

His visitor was not so imposing a one after all. It was not the Brown girl, and it was not Mary Liscomb; that much he decided on the first glance. A graceful little lady, small and slender, with a sweet face framed in masses of curls, black and shining. Hair that recalled to the mind of the school official a little curl that lay up stairs among his papers. A curl cut from the head of the mother who died before his remembrance. The thought sent the moisture to his eyes, and the little lady in black had won her suit before it was proffered.

"This is Mr. Wallace, the school director, I presume," she said breaking the silence that was getting embarrassing to both.

Mr. Wallace bowed.

"I am Kit Freeman, and I called to see about your school; I graduated at Vassar. I am out of work and my mother is dead, and I am all alone in the [illegible]"

"Poor little girl," thought Mr. Wallace, as he noticed the tears gather in her eyes and caught the trembling at once of her lips and voice, and if Miss Kit had lacked anything of having gained the place she sought, that would have secured it. Old Deacon Carter might not have thought her a "passable girl," but Mr. Ross Wallace did. Twenty-five will differ from sixty-five on such subjects.

A long—yes, actually long—conversation followed, and Miss Kit was not only engaged, but left the house feeling quite well acquainted with Mr. Wallace, and wondered how any one could call him "odd" saying to herself with just a little blush: "I'm sure he's just splendid; and and not odd at all, and I'm sure, too, that I shall have a splendid time teaching the school."

Poor, self-deceived Miss Kit. Foolish, confident Miss Kit, to expect a splendid time as the mistress of a country school. Deacon Carter, the author or almost any other old man, could have told her better, and yet to what purpose? Why not take pleasure in anticipation, while there is no harm and some little good is done.

"There's a snarl of uncommonly bad children in this district," observed the boarding mistress to Miss Kit. "A snarl of them, and if anything, one is worse than the other if possible. You must be firm, and let them know that you are master," she continued with a calm disregard of the sex of the party addressed.

At the school, she found that the task would be a hard one indeed. The school kept reasonably quiet while the teacher was taking names and assigning classes, but the trouble commenced in earnest then. A set of boys attended who reported themselves as "too big to go to a women's school," as the ring leader informed Miss Kit, and she quite agreed with him, and only wished that his parents would think so also. Miss Kit had no peace in her life, whatever hope she might have in her death, which she declared to be near, as the children were bound to kill her.

A worse school could hardly be imagined. Miss Kit had led in repeating the Lord's Prayer, a part of the regular school exercises, for a few days with bowed head and closed eyes, but she found that the assuming of the reverential attitude was the signal for raining a shower of paper balls on her devoted head and she concluded to watch as well as pray, and led that portion of the exercise with eyes wide open and head erect.

The children acted worse and worse as the days went by, and little Miss Kit, who tried the best she could to preserve order, was sorely perplexed. As Mrs. Deacon Carter expressed it, "them' critters at the school house act as they were possessed with witches," and Miss Kit felt that she would gladly have exchanged them for the whole company of servants of the "prince of the power of air;" that of old time so sorely afflicted the good people of the ancient town of Salem.

Such a state of affairs could not of course long escape the notice of the only remaining school director, and Mr. Wallace had frequent interviews with the perplexed teacher, and he found himself thinking of her in a way that he had never dreamed of thinking of a woman, yet I suspect he would have been astonished if anyone had suggested that he was in love. He was interested in Miss Kit—and in the school,—because it was his official duty to be. Only that and nothing more. It was his duty to attend school, and he discharged his duty in the most painstaking manner.

By the advice of the director Miss Kit took a firmer stand and [illegible] one or two pupils, but a rebellion is much more easily suppressed in the commencement than after some time has passed, as all history teaches, and as Miss Kit found it.

The school had been running two weeks.

Deacon Carter was expected home Monday night, and the parents predicted that he would at once bring order—which is heaven's first law—out of what pretty closely resembled chaos as far as law was concerned, by the discharge of the teacher, and hiring either the Brown girl, or Mary Liscomb, who it is said, would throw the rebels into instant and unconditional surrender.

Saturday evening Mr. Wallace called at the school house after the school had been dismissed. It had rained more or less all day and the roads were rather muddy.

"If Miss Kit is here I'll take her home," Mr. Wallace had thought as he drew up his horse in front of the temple of knowledge.

Miss Kit was there!

And Miss Kit was in tears.

And naturally Mr. Wallace inquired what fresh trouble had occured; inquired, but it is said, with a sad heart, for he could not disguise from himself the fact that Miss Kit must go.

"They are getting worse and worse," sobbed Miss Kit, "and to-day when I put Tom Dyer under the desk to punish him, he cut my rubbers to bits," and the little teacher held up the fragments of what once had been a dainty little rubber. "And now," she added, "they tell me the cross old Deacon Carter will make me leave, and where can I get another engagement?"

"I'll tell you," said Ross Wallace.

She looked up and read the love story that his eyes told, and her own black eyes fell again.

"Take me for a life long pupil. Be my wife," he said.

Miss Kit looked up shyly and whispered something that probably was not a refusal, as Mr. Wallace gave and received his first love kiss.

Deacon Carter returned home on Monday, and the Brown girl was at once installed as mistress of the district school, succeeded in keeping the term out in peace, and Miss Kit was installed as mistress of the home of Mr. Ross Wallace some few weeks later.

SELLING A FAST HORSE.

A STORY THAT IS WELL WORTH REPEATING.

It is said that William H. Vanderbilt is trying hard to buy St. Julien to match with his other notable horse, Maud S. A newspaper correspondent tells the following story in connection with Joe Harker, the owner of St. Julien:

Way back in the time when Pacific Mail was in its glory, Joe Harker was clerk in a broker's office on New street, New York. Even then he loved a trotter, and while on an excursion to Orange county, picked up for a small price a four-year-old colt that had wonderful speed. Not long after bringing him to New York, Harker drove out to the road house where Commodore Vanderbilt always stopped when out for a ride, and soon after his arrival the old man drove up and sat down for his afternoon smoke. When he had finished, and was ready to start for the city again, Harker had his colt brought out and jogged along down the road behind the Commodore, and when the old man's team was going by him. Once in front, he pulled up, and the Commodore was soon on even terms with him. The railroad king's eye had detected the ease with which the young man had passed him, and no sooner was he near him again than he asked whose horse that was.

"It's mine," said Harker.

"What is it?" asked the Commodore.

"Only a four-year-old that I bought up in Orange county."

"Is he for sale?"

"No."

"Now, young man, I want that horse, and if you will send him around to my stable I will buy him."

"Can't sell."

"Well," said the Commodore, getting rather interested, "isn't there any price you will put on the horse?"

"No."

"No way I can get him?"

"Yes; if you will give me a pointer on Pacific Mail I'll send the horse around."

The Commodore looked at the young man in admiration of his fine cheek. He was getting angry as well as interested, and said rather gruffly that he would pay a good price for the horse.

"That won't buy him," was Harker's rejoinder.

So they jogged along in silence all the way down town, the Commodore noting the easy gait of the colt, and feeling more and more that he must have him. Finally he told Harker to send him around, and the horse reached the stable that evening. The Commodore drove him single and double for a couple of weeks, and finally sent for Harker. The young man was promptly on hand at the appointed time.

"I want to pay you for that horse," said Vanderbilt, taking up a check-book.

"He can't be paid for in that way," was Harker's reply; "you know what I said."

Vanderbilt looked at him steadily for a moment, and then said: "When I want you I will send for you," and Harker left and went about his business.

It was nearly three months before he heard from Vanderbilt, but one day word came to him to call at the office. He went and found the old man there.

"Now," said the Commodore, "I suppose that if I told you anything forty men on Wall street would know it inside of an hour."

"No they wouldn't," replied Harker. "That isn't my way of doing business."

"Well, you buy 1,000 shares of Pacific Mail," and the Commodore resumed his writing.

Looking up in a few minutes he found Harker still sitting there.

"Why don't you go and attend to that? I told you to buy 1,000 shares, didn't I?"

"Yes," said Harker, "but you might as well have told me to buy the New York Central."

"Haven't you got any money?"

"No, sir."

"Then what were you driving such a fast horse for?"

"I got him cheap."

"Can't you get a friend to buy the stock for you?"

"Yes, I suppose I could get forty of them if I could prove that you told me to buy the stock; but that isn't my style."

This reply struck the Commodore forcibly, and when telling the story afterwards, he would allude to it with great emphasis. The result of the talk was that he gave an order to one of his brokers to buy 1,000 shares of Pacific Mail for Harker, and he (Vanderbilt) would be responsible for it. When there was a clear profit of $100,000 in the deal Vanderbilt told Harker to sell, which he lost no time in doing. The young man's independence so impressed the Commodore that he took Harker into his employ, gave him a desk in his private office, and it is doubtful if any man enjoyed Vanderbilt's confidence to the extent that Joe Harker did from that day until the Commodore died.

A decent boldness ever meets with friends.

An actor cannot make much headway in a flower pot.

Take away the self-conceited and there will be elbow room in the world.

The man who fails in business, but continues to live in luxury, is a thief.

Instruction ends in the schoolroom, but education ends only with life. A child is given to the universe to educate.

Real merit of any kind cannot long be concealed; it will be discovered, and nothing can depreciate it but a man's exhibiting it himself.

A fretful disposition takes the fragrance out of one's life and leaves only weeds where a cheerful disposition would cause flowers to bloom.

A man must have a definite end in view or his powers will fail; as do those of a magnet which is turned, for a long time, in a wrong direction.

Men are so fearful of wounding a woman's vanity that they rarely remember she may by some possibility possess a grain or two of common sense.

There are some men we love, though their characters are unfathomable; and the ancients made Friendship the daughter of Night and Erebus.

Man is not the creature of circumstances. Circumstances are the creatures of men. We are free agents, and man is more powerful than matter.

Nothing but merit can call forth great love, and nothing but perfection perfect. The sun's image must be full and perfect if we wish the spot it strikes on to take fire.

False men's words and deeds remind us of thunder and lightning on the stage, which, united in heaven, in the theatre are generated in opposite corners of the house, and by different operators.

The fear of dangerous opinions was never carried so far, as when not others merely, but Peter Ramus himself, was forbidden to read his own condemned works, for fear he should approve of their sentiments.

All greatness is relative. The microscopic insect that dwells on an orange-leaf thinks, perhaps, he is an inhabitant of the great and fertile earth; another one, nestled on the white blossom, fancies it inhabits the cold moon; while a third, that dwells on the fruit, fancies itself an inmate of the glorious sun.

A mere gossip ought not to wonder if we evince signs that we are tired of him, seeing that we are indebted for the honor of his visit solely to the circumstance of his being tired of himself. He sits at home till he has accumulated an intolerable load of ennui, and he sallies forth to distribute it among all his acquaintances.

The safe and general antidote against sorrow is general employment. It is commonly observed that among soldiers and seamen there is little grief through much kindness; they see their friends fall without any of that lamentation which is indulged in security and idleness from the care of themselves.

The first conviction that there is death in the house is, perhaps, the most awful moment of youth. When we are young we think that not only ourselves, but that all about us are immortal. Until the arrow has struck a victim round our own hearth, death is merely an unmeaning word; until then its casual mention has stamped no idea upon our brain. There are few, even among those least susceptible of thought and emotion, in whose hearts and minds the first death in the family does not act as a powerful revelation of the mysteries of life, and of their own being; there are few who, after such a catastrophe, do not look upon the world and the world's ways, at least for a time, with changed and tempered feelings.

THE REASONIN' POWERS.

A couple of old darkies met the other day and began to talk over matters and things.

"How is old Colonel Jones comin' on, what used to own you before de war? He is so old he must be gittin' to be childish and losin his reasonin' powers."

"Don't know nuffin' about him—hain't seed him since befoah last Christmas."

"Why, what's de matter?"

WORKINGMEN! ATTENTION!

We have before us a card printed in English and German which the Republicans are circulating as a campaign document. It is headed "Reasons why Workingmen should vote for Garfield and Arthur," and reads thus—

"The Democrats if successful in the present election, will, as promised by them, LARGELY REDUCE THE IMPORT DUTY on all kinds of FOREIGN GOODS, such as Woolen, Cotton and Silk Goods, Hosiery, Clothing, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, &c., and consequently immense quantities of these commodities will be imported. Workingmen engaged in manufacturing these goods all over the country, will either be THROWN OUT OF employment or will have to work for the VERY LOW WAGES paid in Europe, and their present favorable position will be reduced to THE LEVEL of European Workingmen, whilst the position of the latter, under a better demand for their products from this country NATURALLY WILL BE IMPROVED!

The weekly wages of Tailors in Europe are $4 to 7.

The weekly wages of Shoemakers in Europe are [illegible].

The weekly wages of Carpenters in Europe are [illegible].

The weekly wages of Cabinetmakers in Europe are $3 to 6.

The weekly wages of Porters and Truckmen in Europe are $3 to 4;

and other workmen in proportion. Now, if you want to work for THESE STARVATION WAGES vote for Hancock and English. On the other hand, the Republicans, if successful in the present election, WILL RETAIN THE PRESENT DUTY on foreign goods and WAGES NATURALLY WILL BE THE SAME as they are now. Therefore, if you want to be sure that your wages WILL REMAIN HIGH and that you will have STEADY WORK, vote for Garfield and Arthur."

That is the silliest thing we have yet seen in the way of political pettifoggery. It is a tissue of misrepresentations, which every man of common sense will at once detect and despise.

To charge the Democrats with ever promising or intending to "largely reduce the import duty on all kinds of foreign goods," is uttering what the authors of the card in question knew to be a lie cut out of the whole cloth.

Desperate indeed must be the fortunes of a party that is compelled to resort to such means to solicit votes.

The Democrats have had control of Congress for [illegible] refused to make any radical change in the tariff, although such action has been advocated by Republican Congressmen from the West.

The card also dilates on "lack of employment and low wages." The Republican managers had better not say much on that subject, because workingmen are intelligent and history is fresh. Under successive Republican Administrations, with the tariff just as it is, mechanics and laborers were reduced to starvation wages, and would have been compelled to work for seventy-five cents a day, when they could find employment, had not a Democratic Congress come in and stopped official and lobby extravagance and plunder.

The weekly wages of Tailors, &c. in "Europe" is a very indefinite statement and plainly bears the impress of deception. Why were not the different countries in Europe specified, and particular information given as to the wages paid in England?

Two of the most prominent Republican Senators from New England, who have made the tariff a study, declare that some modification in the present law is essential both for protection and revenue, and a Democratic Senator (Eaton, of Connecticut) has a project before Congress for the appointment of an impartial and practical Commission, to be composed of Manufacturers, Merchants, Artisans, Miners and Experts, whose duty it shall be to review the tariff question in all its details and report their judgment to Congress.

There is another very important fact worthy of mention. The tariff is not a Presidential matter. It attaches exclusively to the election of Congressional Representatives, and Miles Ross, the Democratic candidate in this District, is a thorough tariff man. Congressmen enact tariff laws, not Presidents.

The New York Sun well remarks:

> It is curious that the tariff question should have been elevated into a prominent question of the Presidential campaign. In itself nothing is more absurd. We have to raise so vast a sum by taxation that even if we were to commit the formation of the tariff to the most radical free traders, the duties they would have to levy would of necessity be extremely protective. What is called a free trade tariff must be an impossible thing in this country for fifty years to come, or even much longer. To pay the running expenses of the Government, to meet the interest on the public debt, and to extinguish the debt itself, must, with the best and wisest management of the finances, continue to settle the question squarely against the free trade theory far on toward the close of the twentieth century.

That is the whole truth in a nutshell.

As the Republican managers are endeavoring to make a deceptive tariff issue in New Jersey, let us refer to the recently published sentiments of Mr. GARFIELD, their candidate for President. We extract from the columns of a Republican journal as follows:

"I would have the duties so adjusted that every great American industry can fairly live and make fair profits, and yet so low that if our manufacturers attempted to put up prices unreasonably, the competition from abroad would come in and bring down prices to a fair rate."

Workingmen! That is the expressed opinion of Mr. Garfield himself, vouched for by his own party press, and if the same language had been uttered by General Hancock, every Republican orator and editor in the State, black, white and speckled, would have thundered in your ears a tirade of "free trade" abuse against the Democratic party and its distinguished nominee for President.

Now read what General Hancock says:

"GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N. Y., Oct. 23, 1880.

"MY DEAR GOVERNOR: I have received your letter of the 11th inst. In my letter of acceptance I expressed my full sympathy with our American industries. I thought I spoke plainly enough to satisfy our friends regarding my views.

"I am too sound an American to advocate any departure from the general features of a policy that has been largely instrumental in building up our industries and keeping Americans from the competition of the underpaid labor of Europe.

"[illegible]

"[illegible]

[illegible] ing in our present laws, and [illegible] office.

"I am very truly yours,
"WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

"Hon. Thos. F. Randolph, Morristown, N. J."

That is sound sense and all that need be said.

The idea of the Democratic party regarding a tariff is in keeping with its cardinal principle of equal and exact justice to all men and every interest. It would raise sufficient revenue to meet the expenses of Government and every debt obligation, and in levying imposts carefully guard against injuring a single industry, but prudently and practically protect all.

Democracy does not favor making nabobs of the few and serfs of the many. It seeks the prosperity of the humble equally with the great, and aims to benefit Tailors, Hatters, Shoemakers, Carpenters, and all other branches of labor, fully as much as princely Iron Masters and lordly Coal Monopolists.

For President,

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

A REVIEW.

The Republican leaders, in their mad struggle to retain governmental power, are resorting to every imaginable device corrupt politicians can invent and employ.

Mr. Hayes, the Electoral Commission President, with loud bugle blast, once issued an order in favor of Civil Service Reform, and against assessments for political purposes and the active participation of Government office-holders in partisan affairs.

That was very pretty on the surface, but, like the Dead sea apple, ashes to the taste, as the following reality will show:

Now Mr. Hayes, receiving $4,166.66 per month of the peoples' money, instead of earning it by official duty at Washington, is swinging around the Pacific slope; and most of his Cabinet, also on large pay, are stumping the country for the election of Mr. Arthur, the Republican candidate for Vice President, who was turned out of the Collectorship of New York by Hayes and Sherman for violating civil service reform; and two Ministers from the United States to foreign courts, likewise heavily salaried, abandon duty abroad and hasten home for the purpose of making speeches on behalf of Credit Mobilier-DeGolyer Garfield. Moreover, every poor clerk, and even the scrub-women in Government buildings, are unmercifully assessed and made to pay for the raising of electioneering funds to be used by the Republican National Committee to carry Ohio and Indiana.

There is a beautiful specimen of consistency and morality for you!

During the war, the Republicans contended stoutly that all the Southern States were in the Union, and when the war for a re-united country was over, they positively declared those same States to be out of the Union, and treated them with the oppression England lays upon starving Ireland and Russia lords—over subjugated Poland; and even now, fifteen years after hostilities fully ceased, they strive, for partisan effect, to keep alive the bitterness of sectional controversy.

Is it strange that the people of the South, both white and colored, are so solid in support of the Democratic party? Would not Jerseymen act likewise under similar circumstances?

The Republicans in New Jersey and Pennsylvania valiantly profess to favor a high protective tariff, but Westward they moderate their views in that particular very decidedly, while their candidate for President, Mr. Garfield, stands enrolled as a member of the Cobden Free Trade Club in England; and one of their prominent orators, Rev. Mr. Beecher, before a New York audience treats with scorn the doctrine of protection.

Vive humbug!

In New Jersey, Republican speakers and candidates avow heart-felt sympathy for workingmen and home manufactures, but they are careful not to tell the Potterymen of Trenton about that elaborate service of porcelain ordered by the present [illegible] of the White House from France at the cost of [illegible] [illegible] made just as well in this State; and neither do they utter a single word in condemnation of those grasping combinations whose special object it is to advance prices of the poor-man's food, fuel and light.

No indeed, not a word!

They condemn the South for alleged influencing of the colored vote in those States, when throughout the North they trample under foot the sacred choice of opinion, by striving to terrorize honest workingmen into voting contrary to conscientious right—seeking in fact to make slaves of white freemen.

They tell Northern dupes the Democrats intend to pay disloyal war claims, re-establish negro slavery, when they know as certainly as two and two make four that the charge is utterly devoid of truth, and besides, that the Constitution as amended, positively and forever forbids anything of the kind; and they know further, that General Hancock, as President of the United States will enforce law without fear, favor or affection.

They insultingly shout "rebel," "rebel," at honorable Southern citizens who are Democrats, yet gladly bestow the most lucrative and important offices upon such intense "Confederate Brigadiers" as Longstreet and Mosby, because they train with the Republican party for a purpose.

They talk vociferously about what they call the Garcelon fraud in Maine, but not a whisper of denunciation have they for the greatest swindle of the nineteenth century, perpetrated four years ago by Returning Boards in Louisiana and Florida and a Garfield Electoral Commission in Washington.

One of their leaders, Mr. Sherman, claims the exclusive credit of resuming specie payments on a certain day, when every impartial and intelligent American citizen well knows, that successive good grain crops at home and bad harvests abroad, coupled with a large cotton yield in the despised South, turned the balance of trade in favor of this country, which, with Democratic economy in Congress, alone made resumption possible.

We might go on and show up in many other particulars the artifice and inconsistency of the Garfield party, but enough has been given to convince every candid voter that his ballot should be cast for the representative of honor, honesty and patriotism—

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

HON. MILES ROSS.

Every day we hear encouraging reports tending toward the election of Hon. Miles Ross to again represent the people of the Third Congressional District in the Halls of Congress, by a flattering majority. And why should it not be so? Mr. Ross has ably represented the District for three successive terms, and given general satisfaction in all his actions. Now, when it is all important that a man well versed in matters pertaining to the duties of a Congressman should fill so important an office, it is no wonder that the voters of the Third District should desire the return of Mr. Ross, who by his careful legislation and persistent efforts, has done so much for the District. His success in procuring appropriations for the benefit of our harbors and rivers during his last administration should not be forgotten, neither the fact that it is of the utmost importance that he should again be returned to complete and carry out contemplated measures of benefit to the District which he has been so instrumental in getting under way. A new representative would have many difficulties to overcome before he would become conversant enough with the wants of the people of the District, or influence enough in Congress, to perfect any desired plan which he might have in view. Mr. Ross has that influence and knowledge of the wants of the District. Therefore he should [illegible] to represent us, and we [illegible] of the Democracy of the [illegible] do their duty on the [illegible] of November.

The Republicans are now turning their attention to Florida, which some of the managers are sanguine enough to imagine they can carry [illegible]

ROWLAND M. STOVER.

It would be useless for us to attempt to record our pleasure upon placing at the head of our editorial page to-day the name of Rowland M. Stover as the candidate of the Democracy of the 3rd District for the House of Assembly. It would be impossible for us to attempt to record within the confines of a column his merits as a politician, his strength as a candidate, or his excellence as a gentleman. Those who are favored with a personal acquaintance with Mr. Stover—be they Republican or Democrat—will unite with us in the high opinion years of intimacy have enabled us to form regarding his uprightness of principal and practice. Those who do not know him socially, will remember his gallant fight in the campaign of 1879, when he reduced Mr. Vernon's majority of the year before (881) to 141. Let every Democrat be at the polls on the 2d of next November and cast a ballot for this candidate; and they may be assured that with the many Republican votes that Mr. Stover is bound to receive, his election is certain.

SOMERSET COUNTY OFFICERS

The candidates put forward by the Democracy of Somerset County for the offices of County Clerk and Sheriff, are men fully deserving and worthy of the support of all. Mr. Matt. H. VanDerveer, was nominated for re-election by acclamation—the fact of there being no opposition to his selection, showing conclusively that he had not been found wanting in his duties during the past. As County Clerk for the coming term, he will continue to discharge the obligations of the office in the same effective and conscientious manner as heretofore.

Mr. James M. Thompson is undoubtedly the man most worthy of the office of Sheriff. Integrity of character and principal and kindness of disposition, admirably fits him for the position; while the exercise of the good judgment he possesses, will inaugurate an administration of care and prudence.

WILLIAM A. SCHOMP.

The delegates to the Second Assembly District Convention at Somerville, on Thursday last, followed the example of the Democracy throughout the State in nominating their strongest and best, Mr. William A. Schomp of Bedminster, the candidate nominated, is a son of the late Cornelius W. Schomp, who at one time represented the same District in the Legislature. All who know the gentleman nominated can heartily endorse the following testimony of the Somerset Messenger: "He is a man of ability, integrity and unflinching fidelity to his party and the cause of right. No dishonest vote will be cast by him in the legislature, the people will find him careful, prudent and faithful over the trusts confided to his charge."

A Challenge to Republicans.

With their usual enterprise, the Young Mens' Hancock and English Club have succeeded in securing for their meeting at Van Deventer Hall this (Friday) evening, Mr. Lawson N. Fuller of New York. This eloquent speaker is a life-long Republican, who has never voted the Democratic ticket, but who has come out with so many of his party during the present campaign in the cause of honest government. It is the desire of the Club and Mr. Fuller, that any and all who wish to ask questions relating to the tariff issue, or desire any information in relation to it, should attend the meeting, whereat the speaker will endeavor to answer such inquiries as may be put forward.

Assembly Primaries.

The Democratic Primary was held at their headquarters on Front street, on last Monday evening, for the purpose of choosing delegates to the Assembly Convention at VanDeventer Hall. The meeting was called to order by Mr. James E. Martine, and the following resolution, passed at a previous meeting, was read:

Resolved, That the President of the Association be, and he is hereby authorized and requested to appoint, at its adjourned meeting on Tuesday, October 19th, four persons to act as Judge, Inspectors and Clerk, respectively, for the [illegible] and count of votes at [illegible] Elections to be held during [illegible] Assembly Convention, and in November or December for candidates for City Offices, and that the filling of any vacancy that may occur at the time of holding either of such primary elections be conferred upon him.

In accordance with its provisions, the following were appointed officers of election: Jonas H. Platt, Judge; Freeman Pangborn and Louis Stover, Inspectors; L. F. Wadsworth, Clerk. The polls were kept open until all had registered and voted, with the following result: Nathan Harper, James E. Martine, Fred. Casper, J. A. Demarest, Karl Polak, P. Muldood, J. McCauley, J. Whalen, J. H. Force, S. Davis, John Simpson and G. Smith. The above delegates were given power to fill vacancies.

REPUBLICAN.

At the Republican Primary held at the Wigwam on Saturday evening last, the following were elected as delegates to attend the Assembly Convention to be held at the same place on the 23 inst. It seems by the "non-partisan" ticket—which includes representative men from many factions—that Mr. J. L. Miller is not so very sure of the nomination after all: J. VanWinkle, E. W. Runyon, L. E. Clark, R. J. Shaw, Albro Lyon, John Chandler, I. L. Miller, Geo. W. F. Randolph, Alex. B. Butts, Theo. Bounds, E. C. Mulford, John M. Whiton, Alex. Gilbert, J. Evarts Tracy, J. H. Ackerman.

Courage, Democrats!

The Democratic National Executive Committee met last Thursday afternoon at the committee rooms, No. 138 Fifth avenue. Among the members present were Messrs. Barnum, Scott, Smalley, Barnes, Hewitt, Jones and Wilson. Senator Randolph, of New Jersey, Governor Wiltz, of Louisiana, and Hon. Daniel Dougherty, of Pennsylvania, were also present in consultation with the committee. The state of the canvass was considered at great length, and the following address was adopted:

To the Democratic and Conservative Voters of the Country:

The election of President and Vice-President is now before you. State and local dissensions are eliminated form the issues of the day. The magnitude of a victory or a defeat can only be estimated by the forces and means employed in securing it.

By fraud and corruption the people of the country were defeated in their purpose in 1876, and the rightfully-elected President was kept from office.

With the combined capital of the Republican party, aided by repeated assessments upon an army of office-holders, with the power of the Federal Government represented by United States marshals at the polls, with intimidation, fraud, and a resort to every corrupt appliance known to Republican methods, concentrated in two States, our adversaries, have succeeded in procuring the probable return of their local candidates.

Can it be possible that in every State throughout this broad land the same methods can be brought to bear that were used by the Republican managers in Indiana and Ohio? Can the great States of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, California, Colorado, Nevada and New Hampshire be bought, intimidated, and defrauded? Even without the vote of Indiana, which we believe will be redeemed in November, with New York and New Jersey, and the States that are conceded to us, including Maine, the electing of our candidates is assured.

The Republican party have put in nomination for President and Vice-President two men who by the admission of their own party and press, are unworthy of your confidence and your suffrages. It is impossible that fifty millions of intelligent and patriotic people will consent to place themselves upon the humiliating level thus prepared for them by the Republican managers.

Fellow-citizens, the first day's repulse at Gettysburg, ended on the third, with Hancock in the front in a glorious victory. That victory secured us our Union. The question is not now the preservation of the Union, but of constitutional government. Hancock is now, as then, in the front; the repulse is now, as then, the omen of a victory which will secure to coming generations the inestimable blessings of civil liberty.

By order of the National Democratic Committee.

WILLIAM H. BARNUM,
Chairman.

The following dispatch was received last Thursday night from Mr. English:

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 14.

Hon. W. H. Barnum:

In this contest we have encountered the resources of the whole Republican party of the United States, and have only been temporarily defeated. In November we shall encounter only the Republican party of Indiana, without the machinery of United States deputy marshals, and confidently expect to carry the State.

W. H. ENGLISH.

Our Next Assemblyman Nominated.

The Third Assembly District Convention, for the purpose of nominating a candidate of the Democratic party for the House of Assembly, was held in Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday afternoon last. The meeting was called to order by Mayor Harper—chairman of the last convention.

Mr. John L. Crowell of Rahway, was the unanimous choice of the delegates for Chairman; and Messrs. E. B. Kelly of Summit, and J. A. Demarest of Plainfield, were elected Secretaries of the convention. Messrs. J. Teach Davis of Rahway, Edward G. Delaney of Summit and Fred. Casper of Plainfield were appointed a committee on credentials, and subsequently reported no contested seats and full delegations present.

Upon nominations being called for, Mr. Gilbert R. Lindsay of Rahway presented the name of Mr. Louis S. Hyer, and spoke at some length upon the merits of his candidate. Mr. L. F. Wadsworth of Plainfield nominated Rowland M. Stover, Esq., in an eloquent speech—touching upon the past campaign in the district, and the strength shown at that time by the gentleman whose name he placed before the convention.

No other nominations being made, the roll of towns and districts was called for their votes on the candidates. Rahway cast 12 for Hyer, and Clark, 1 for the same nominee. The votes of Plainfield 12, Westfield 4, Fanwood 5, Summit 3 and New Providence 1, were cast for Stover. Before the ballot could be announced by the Secretary, the leaders of the Rahway delegation moved that the nomination of Mr. Rowland M. Stover be made unanimous. Amidst great enthusiasm and continued applause, the motion was carried.

Messrs. Jas. E. Martine of Plainfield, Joseph Moffett of Westfield and G. R. Lindsay of Rahway were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Stover of his nomination. A recess was then taken, at the close of which Mr. Stover was introduced to the Convention by its Chairman, and spoke a few words of thanks.

"Gentlemen and friends, you have again greatly honored me by your choice. It means hard work, but with the assistance of you all I am confident that success will be achieved. We have no doubt of electing our National candidates, and our Governor and our Congressman; and in addition, if we labor properly and unceasingly to the end, our Legislature can also be redeemed."

Messrs. James E. Martine and Gilbert R. Lindsay followed with short addresses of confidence and cheer.

On motion Westfield was selected as the place of holding the next Convention. After giving three cheers for all the Democratic Candidates, the meeting adjourned.

Have You Read the Truth?

To our inquiring Republican friends we would again reply that we have read Monday's Sun. In addition we would state that we have also read Tuesday's Truth; and for fear that they have not, we republish the following extract from that fearless and independent journal.

"That editorial article, we happen to know, was written in Mr. Tilden's house at Greystone, on Sunday, by Mr. Dana, was dispatched to New York on Sunday afternoon by special messenger, and was the fruit of an after-dinner conversation between the "sage" of Greystone and the renegade, coward, and traitor of the Sun. Mr. Dana stayed all Sunday night at Mr. Tilden's house, and came down with him to New York, boarding the train at Yonkers Station, in the morning.

Vacant Places

In the dental ranks will never occur if you are particular with your teeth, and cleanse them every day with that famous tooth-wash, SOZODONT. From youth to old age it will keep the enamel spotless and unimpaired. The teeth of persons who use SOZODONT have a pearl-like whiteness, and the gums a roseate hue, while the breath is purified, and rendered sweet and fragrant. It is composed of rare antiseptic herbs and is entirely free from the objectionable and injurious ingredients of Tooth Pastes, &c.

HIGGINS' GERMAN LAUNDRY SOAP

Is perfectly pure, being made of carefully selected stock, and is therefore the cheapest. Ask your grocer for it, and see that you get only the genuine article. A trial will convince you of its merits. ap2yl.

Hancock Veterans

Meet at their Headquarters, Somerset street, every Wednesday evening. Regular drill Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 8 o'clock.

E. A. GREEN, President.
JULIAN SCOTT, Secretary.

INDIAN summer has come and gone.

DID we have any equinox this year?

AN elegant rainbow was observable in this city at sunrise on Friday morning last.

IN order to save further questioning, we would remark—we have heard from Indiana.

THE Central Railroad of New Jersey will make a change of time-table on Monday next.

THE taking of testimony in the Building Loan Asso. suits, has been re-commenced at the office of Messrs Suydam & Jackson.

THE lecture on Persia and the Orient at the Crescent avenue church, last Monday evening, was intensely interesting and largely attended.

A LARGE delegation of the various Republican Clubs of this city visited Elizabeth on Monday and Westfield on Wednesday evenings of this week.

DON'T forget the Amateur Dramatic Entertainment at Van Deventer Hall on Tuesday evening next, in aid of the Muhlenberg Hospital Building Fund.

MAY we be allowed to suggest to our weak-backed Democratic readers (if we have any) the fact that Presidents are elected in November and not in October.

THE Rev. Eugene C. Olney, of Grand Rapids, Mich., will occupy the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed Church next Sunday morning and evening. All are cordially invited.

WE would call the attention of the ladies to the fact that leap-year is fast expiring, and "it may be four years and it may be for never" before another opportunity is offered them.

THE Hancock Boys in Red, whose attractive appearance and fine marching calls forth just praise wherever they go, covered quite an extended line of march through our principal streets, on Tuesday evening last.

THE handsome floral contributions to the funeral of Mrs. L. A. Dunn, have been photographed by Mr. Geo. S. Hunt of this city. The artist has succeeded in reproducing with life-like effect, the broken column, cross and pillow, that the artistic ability of Mr. Wm. H. Brower, the florist, so tastefully constructed.

THE son of the proprietor of Guerrier's Hotel, near Scotch Plains, committed suicide last week by shooting himself with a pistol. The cause assigned is, that the boy's parents refused to countenance him in his pernicious habits. The victim, who was in his sixteenth year, died on Saturday from the effect of the self-inflicted wound.

THE sad fatality resulting in the death of a young lad named Johnnie Clark, residing on Cottage place in this city, will serve as a warning to parents, which is needful just at the present season. The boy's clothing caught fire from a heap of burning leaves with which he was playing; and his death occured on Saturday morning, in consequence of the severe burns about his bowels, that were caused.

THE advertisement of Messrs. Stoutenburg & Co., which appears in this issue, will call to mind the fact that the Fall and Winter styles of clothing are out and that the attractions presented in this line by that firm are unsurpassingly tempting. Their establishment in Newark is most conveniently situated for Plainfielders, being almost directly opposite the Broad street station of the Central railroad; and their stock and prices should be examined by all before purchasing elsewhere.

THE Annual Meeting of the Union County Bible Society will be held next Tuesday evening in the Chapel of the Crescent ave. Pres. Church. Those interested in the business of the Society will convene at 7 o'clock. At 7:45 the exercises of special moment to the public will begin, when an interesting paper on "William Tyndale and his English Bible" will be presented by Rev. Wm. S. Langford, rector of St. John's P. E. church Elizabeth, to be followed by an address by the Rev. B. Spellmeyer, pastor of St. James M. E. church of the same city.

WE have been in Lillenstern's Clothing establishment, and we were surprised at the large stock of goods he has on hand, in fact, it is the largest we have ever seen in this city, and the prices and goods are suitable for everybody. We looked at a $6 suit and we have never seen anything to equal it for the money, we also saw some very fine goods and the prices are as low as the lowest. There is no need of going out of town so long as Lillenstern is in town. We would advise our readers to give him a call, and look at his advertisement.

THE P. A. C. Gymnasium classes were opened on Saturday last, most auspiciously. Prof. Burnham took personal charge of their formation for the coming Winter, and the large number of members of our city's first-families who were present, witnessed the interest that will be taken in their success. The ladies' class will be favored with two lessons a week—one under the charge of a competent lady instructor, and the other (on Saturday afternoon) under Prof. Burnham's tuition. To the other classes, as formerly, will be devoted a large share of that gentleman's care and attention.

ON the evening of the 18th of November the Relief Association will hold its anniversary meeting in the Methodist church. The speaker for the evening will be Chas. L. Brace, who has been connected for twenty years with the Children's Aid Society in New York. It is hoped that the reputation of Mr. Brace and the interest felt in the Association will ensure a large audience. It is earnestly desired desired that all who are working in any department of this Society, as visitors or otherwise, will avail themselves of this opportunity to gain practical suggestions from one who has had so large experience in charitable work.

A THRIFTY young merchant of Caldwell, who was paying devoted attention to a Verona girl, dropped a twenty-dollar gold piece, which he had been showing her, on the floor. Both made a grab for it and the maiden securing possession of it playfully slipped it in one corner of her mouth to hide it, and then feeling around for it with her tongue found it had slipped down her throat! Here was a predicament. She felt like a tin savings bank, only she was sure the money wouldn't appear, no matter how hard she was shaken. But, seriously, the case is a sad one. The young lady is under the care of a physician who says that the gold will not corrode and therefore will probably not hurt her. He thinks it will become imbedded in an inner coating of the stomach.—Morristown Banner.

Common Council Proceedings.

Want of space prevents our insertion of the full report of last Monday evening's proceedings which we had in type. But little business of importance was transacted other than the following:

Mr. Whiton stated that the regular meeting of Council would occur on the eve of election, and would therefore move that Rule 22 be suspended, and when Council adjourns it adjourn to meet Monday evening November 8th, at the usual hour. Unanimously agreed to.

After the auditing of several bills, the Council adjourned.

Firemen's Day.

Since our last week's report of the late firemen's parade, we have been besieged by private citizens and business men who had generously decorated their residences and buildings, but were not favored with the special notice they more or less justly claim. If our friends will be reasonable they can easily recognize the fact that we find not the space to notice other than those who made their displays particularly mentionable by some original motto or style. As to business houses—all were so attractive that we specified none, and accorded public houses and hotels the same [illegible].

Mr. Geo. M. Angleman should be praised for the general good order of the streets; but who is to blame for the unfortunate change made in the line of march, is as yet undecided.

Mrs. George [illegible], who had the matter in charge, and the officers and members of Engine Co. No. 2, wish to sincerely thank the following for their kind contribution of valuables towards the lunch that was held in the Company's house, Thursday noon:

Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Theo. French, Mrs. F. M. French, Mrs. [illegible] Pope, Mrs. Henry McGee, Mrs. Lewis French, Mrs. Wm. Wright, Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. Jeremiah VanWinkle, Mrs. David Pope, Mrs. Abraham France, Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Mary [illegible], Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. Geo. Moore, and Mr. John Wilson.

Mr. John M. Powers still keeps to the front as the leading custom clothier of this city. His line of goods for Fall and Winter wear is unusually large and varied, and we feel assured that after once dealing with him, the customer will find that a better fit and more satisfactory prices cannot be obtained of any other merchant in his line.

Rally.

There will be a grand Democratic rally and mass meeting at Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday evening next, the 27th inst. Among the many prominent speakers who have been invited to address the gathering, there will be present Hon. Charles H. Winfield of Jersey City, S. Wright Holcombe Esq., of New York, Hon. John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, and Captain James M. Beaty. A cordial invitation is extended to all, of every party, to be present.

Failed to Substantiate.

On the morning of August 23d, the east-bound coal train No. 62 of the L. V. R. R., Henry Black engineer, encountered an obstruction opposite the New Market freight house. The engineer, under orders of the Company, was running rapidly ahead of the schedule time, so that the engine struck the obstacle, which proved to be a heavy agricultural machine, with such force as to completely demolish the locomotive's pilot and seriously damaging its cylinder. He asserts that had he been running his regular engine, No. 315, which is lighter than the one injured, he doubtless would have lost his life; as it was, the heavier engine did not leave the track, while the machine was ground to pieces.

The legislature has (wisely) attached a severe penalty to the commission of the (atrocious) crime here committed, irrespective of the result of collision, the extreme penalty being ten years at hard labor in State Prison and One Thousand Dollars fine; while in case of actual loss of life, the common law would hold the perpetrators guilty of murder.

For this crime, Charles Cook and Frederic Becker of this city were arrested and held to bail.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., was retained as counsel by the friends of both of the accused, and, in view of the strong, direct and circumstancial evidence against the parties, who asserted their innocence, was instructed to spare no labor nor expense in obtaining a thorough knowledge of the facts of the case in his preparation for the defence. Suspicion resting strongly on these parties, the L. V. R. R. detective, Capt. Chas. W. Dodd of this city, and the owner of the machine set out to "work up the case," and as counsel for the accused dryly remarked "the zeal displayed, the amount of time expended, the extent of territory canvassed, and the number of witnesses examined by these gentlemen and particularly by the L. V. R. R. detective in working up this case against the accused, found only one parallel within his knowledge—that of the search for Charlie Ross."

The counsel for the accused has been indefatigable in his labors, and under his skillful treatment of the numerous ascertained facts, the direct evidence is shown to be utterly false or worthless, while the formidable circumstancial evidence apparently conclusive of his clients' guilt is taken up circumstance by circumstance, and subjected to such critical analysis under the light of surrounding facts as to remove every shadow of suspicion.

These facts were explained to the accused at a recent consultation, at which a representative of this paper was present; so that when the official notification was received that no indictment had been found by the grand jury, the accused were rather disappointed than otherwise.

Democratic Mass-Meeting.

There was held at Van Deventer Hall, on Friday evening of last week, one of the largest and most enthusiastic political mass meetings of the present campaign. The affair was held under the management of the Young Men's Hancock and English Club of Plainfield; and the successful carrying out of the evening's entertainment showed how wide-awake and earnest is the organization in the object that induced its formation. The Hall was literally jammed with people—not a seat being empty, and the walls lined with numbers who stood up during the entire meeting. Among the assemblage was to be noticed many prominent Republicans, including a score or more of their colored constituents—the latter remaining throughout, with the exception of a few ladies.

The following officers were elected upon the opening of the meeting—President Jas. E. Martine; Vice Presidents—Albertus Swaim, Joseph G. Miller, Hugh M. Gilligan, James Clark, Carl Polak, Nathan Harper, Richard Merritt, Jeremiah Garretson, Wm. B Maxson, John Vetterlein, Adam Fritz, James O'Neil, Solomon Flagg, Henry Dabell, John H. Jackson, W. A. Bass Jr., Wm. Whelock, I. S. Roberts; Secretaries—Louis Stover, J. F. Demarest.

The chairman Mr. James E. Martine, in calling the meeting to order, expressed his pleasure at seeing so large a gathering—proving that the Democracy was alive and wide-awake. Col. Pintard of Monmouth County followed with a brief address, touching upon all the points and issues of the campaign in a way that showed his thorough information in every direction. He likened the Republican party—in its rejoicing over their October victories and its present feeling of assurance—to the man who sold a bear-skin before he went after the bear. In alluding to the clause of the Republican platform that pledged the party to a protective tariff, and the nominee at Chicago, "General" Garfield, who was notoriously a free trader and member of the Cobden Club—the speaker showed how the two could be assimilated. In the same way he said that oil and water were made to mix—by the addition of lye and the consequent formation of soft-soap. The speaker closed by appealing to all to remember how on the last day, after seeming repulses, General Winfield Scott Hancock won the battle of Gettysburg.

Mr. J. W. A. Shaw (the colored orator) was next introduced; and for over an hour held his audience interested listeners to one of the most able and effective addresses of the campaign. Frequent interruptions of fervent applause broke in upon the speaker during his remarks, showing the sincere sympathy of the gathering with the scathing review of the Republican party which was presented. "I stand before you gentlemen" he said, "not for the sake of the Democratic party—because a party who after meeting defeat so bravely for twenty years, can now present so brave a front, has no need of my assistance—but for the sake of the colored race of which I am one. I was a slave, but am now free through the instrumentality of Democratic arms as well as Republican arms. To no party does our race owe its freedom. We ourselves fought bravely for it; and even if the war of the Rebellion had not freed us, the feeling in our behalf all over the civilized world, would eventually have accomplished the same result. You must not expect me to address you upon protection, sectionalism, tariff and all the other "fancy" issues of the day. The Republican party have to go so far back to find ammunition that I cannot reply to them. I don't know the dimensions of the ark, nor the population of the earth at the time of the flood. But I can speak of my own race. The Republicans have formed themselves into a sort of a protective organization to look after the interests of the negro—Heaven help the negro in their hands! They take him to the top of a high peak and promise everything if he will vote to keep them in power. But they lie when they say it! They have got nothing to give, and every time the negro votes with the Republican party he leaves himself in the ditch. If you expect me to tell you how the Republicans have treated the colored race, you must make up your minds to stay all night. But be assured that when one of that race turns on the party, the party is in a bad way. New England contributes money to educate the negro, but they wouldn't have one of us within a hundred yards of them except as a menial. In Dixie—God bless her!—where the Democrats rule, we are allowed a fair chance with the whites; and there only will you find colored men marching shoulder to shoulder with their white brethren of the Democracy along the paths of life's progress. I have traveled every inch of this country, and no where, except in the South, have I found the colored man as an artisan, freeman and professional gentleman. I tell you of my race here present, that the Democratic party can get along without you but you cannot get along without the Democratic party."

At the close of this eloquent address, Mr. Martin L. Trimmer followed with one of his enlivening speeches. A subsequent interview between Mr. Shaw and some of the leaders of the Republican party—which took place at the former's hotel—we regret being unable to report in full. Those who listened to Mr. Shaw's address, will not be surprised to learn that he vanquished the representatives who followed him up, to the same effective manner and with the most commendable argument.

The Young Men's Hancock and English Club hold another meeting of the same sort at Van Deventer Hall on this (Friday) evening, which will be addressed by [illegible] W. Fuller Esq. of New York, Hon. James [illegible] of this city, and other prominent speakers.

Bad!

Mr. Joseph Fitzol(?), Republican Postmaster at New Brunswick, and Treasurer of the Union Loan Association of that city, is reported as a defaulter to the Loan Association in the sum of $25,000.

Among his bondsmen are Robert G. Miller, Republican City Collector, lately indicted for malfeasance in office, and Hart Moore recently sentenced to the State Prison for embezzlement.

Rationalism.

An example has been set by a firm of clothing manufacturers in this city, who employ a large number (hundreds) of hands, that might be followed in its justness by like corporations throughout the United States. They have issued orders to the effect that no political documents will be allowed circulation in their offices or work-rooms, no political discussions shall be entered into by employees of the establishment; and further advise their men to vote as their better judgment dictates without regard to the statements of interested and biased parties.

Blanks for Election Returns—A Good Law.

An important and much-needed act was passed by the last Legislature, which requires the Secretary of State to forward to the several county clerks of this State a copy of the election law and blanks to be used by the election boards in making their returns; and the county clerks are required to distribute these documents to the township clerks or clerks of election boards of their respective counties, thus securing uniform and accurate returns in legal form.

These documents have been forwarded from the Secretary of State's office to every county clerk in the State.

New Jersey Inventions.

List of patents granted by the United States to citizens of New Jersey, for the week ending Oct. 12th, 1880, furnished for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, from the Law and Patent Office of J. McC. PERKINS, 809 L street, (just north of Patent Office), Washington, D. C. Correspondence solicited.

W. C. Barr, Jersey City, valve gear for steam hammers; W. E. Davis, Jersey City, Telegraph relay and sounder; M. F. Derby, Jersey City, Preserving fruits and other articles; A. C. Frankel, Ass'r to J. Lagowitz, Newark, Trunk fastener; J. W. Lieb, Newark, Traveling bag; O. F. Moeller, Newark, Lantern; J. Trent, Greenville, Propelling vessels.

Week ending Oct. 19, 1880: N. W. Condict, Jersey City, Portable railway; R. M. Harrison, Newark, Ass'r to J. W. Brooks, Trustee, Boston, Mass., Heeling machine; C. B. Hayes and J. M. Hayes, Newark, Celluloid belt for wearing apparel; J. V. Hoffman, Raritan, Lathe tool; J. & C. Schmeider, Paterson, Treating pyroxyline with inflam. of plastic compounds; A. Seddin, Newark, Whip socket (reissue); H. Wagner, Elizabeth, Permutation padlock; H. Weinhagen, Hoboken, Thermometer tube.

Personalia.

Judge P. P. Good is expected home some time during next week.

Mr. Samuel Wilbur is spending his evenings at home, lately, teaching a little one to call him "papa."

Mr. Rowland M. Stover spoke at Westfield, last (Thursday) evening, on the issues of the campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Blair of this city, left on Thursday morning for a few weeks vacation with Baltimorean relations.

The Hon. Wm. H. Maxsen addressed a large and enthusiastic Democratic meeting at Westfield on Thursday evening of last week.

Mr. Clark, son-in-law of Mr. L. L. Compton, was the proud securer of a five-pound bass upon the occasion of a recent fishing expedition.

Gen. McMahon, formerly of this city, at present holding a lucrative position in the New York Custom House, was in Plainfield on Saturday last.

The death of Mr. Wm. Edw. Williamson, sexton of the Congregational church, occured on Tuesday last. The deceased left a wife and child, the former a daughter of Mr. Albro Lyon.

Mrs. W. McD. Coriell, our Councilman's wife, is lying very low at her place of residence. The alarming symptoms have been occasioned by a relapse from a late attack of typhoid fever.

The New York State Central Committee ordered 200 copies of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of Oct. 15th, containing Mr. Joseph W. Yates thorough and convincing review of the reasons why the people should vote the Democratic ticket.

Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of this city, left with Gov. McClellan on Tuesday for New York State, where the latter made a number of speeches on the issues of the campaign. The Governor delivered an address in Philadelphia last (Thursday) evening, the 21st.

The timing at the trotting of the Somerset County Farmer's and Manufacturer's Association's Annual Fair at Somerville on Oct. 6, 7 and 8, was done with two of the celebrated timers loaned for the occasion by their manufacturer, Mr. Auguste Saltzman of this city.

A letter from Mr. Joseph Ohl, formerly of this city and now at Morgan City, La., evidences that the gentleman is in his usual health and spirits. He announces that game is plenty, and looks forward to many expeditions against the lives and liberties of birds and fishes.

Our old friend, Uncle John Prentiss, is at present overflowing with happiness upon the visit to his family of a little bunch of sweetness and love. The stranger is a little girl, now just six weeks old, who has come to stay and add a ray of sunshine to its papa's and mamma's lives.

Messrs. A. Vanderbeek, M. M. Thorn, I. L. Manning, E. P. Thorn and W. L. Force left this city for Barnegat on Monday morning last. If they reached their destination in safety, kept their ammunition dry, and saw any game at all, it is probable they will return during the latter part of the week with "lots" of birds.

The Rev. Robert Lowry was enthusiastically welcomed home again on Wednesday evening of last week, by a grand reception given in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist Church. Besides the usual interesting addresses of welcome on behalf of the church and the Young People's Association, the gathering and choir rendered admirably several fine vocal selections, including an original chorus written for the occasion by Wm. F. Sherwin. The pastor responded feelingly and appropriately.

An exceedingly pleasant and sociable gathering assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Dingee at Evona, on Thursday evening last. The occasion that had called them together was the celebration of their hosts' tin-wedding, and the assortment of presents and congratulations that were showered upon the gentleman and his wife, were almost overwhelming. Friends from all over the country were present, to share in the generous entertainment provided and join in the expression of good will.

It is with sincere regret that we are called upon to announce the very serious and dangerous illness of Mrs. Fred MacDonald. The lady was taken sick at Baltimore, while in the beginning of a wedding tour, and on Sunday last her illness had assumed such alarming proportions that the attendance of three physicians for consultation and advice was deemed necessary. Mr. R. MacDonald of this city was telegraphed for on Monday, and immediately left for Baltimore. It is feared that the attack will develope into a serious case of typhoid fever.

Notwithstanding all their brag and bluster the Republicans show that they do not regard the result in Indiana as decisive. It merely gives them an excuse for making one more desperate rally before their final defeat.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

ELECTION NOTICE.

DIVISION OF NORTH PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP INTO ELECTION DISTRICTS.

All that portion of the Township of North Plainfield, which lies West and South of the centre of Somerset street, and the centre of road leading to Stiles' saw mill, commencing at the boundary line of the Township at Green Brook and ending at the boundary line on the said Stiles' road, shall be known as Election District No. 1. Polling place, Warren Engine House.

And all that portion of the Township which lies North and East of the centre of Somerset street and the road leading to Stiles' saw mill, commencing at the boundary line of the Township at Green Brook and ending at the boundary line on the said Stiles' road, shall be known as Election District No. 2. Polling place, No. [illegible] Somerset street, known as [illegible] building, corner Chatham street.

By order of the Town Committee,
WM. A. SCHOTT, Town Clerk.

Mr. Alex. Thorn, having secured a fine situation on Craig Place next to the father-in-law, Mr. Alfred [illegible], is erecting a handsome residence thereon.

Work has been commenced upon the [illegible] to be erected [illegible] corner of [illegible] and Park Place, by Mr. John Van Arsdale.

Gen. Kilpatrick is going to run for Congress in a district which always elects his side by over 2,000 majority. Republicans always get rid of their bores by having 'em killed off.—Detroit Free Press.

Arrangements are being perfected for a grand pyrotechnic display and mass-meeting, to take place in North Plainfield on the evening preceding the day of election—Monday, November 1st.

The Halsey Guards, an organization of about 100 men of Newark, will visit this place on Saturday next. Mr. Joseph Blatz will have charge of their entertainment at dinner, which will be given at his Hotel.

On next Thursday evening, a mass-meeting will be held under the management of the North Plainfield Hancock and English Club, on which occasion prominent speakers will again be present and address the people in the headquarters of the organization, at Blatz Hotel.

A very handsome picture, including the members of Warren Engine Co. No. 2, has been on exhibition for some days recently at Voorhees' drug store. The remarkable likenesses of the fire-laddies, and the universal good looks portrayed, have called forth many expressions of admiration.

The Town Committee selected at the meeting of Friday evening the 15th, the following as officers of the coming election. First District: Thos. Young, Judge; S. L. Horton and P. V. Weaver, Inspectors; L. E. Barkalow, Clerk. Second District: M. W. Schenck, Judge; J. W. Randolph and John T. Gese, Inspectors; John Vetterlein, Clerk. At the same meeting Mr. Wm. A. Schott, Town Clerk, presented his resignation, being unable on account of business to attend to the duties of the office. The resignation was accepted, and Mr. L. E. Barkalow was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The regular meeting of the Hancock and English Campaign Club, which took place on Wednesday evening last, was an occasion of more than usual interest. The announcement of prominent speakers who would address the meeting, called out a large number of those interested in the cause, and the extensive assembly hall connected with Blatz's Hotel was completely filled. Mr. John Bodine, President of the Club, called the meeting to order, and in the absence of the Secretary, his place was filled by Mr. A. L. Force. Mr. Wm. A. Schomp, candidate for assembly of the First District, was introduced, and delivered one of those stirring appeals for the support of the principals of the Democracy, that are so dear to the hearts of lovers of their country who believe in a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

Mr. John H. Stanis, a gentleman bound by the ties of friendship and relationship with our citizens, and a lawyer of prominence in New York city, followed. His address was of some length, but the interest it occasioned was intense throughout. We do not hesitate in claiming it to be one of the most eloquent and elegant campaign speeches of the day.

Captain McCassy of the Veteran Corps, and Dr. W. E. Mattison, also addressed the meeting, which afterwards adjourned to the parlors of the Hotel where all had an opportunity of personally making the acquaintance of their candidate, Mr. Schomp. This gentleman proved himself to be as pleasant and attractive a person socially, as his late address had shown him to be in intellect and education.

Usurpation.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

There was witnessed at the Republican Primary on Saturday night last—when delegates were elected to the Assembly Convention that is to be held in this city to morrow—the greatest usurpation that was ever witnessed at a Primary in this town.

John W. Murray, after calling the meeting to order, assumed the permanent chairmanship of the Primary; and L. E. Clark assumed the secretaryship.

It is presumed they elected themselves or usurped the offices, at all events they held forth, and the supposed self constituted chairman forthwith appointed tellers who were known to be in the interest of the so called great "reform" party of Plainfield.

It is the universal custom at Primaries, for the meeting to elect their chairman and secretary, but at this meeting, all usages, precedents and customs were ignored, for the purpose of carrying out the selfish designs of a few malicious men.

There was another matter particularly noticeable in regard to this Primary (?)

The Republican papers of Plainfield, in publishing the notices of the Primary, simply said there would be a meeting for the purpose of electing delegates to the Assembly Convention, and studiously avoided publishing the regular call of the county committee, which designates the number of representatives each district is entitled to. This evidently was done for the purpose of benefiting the ring ticket; the hope undoubtedly was that the opposition would not know how many delegates were to be elected, or whether they were to be elected at large or from districts, and would have to make up their ticket in the meeting, while the ring managers had their tickets printed and distributed; the opposition, however, found out in some way what the call was, and had a printed ticket also, which was defeated on the average by only 17 votes, with all the machinery-packed Primary, parlor meetings, house-to-house visitations, rail road and ferry-boat and office canvassing—against it.

If the Republican party of Plainfield expect to get the "large majority" they talk of, these parties in question must practice some of the virtues they claim to possess, and cease their bulldozing operations; they must remember that they cannot sell and deliver independent men.

One of the dodges of the Executive Committee is to call Primaries on Saturday nights, when they know that a large number of those who do not agree with the "slate" cannot be present, as a great many mechanics and other working men are compelled to spend Saturday evenings in doing their weekly marketing, and others are compelled to stay at their places of business, on Saturday nights. Fair play is a jewel and ought to be observed, especially by the great party of "equal rights."

A Republican Row in Westfield.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The Republican Primary to elect delegates to their Assembly Convention, was held on Tuesday evening in the Westfield Lyceum. Only ten hours notice of the meeting was given, and the usual steps were taken to pack and run the caucus smoothly in the most approved Philadelphia fashion. Mr. Grant, the Captain of the local "Petit's Battery," President of the "Garfield Club," etc. etc., is the right bower of Boss Miller, who hopes to get the Assembly nomination. Like his more distinguished namesake, Mr. Grant believes in the military method in politics. He nominated tellers without the formality of election, called for nominations for delegates, and closed the nominations without waiting for his own men to be seconded, or for the opposite party's men to be nominated, and rapidly set his tellers at work to count up the ballots. All this showed fear of the deep-rooted opposition to Boss Miller, which exists among the more respectable men of his own party who had no notice of the Primary, and were therefore out in comparatively small numbers. As it was, Prof. Hiester, a highly-respected member of his party in Westfield, received by the tellers' own count, four more votes than J. O. Clarke, the lowest ring candidate. None the less, Capt. Grant announced that the four ring candidates were elected, and that Prof. Hiester was not elected. Mr. Laidley rose, and making an indignant protest, announced that Prof. Hiester would seek his rights in the Convention, and that a full delegation would be chosen to go with him at a meeting when the whole party could be represented on a fair notice; and, after his protest, withdrew with his friends.

Such a meeting has already been called for Friday evening, by the men who voted for Prof. Hiester, and other Republicans who declined to attend Boss Miller's caucus. I am compelled to confess that the Democratic nominee for the Assembly, will get a good lift from the more respectable Republicans of Westfield, who do not desire to see Philadelphia methods of politics introduced into their town. Their Lyceum has been so disgraced by the lower Republican political element, that at the last town election, Constable Marsh was obliged to threaten the jeering with prosecution, for dispersing liquor to voters from the Lyceum rooms.

A [illegible] REPUBLICAN.

Facts Responsible for Chinese Cheap Labor.

For "The Constitutionalist."

[illegible]—Is it not about time that [illegible] (the vote on the [illegible] of 1876) of the Republican [illegible] Hon. George C. Ludlow, our candidate for Governor, should be picked up and [illegible] of the laborers of the workingmen, and mechanics and [illegible]!

They are using it against Mr. Ludlow and in favor of Mr. Potts, whose attitude is the workingman and mechanic of the State. Now, if they bring this up against Mr. Ludlow, what have they, as a party, or their candidate, to entitle them to the suffrage and support of the workingmen and mechanic on that score?

They must be prepared to offer something better, or different, in their past record, principles or candidates. Now, look at their record, and what do we find? I will tell you:

In the year 1876 the Republicans controlled the Legislature, and are responsible for all laws passed, and partially responsible if they pass them over the veto of a Democratic Governor, as they did the "act for the government and regulation of the State Prison."

Now, turn to the printed laws of 1876, page 245. There you will find the Republican party on record, and on record by the assistance of the immaculate Mr. Potts of Hunterdon county (not New York). The vote can be found recorded on page 743, bill No. 117, of the printed minutes of the Senate of 1876.

A few extracts from that law read as follows:

Inspectors of State Prison "shall have power to make general regulations to govern supervisor;" * * * "to employ and hire out the labor of the prisoners and the sale of articles manufactured therein;" * * "to cause such repairs to be made in such prison as may from time to time be necessary and proper for the carrying on the business thereof."

The supervisors shall have power "to contract for material and implements for any kind of labor." * * "He shall sell and dispose of all articles manufactured or prepared by the prisoners whose labor is not hired out." * * He may appoint, with the consent of the inspectors one or more agents at any place he may think proper, for the sale of articles manufactured in the prison, and allow them a reasonable commission.

There, workingmen and mechanics, is the record of your model defenders and the vote of their present candidate for Governor. He voted to put all kinds of implements in operation by which work has since been done in the State Prison.

My only object is, as I said, to explode this only shot at our respected candidate by throwing it back from whence it came, and point out to all concerned the inconsistency and unfairness of the Republicans in thus trying to gain votes by going back on the record of every man they had in the State Senate in 1876.

The following is the vote in the Senate, every Democrat voting "no:"

Atlantic—Madden, no; Bergen—Dayton, no; Burlington—Thorn, yes; Camden—Sewell, yes; Cape May—Leaming, yes; Cumberland—Willets, yes; Essex—Kirk, yes; Gloucester—Mathes, yes; Hudson—Abbett, no; Hunterdon—Potts, yes; Mercer—Blackwell, no; Middlesex—Jarrard, yes; Monmouth—Hendrickson, no; Morris—Hill, yes; Ocean—Schultze, yes; Passaic—Hopper, no; Salem—Plummer, yes; Somerset—Moore, no; Sussex—Smith, no; Union—Magie, yes; Warren—Silverthorne, no.

The bill passed the Assembly, 35 to 21.

Senate Committee on State Prison—Thorn, Burlington; Plummer, Salem; Hopper, Passaic.

House Committee on Revision of Laws—Youngblood, Morris; Howell, Essex; Griggs, Passaic; Bergen, Somerset; Lodge, Gloucester.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 20, 1880.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Sirs: Permit me to say a few words through your valuable paper in reference to some Republican trash, sent through the mails, in sealed envelopes, free of postage, (showing to what base uses the Post Office department has come to) to mechanics of this city, and I presume of all other cities, for this party is straining every nerve and using every means, both fair and foul.

The first thing from this (free of postage) envelope that met my eye, was a speech by Rev. John H. Vincent, D. D., entitled "Religion in Politics," delivered in the Republican Wigwam, this city, Sept. 30th.

When a Reverend gentleman of his ability and standing will step from his high calling to lend his succor to such a cause as is held and has been maintained by the most corrupt political party that ever existed in this or any other country, and say (among other things equally as absurd and untrue) of its former leader "that he is a man of spotless character," &c. Now this Reverend gentleman must know that he wasn't telling the whole truth. The next article that met my astonished gaze (at their impudence in sending such things) was a green card, on one side of which was printed in large type, the following mongrel lie: "Keep this in your mind and don't you forget it! Republican protection means plenty of work, with good wages, and empty poor-houses. Democratic free trade means closed workshops, starvation wages and crowded poor-houses."

On the reverse side of this card was the weekly wages paid mechanics of Europe and other foreign countries, which averaged from $4 to $8, asking mechanics if they want to work for these starvation wages, if so vote for Hancock & English; but if you want high wages and steady work vote for Garfield & Arthur. At the factories and shops this kind of "Taffy" is fed the men, but they don't all swallow it.

The other article (in this free of postage sealed envelope, and I question the legality of it) was addressed "to the workingmen's History of the Tariff laws." It comes about as near to the history of the Tariff laws and the truth as two colored men in California did to killing each other in a duel, they loaded their pistols and agreed to walk in opposite directions around the block and when they met to fire. But like this Tariff and the truth they will never meet, for they are travelling in an opposite direction.

But suffice it to say Messrs. Editors that in this enlightened part of the world where every mechanic takes one or two first-class daily papers, and has other means also of becoming posted on political and other important topics, we do not thank the Republican leaders here or elsewhere to send us their untruthful, trashy and nefarious documents and speeches.

Let the mechanics of this land unite and their power would be greater than a Caesar. And they will unite if they are not more justly treated and their rights more respected.

AT THE POST OFFICE.

INCIDENTS OF THE DELIVERY WINDOW—THE MYSTERIES OF THE MAIL-ROOM—PEOPLE WHO OVER-BURDEN THE MAILS.

"Is there any letter for me to-day?" inquires a low, soft voice at the delivery window.

"What name?" asks the cheerful voice inside.

"Mrs. Carrol Peters."

"No."

The little figure turns quickly away, tears quiver on the long eyelashes that veil the tenderest of blue eyes, a little hand clutches itself spasmodically, when the voice through the window calls:

"Did you say Mrs. or Miss?"

It is from him—there is no mistaking his writing. She can hardly resist the impulse to press that dear chirography to her lips, and she hurries to an obscure corner, where she devours every word, regardless of who stares at her; he is her own husband—let them stare!

The woman who faints is one of the mysterious characters with which all public places are supplied. She calls once in several months for a registered letter or package. She is arrayed in limp and shabby mourning, and she always selects the best chair in the Postmaster's room, and then faints dead away. The handsome deputy fans her with his hat, and the Postmaster sprinkles her with the official watering pot, and the ladies of the office crowd round in a sympathetic group, and whisper "poor thing!" And presently she comes too, and goes away, but where, no one knows. She has made her little sensation and disappears into another six month's obscurity.

Post office etiquette is absolute as the law of any social code. "Ladies do not come to the office to mail their letters or to receive them," says the letter man in blue, who paces the corridor, "except to the registry department; they come here to buy stamps sometimes. Although some innocent good women sometimes do, so it is not considered respectable for them to come in here evenings and crowd round the delivery window. There's queer goings on here sometimes, when women slip in, in the afternoon and look all around to see if there's anybody they know in sight, and then ask for a letter that is directed to some other name. There's lots of correspondence passes between young folks that their parents don't know anything about."

A few days ago a popular divine who preaches in one of our most fashionable churches, rushed into the Postmaster's room, overheated and exhausted, to ask that a letter mailed by an impostor to a gentleman in the city, should be stopped, as it contained a reference from him which had been given before the facts of the case were known. He requested the Postmaster to retain the letter and have the man arrested when he called for it, two important detective services, that official was utterly powerless to render. Every day wives call who are looking after the correspondence of their husbands, and husbands who imagine their wives are writing to, or receiving letters from, the man in the moon, or some other equally obscure individual.

Parents cannot even handle the letters addressed to their own children unless the children are under age and non-supporting.

"Do not give my letters to any one without a written order from me," is frequently heard from the lips of a miss of sixteen. Forged orders are frequently presented, but seldom honored. From one to ten blank letters are daily dropped in the office boxes, and it is a common thing for the clerks to find three-cent pieces and pennies, the letter and money being dropped together. Occasionally the two are united by a paper and string. A few days ago a woman rushed into the office, and presented a letter at the central window.

"Stamp it," she said in a vague whisper.

The obliging clerk offered the stamp and the woman was moving away.

"Three cents, if you please, ma'am."

"What for?"

"The stamp on that letter."

"Isn't this a government office?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And don't they furnish those things?" pointing to the stamp.

But the clerk was busy, and the little blue man took her in hand, and finally succeeded in getting the government dues.

It would break a mother's heart to see the lovely baby clothes, that never get beyond the Detroit Post Office. They are sent in whole wardrobes often, and in detached pieces, directed to friends in Canada or England, and subject to a heavy duty that is never paid. In the printed list they read:

Baby's shoes.
Baby's embroidered dress front.
Baby's shirt.
Knit shoes for baby.
Cradle spread.
Child's dress.
Baby's Afghan.
Two infant's knit sacks.
Infant's slippers.
Infant's wardrobe.
Baby's Christmas box.
Baby's silver whistle.

And so on, through a long catalogue of baby's property, which did not reach the King of No-Land, because of insufficient postage, custom duties unpaid, and other official reasons.

There is at present in the Detroit Post Office a large snake in a good state of preservation, which was sent all the way from Texas by mail. It nearly frightened the young lady who first opened the package into fits; horned frogs, toads, dried flowers, Southern moss, gipsy flower pots and oceans of nondescript fancy work flood the waste boxes. The Sunday papers which people in the city send to their friends frequently go no further than the receiving box for want of postage. Be sure and put a one-cent stamp on the wrapper of a paper when you mail it. Among a host of curious things to send by mail may be found stuffed birds, toothache drops, corn huskers, pulse-warmers, moccasins, sweet pomanders, "fascinators," dancing girls, magic pean whistle, cow milker, one green-faced linen hat rim, embroidered motto "No place like home," a regular toy steam engine, one egg boiler, one brown hair switch, etc. These uncalled for and unclaimed goods are forwarded to Washington every season and sold at auction. Last year 7,474 articles were thus disposed of. Stern, indeed, are the laws of postage, but quite obliging if the rates are fully paid and the regulations not over-stepped.—Detroit Free Press.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, October 7, 1880.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union met at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, on Thursday, October 7, 1880, at 2 o'clock p. m. Regular meeting. All the members present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting bills ordered paid), and after being corrected by changing the word two to four in the report on Grand street bridge, Rahway, were on motion approved.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From the Committee on Fourth street culvert, Elizabeth:

Your committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board to examine and report if this Board has power and can relieve the petitioners from overflow would respectfully

Report, That they visited the locality in question and found the intersection of Fourth and Pine streets to be the lowest point of the surrounding grounds, the water of which has always flowed to the northwest. When the Central Railroad was laid they must have built a culvert to accommodate the flow of this water collected south of their track. The city in establishing their grades, sewers, etc., have made the receptacle of this water one block to the south of the Central's track at the intersection of Fourth and Pine streets, conveying it thence northerly under the center of Fourth street one block to the pipe that is now placed under the Central's track by a sewer pipe 15 inches in diameter. Heavy rainfalls must necessarily overflow the whole of this neighborhood to its very great inconvenience and detriment, as the sewer is much too small for sudden emergencies. We find all the streets crossing of this ancient water-course either bridged or in good condition for public use. There, we take it, our jurisdiction ends. While sympathizing with the people of the vicinity, we can find no authority that would warrant any action on the part of this Board.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. W. CROWELL,
JAMES L. MILLER,
JOHN ISEMANN,
Committee.

ELIZABETH, October 7, 1880.

On motion of Freeholder Forsyth received and placed on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder O'Sullivan:

Whereas, We have learned with feelings of regret of the death of an ex-member of this Board, Patrick Gannon, of Elizabeth.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect this Board attend in a body the funeral of the late Patrick Gannon, which takes place on Friday, the 8th instant, at nine o'clock, a. m.

On motion of Freeholder Forsyth adopted.

By Freeholder Doty:

Resolved, That $200 be transferred from the court account to account of coroners and physicians.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph adopted.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Whereas the committee find that an additional culvert will be needed for the South avenue, Cranford, and that the wing walls and abutments will be required to be carried up one foot higher than was anticipated to make a satisfactory job; therefore,

Resolved, That an additional appropriation of $125 be made.

On motion of Freeholder Forsyth, adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Forsyth:

Resolved, That the Committee on Bridge street bridge, Elizabeth, be authorized when the bridge is completed satisfactory to the committee to audit the bill, and the County Collector be authorized to draw his warrant for the same.

Freeholder Randolph moved the resolution be adopted, which was carried by a unanimous vote.

PEARLS.

First understand, then argue.

Those who hope for no other life are dead even to this.

We are as liable to be corrupted by books as by companions.

The great misfortune of all is not to be able to bear misfortune.

Age that lessens the enjoyment of life, increases our desire of living.

Absence destroys trifling intimacies, but it invigorates strong ones.

To the blessed eternity itself there is no other handle than this instant.

Let us search ourselves in the first place, and afterwards the world.

It is right to be contented with what we have, never with what we are.

Employment is Nature's physician, and is essential to human happiness.

Show may be purchased, but happiness is always a home-made article.

Be severe to yourself and indulgent to others; you thus avoid all resentment.

If you propose to serve God at all, have the manliness to begin His service now.

Those beings only are fit for solitude who like nobody, and are liked by nobody.

No indulgence of passion destroys the spiritual nature so much as respectable selfishness.

Some people are so full of advice that it is impossible to take it all in. The only way is to use a large share for future use. There is nothing that will keep like advice.

A girl who is a raised to set herself ahead is [illegible] the [illegible] then in [illegible] weeks, and be able to understand signals from a leader in a [illegible] story window.

"Thus, I a. m.: 'My dear,'" said he, "shall right. I've been down public' in [illegible]. There's be men's rabbit' a [illegible] Take my [illegible]. What you [illegible] matter [illegible]."

Complete official returns from every town in Maine, counting every scrap of ballot for the candidates for whom it was intended, show that Plaisted has a plurality of 174 votes.

The Washington Star (Ind. Rep.) sees general signs of the disintegration of the Greenback party, and it believes that, except in Maine, "no Greenback ticket even remotely connected with Weaver will be voted on the 2d of next November."

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption.

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no perfumed budget-pudding of some other inventor's theme; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of vegetable ingredients of newly-discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, DR. HOLMAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

This great improvement gives HOLMAN'S PAD (with its Adjuncts) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Diseases of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

HOLMAN'S PADS have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poisons of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fevers to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhœa, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious-Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of HOLMAN'S PADS has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

FOR SALE BY ALL FIRST-CLASS DRUGGISTS, Or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

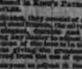
How to Correct and Improve



YOUR SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in King's Patent Combination Spectacles.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the center of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons having the Combination Spectacles have their eyes fitted by King's New System, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

This System is Copyrighted, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The King Spectacles are the first in merit over a million pair now being in daily use.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

PASSED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1880.

Resolved, (The House of Assembly concurring), That the concurrent resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State, providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, having been agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, be entered in the respective journals of the Houses with the ayes and noes taken thereon, and the same be referred to the Legislature next to be chosen in this State, and that publication for three months previous to making such choice shall be made in at least one newspaper in each county; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House cause said entries to be made in the journals of the respective Houses and cause publication to be made as aforesaid according to law and the requirements of the Constitution in that regard, under Article IX, "Amendments."

ATTEST: GEORGE WURTS,
Secretary of the Senate.

CUMMINGS O. COOPER,
Clerk of the House of Assembly.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THIS STATE.

RESOLVED, by the Senate, the General Assembly concurring, That the following amendments to the constitution of this state be agreed to:

ARTICLE IV., SECTION I., PARAGRAPH 3. Strike out the words "yearly and every year," after the word "November," insert the words "in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and every second year thereafter."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "three," and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION II., PARAGRAPH 2. Strike out the whole paragraph, which is in the following words:

"As soon as the senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the first year, of the second class at the expiration of the second year, and of the third class at the expiration of the third year, so that one class may be elected every year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The senate meeting in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, shall be divided as equally as may be into two classes; the seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year; if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION III., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."

ARTICLE IV., SECTION IV., PARAGRAPH 1. Strike out the word "annually," and insert in lieu thereof the word "biennially."
